SEPTIC FEVER OR CANARY PLAGUE, 7d. By E. H. Clarke, M.D. The only booklet published concerning this dread disease, which Dr. Clarke has given very special study.

THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD CANARY, 1½d. By J. H. Payne. Pronounced by all experts to be a most valuable pamphlet concerning the breeding of the variety; written by one of our leading judges.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

MEATING-OFF AND FEEDING SOFTBILLS, 6½d.—By John Frostick. No fancier of Insectivorous Birds who wishes to succeed in his hobby can afford to be without a copy. It also contains notes on Bird Trapping, Cages, etc.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.—By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. B. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

PET RABBITS, CAVIES, AND MICE, 1/1½.—By George Gardner. Full information on housing, feeding, breeding, exhibiting, and keeping for profit. A complete practical guide, with illustrations from photographs.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and illustrations from photographs. Another charming gift book.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and 12 words of description, 250 2/-, 500 2/6, carriage paid.

OUR CANARIES.

The two most absorbingly interesting, thoroughly practical, and magnificently illustrated books ever published for bird-keepers.

OUR CANARIES 6d MONTHLY

CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS 6d MONTHLY

"Cage Bird Hybrids"

(A SUPERB STANDARD WORK).

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House) and is being published in 8 monthly parts, at 6d. each. Magnificently Illustrated by that great bird artist, Mr. H. Norman.

PART 5.—A superb number is now on sale; ask for it at your Newsagents, price 6d. The two coloured plates are marvels of beauty and accuracy.

This is a standard work, written by an acknowledged expert, and prepared for publication by experts. It has been designed as an authoritative and carefully practical work, embodying in the simplest and most straightforward language all that there is to be known on the peculiarly difficult and scientific subject of Hybrid Breeding.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID—not a pretty group suitable for a child's picture-book, but a plate that shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present-day type and general characteristics of modern hybrids.

A PRACTICAL BOOK FOR PRACTICAL FANCIERS.

It will, we feel sure, be generally conceded that "Cage Birds" has produced in "CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS" a dignified book on a difficult subject—a standard work of the highest merit and a fitting monument of the hybrid breeder's art.

Ask for Part 5 "CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS," at all Bookstalls or Newsagents, or fill up and send us the attached Order Form and we will send you the part packed flat in cardboard, post free for 7d. (Postal Order).

Parts 1, 2, 3 and 4 can also be obtained on the same terms; or for 4/6 prepaid, we will take orders to supply the complete work—in parts as published. Send your order at once, direct to us, with remittance.

PART V. OF "CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS" NOW ON SALE.

"OUR CANARIES"

(THE BOOK WITH AN OBJECT)

Parts 1, 2, 3 & 4 are now on sale everywhere. Price 6d., or direct from us, carefully packed in stiff card for 7d., post free.

The work to be completed in sixteen parts, each containing 2 coloured and 2 art plates in addition to 24 pages of intensely interesting and thoroughly practical reading matter.

The Coloured and Art Plates have been executed with the greatest possible accuracy and care by that greatest of all Canary Artists Mr. H. Norman.

Each number replete with the fullest possible information on Modern Methods of Breeding Canaries for Exhibition, Pleasure and Profit.

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN, General Canary Expert to "Cage Birds," assisted by over 100 of our present-day Leading Breeders and Authorities.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION. If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first sixteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over sixteen. MINIMUM, 16 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Sixteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement booked for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesday, first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

My Self-Acting Net Traps

catch birds of every description without attention, price 1/6, larger size 2/, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are A1 for catchers. Read two, and beware of imitations that are not worth the carriage. "Sir,—Net trap to hand; it is honestly worth dozens of some nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I caught in other traps in two months."—George Matthews, 2, Lucas Street, Stockport. "Sir,—Trap arrived; it is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches."—J. Scragg, Old Brewery, Armitage Road, Rugeley. Entirely self-acting and self setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and rest without attention, 1s. 6d.; loose netting, strongest and finest obtainable, ½in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 5d. yard; ¾ mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d.; 10ft. deep, 4d. yard, post free; clap nets, ¾ or ½in. mesh netting, geared all round and sent complete for catching; write for prices before buying elsewhere: Morris, 112, Cape Hill, Birmingham.

HOW TO ARM NETS.

PARKER & WILDEN, Practical Net Manufacturers, SPRING HILL, BIRMINGHAM.

IT'S A PUZZLE

for anyone to select from among so many advertisements the most likely place from which to get the best value for money. Not only do I guarantee my goods to be correctly and accurately described, I send all on approval, at my risk, cash or CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, and if purchaser is not in every way satisfied, the goods have only to be returned and back comes the whole of his money; further than this, I publicly ask anyone to have anything they like on approval from me, test it side by side with any similar article from elsewhere, and if mine is not by far the best, smash it up, and I will refund every penny of their money. Clap nets, made from genuine ¾ in. mesh, 15 yards long, 12/-, 18 yards 5½ ft. deep, 4 ft. fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards, 5/-, 5 yards 6/-, 6 yards 7/-, 7 yards 8/-, 8 yards 9/-, 9 yards 10/-, 10 yards 11/- per pair, all guaranteed 5½ ft. deep, and fly 4 ft., fitted with stave poles, pegs, and lines complete, ready for immediate use: Lark nets, 1¼ in. mesh, 15 yards long, 12/-, 18 yards 15/-, 20 yards 17/-, 25 yards 21/-, all properly geared ready for use; bat-folding Sparrow nets, properly pocketed, fitted on 15 ft. bamboo poles, 5/6, ditto on 17 ft. poles, 6/-, ditto 19 ft. poles 6/6; loose netting, ¾ in. mesh, as used in above clap nets, 7 ft. deep 3d. yard, 9 ft. 4d. yard, 12 ft. deep 5d. yard, post free; Lark netting, 1¼ in. mesh, 10 ft. deep 4d. yard, post free; self-acting spring net traps, 24 ins. long, 1/- each; ditto 18 ins. long 9d. each; these net traps are by far the largest and most effective on the market, they are totally different to all others, and can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time and can be used with call bird inside, if desired. The only net trap used by Mr. Jeffries, the well-known Nightingale expert; single trap cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; double ditto, 1/- each, 8/6 dozen; treble ditto, 1/3 each, 12/- dozen; all have separate compartment for call bird; patent self setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, without any attention whatever, 1/6 each; original Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest made, stands all weathers, and guaranteed hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample 3d., all carriage paid; pull lines specially spun from real Italian hemp, without swerl or back twist, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free; brace swivels, 3 3d., 12 6d., post free; round or square topped call cages, all wire tops and wood bottoms, 4d. each, 3/- dozen; everything required by catchers kept in stock; send stamp for list, and hints on net making; kindly note the netting used in all my nets is knitted from 60's 3 ply thread, very fine but strong, specially for bird netting, and must not be confused with the thick American cotton netting so often sold as bird netting. All men employed by me are not only practical net makers, but experienced bird catchers as well, and so know exactly what is required for success in catching, and no nets sent out before being thoroughly tested. All the leading professional catchers throughout the world purchase their appliances from me, so if I can please them, surely I can please you. Mr. C. Cubley, the well-known Lincolnshire catcher, says "Your netting is as superior to other makers' netting as refined gold to copper." Thousands of testimonials have been received by me, and many of them published in CAGE BIRDS, testifying to the superior quality of my goods. All nets guaranteed to wear for 10 years. (See British Bird column for further advertisement.)

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL.

Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world, only 1/-; all the oldest and best judges acknowledge they are the best singing birds in the world; they make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest, they make champion catching birds, and for size they stand alone. Real English Peartree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, 2/- each; a few singing hard, 2/6; these are good catching birds. Splendid Goldfinch and cage, 3/-; will sing anywhere. Cock Linnets, sing indoors or out, with cage, 3/6; these are taught by the champion Linnet of the world. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. I am receiving testimonials every post; only honest dealing done with me, so send to your old friend: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Becket-st., Leeds.

EVERY BIRD SOLD

by me is sent on approval, at my risk, on receipt of cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, on the distinct understanding that unless birds prove perfectly satisfactory, you only have to return them, and back comes the whole of your money. No quibbling, or unmentioned conditions about my system, whether a man spends a penny or a pound, he gets the same straightforward treatment. I was the first, and for many years, the only advertiser to send all wild birds on approval throughout the year, and as my birds are exactly as described, am never afraid of dealing on CAGE BIRDS deposit system. I have splendid lot of genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches in perfect health and condition, at 1/6 each, 3 4/-, 6 7/-, 12 12/-, or £6 per gross; specially selected larger cocks for moulting for show or muling, and guaranteed now in song, 2/- each, 3 5/-, 6 9/-, 12 17/-; hen Goldfinches, 1 - each, 3 2/-, 12 7/-; young Bullfinches, 1/-, 1/6, and 2/- each; adult cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; adult hens, 1/- each; grand lot cock brown Linnets, every bird guaranteed red-breasted, 8d. each, 3 1/6, 6 2/6, 12 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for show, muling, or contest singing, 1/- each, 3 2/6, 6 4/-, 12 7/-; hen Linnets, 1/6 dozen, 3 dozen 3/-; cock Chaffinches, 8d. each, 3 1/6, 12 5/-; specially selected large cocks for exhibition, 1/- each; hen Chaffinches, 3 1/-, 6 1/6, 12 2/6; cock Greenfinches, 3 1/- 6 1/6; hen Greenfinches, 6 1/-; nestling cock Skylarks, 1/- each, 3 2/-, 6 3/6; few very steady, and in nice song, 1/6, 2/- and 2/6 each; guaranteed genuine hand-reared cock Skylarks, finger-tame, and in free song, 3/-, 4/- and 5 - each; two-year-old hand reared cock Song Thrush, over moult, and in song, 5/-; Redpolls, 6d. each, 3 1/3, 6 2/-, 12 3/6; young Canaries, in perfect health and condition, 2/6 couple, 12/- dozen; Linnet, Goldfinch, and Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 4 6 dozen; Lark cages, 6d. and 8d. each, 4/- and 5/6 dozen; round or square topped call cages, with all wire tops and wood bottoms, 4d. each, 3/- dozen; dealers supplied with every description of cages; send stamp for wholesale cage list. Please note, all birds are guaranteed properly netted in County of Worcester, by expert catchers employed solely by myself, and that all are guaranteed exactly as represented, and thoroughly on hand seed before being sent out. I have no connection with any other advertiser, nor do I buy from advertisers, so purchasers from me do not get birds that have been picked over by every "Tom," "Dick," and "Harry." I claim to be largest dealer in Worcestershire birds in the world, so if you want birds of real merit, send to the fountain head. See Appliance column for further advertisement.

UNDENIABLE BARGAINS

1910 NORWICH COCKS.—Singing, and will make champions, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; now, to prove this, I offer to give six months' approval with these birds—i.e., to refund money in full or exchange same for a cock on full song. All other birds usual approval terms, as follows: 3/9, 4/3, 4/6, and 5/6 upwards. Hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6 each. Pairs, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, all bearing my stamp as a guarantee of sex, and any bird proving not to be a cock bearing such stamp is exchanged, the lapse of time being no object. Hence, here is a security never offered by anyone else, and a safeguard against the now well-known "hen trick"—i.e., the tempting priced, so-called singing cocks, whether named Norwich, Hartz Rollers, or Yorkshires, it is all the same.

YORKSHIRES.—Cocks, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Pairs, 7/6, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6. Hens, 2/6, 3/6, 4/6. Travelling Cages, 3d. extra.

For other varieties, please send for Free Current Price List. All on approval any part of Great Britain.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at any time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every one to give every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

Club Reports.

WIGAN AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held at headquarters, Legs of Man Hotel, August 6th, Mr E. Ball in the chair. There was a good number of members, and several visitors, three new members being made. It was decided to send a representative to the Cage Bird Union meeting at Leicester, Mr. E. Ball being selected for that honour. A vigorous discussion took place as to some alleged borrowing and lending for cup competition; after hearing the explanation, which was deemed satisfactory to all present, the discussion was allowed to drop. A favourable reply was read from the British Roller Club to our application for patronage. Mr. Nuttall is down to give an address entitled "Bird—from egg to feathers"; all fanciers are invited to attend this lecture on September 3rd.—W. DYER, Assist. Sec.

ECCLES AND DISTRICT C.B.S

Our first smoking concert was held on August 15th, when about twenty members and friends attended at headquarters. A very enjoyable evening was spent. We had an able pianist in Mr. Shepley, who kept the company merry with his playing and singing; he also took part in a duet with his friend, Mr. E. Grilliths, which was much appreciated. Also Mr. Ainsworth's humorous songs and ditties were much to the liking of the company. At intervals we were kept well supplied with selections on the gramophone, kindly lent by our host, Mr. S. Sims. The evening was brought to a close by Mr. Ainsworth singing "Before it is too late." A vote of thanks was given to the chairman, Mr. Bentham and the artistes, and all agreed that the evening had been an enjoyable one, and hoped it was the first of many concerts on behalf of the Society.—H. W. JONES, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN LIZARD CLUB.

Meeting held at headquarters on August 20th. Mr. Haswell was voted chairman. The cup presented by Mr. P. Hunter, of Bombay, was on view. Of graceful design, its figured work, etc., excited the admiration of all, and created great enthusiasm among the members, many conjectures being made as to who would have the first honour of holding it. The members passed a most hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Hunter, whose magnificent generosity is unique, this being the third cup he has presented to the North of England. Coming from far off India, and from a total stranger to boot, and one who cannot possibly derive any benefits from his gift, this stamps Mr. Hunter as having the Fancy at heart. Correspondence, re patronage, from various societies, occupied our attention next, but it was decided to support Blaydon, who had a prior claim. Arrangement of classes was then considered, and it was decided that we run them as follows: 1, Clear cap, gold or silver; 2, broken cap, gold or silver. Mr. Reid proposed that we grant a silver medal for 3rd most points. Our prize list is now as follows: 1, Cup and gold medal, 1st most points; 2, easy chair, 2nd most points; 3rd silver medal, 3rd most points. Mr. Keenlyside's gift of members' cards and rule books was then handed round. The members passed a hearty vote of thanks to him for this. This concluded one of the most pleasant meetings, so far, and one which augured well for the future of the Lizard.—GEO. DAVINSON, Sec.

ARDWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A Lecture on the Norwich Plainhead.

Meeting held August 16th at the Onward Hall, there being a good number of members present. Mr. J. Coulson gave a lecture on the Norwich and its management. This was listened to with much interest, knowing we had the pleasure of hearing one who had been successful with this particular variety, and one who had made a name for himself. First of all, he dealt with the room. He very much preferred one facing south and over the living room, to be well ventilated and free from draughts, which was very essential to the keeping of birds in good health. As for cages, he liked, he said, the single-breeder, 18 inches long, 15 high, 10 wide, enamelled inside, painted outside, and kept on a rack, so that one could take out any particular cage one wished without fear of disturbing the other birds. He used pine sawdust for the bottoms of cages, with a supply of grit. In the selection of birds he recommended that we should put ourselves in the hands of some well-known fancier, one who bred his own winners, and ask him to fit us up with a good pair or two, telling him what price we were prepared to pay. His idea of a Norwich was a bird whose head was round, wide at entrance, and rising nicely from a short beak; it should have a bold eye, prominent cheeks, and be free from browing; the neck should be short and thick, the chest deep and broad, the shoulders wide, the back well filled in, the body short, the wings and tail short; the bird should be clean cut behind, have short legs, and be well set back, showing as much as possible over perch, and it should have nice quality feather. For seed, the lecturer said he used Spanish or good Turkish.

On the subject of preparing and feeding for breeding, he said, see that everything is perfectly clean. Give a good supply of grit, cuttlefish bone, also young dandelion or sweet apple, with egg food and mixed seed, with plenty of inga. In pairing up, he paired ticked buff to yellow, or vice-versa, running one cock with two hens, and taking two nests of each hen. Double-buffing he believed in if one had any particular object in view; but, he said, mind you select very close feathered birds of good quality, and let one be marked to keep up the colour. When the hens are about to lay, keep a sharp look-out for cases of egg-binding. He treated egg-bound hens as follows: One or two drops of oil in beak; also anoint the vent; hold the bird over a jug of hot water to steam her, then put back in nest and cover cage up. This would have the desired effect. He took out all eggs as they were laid, and substituted an artificial one till the third day; then he put them back, so that they would all hatch out about the same time.

In regard to the feeding of young, he gave yolk of egg for the first three days; afterwards the whole egg with home-made bread with a sprinkling of maw seed and a pinch of salt. As for green food, he used young dandelion; after, lettuce. After the young were a month old, he put them in a flight cage, fed them on egg food, crushed hemp, and milk sop till they were able to crack seed; then he dropped the egg food and crushed hemp, but gave them a little milk sop now and then; he also supplied the bath on bright days. He began giving colour food when the young were seven weeks old, commencing with it weak and gradually making it stronger till he got them on to it full strength. Colour food he made overnight, as follows: To one egg he added a thick slice of bread, six spoonfuls of cold pepper, and one of hot, a few drops of olive oil, two spoonfuls of sugar, a pinch of salt, all well mixed up. He gave one teaspoonful to each bird every day. When the bird began to show colour he covered the cage up with brown paper, leaving bare where the mix and water are. At the back of the nest he gave linseed, also sulphate of iron in drinking water. He washed all birds four or five days before boring, put them in clean cages, and let them air out the show the night before judging.

Several questions were put to the lecturer, who answered them in a straightforward way. Mr Hughes proposed a vote of thank to Mr Coulson for his kindness in giving the lecture, he had followed him with interest, and found that the lecture was practical. He had been in the lecturer's room on several occasions, and had found everything just as he had told them. Mr Boothman seconded the vote of thanks; he felt sure he was voicing the opinion of all present in saying that we had had a very pleasant, interesting and instructive evening. Mr Robinson supported. Mr. Coulson replied, thanking all for their patient hearing, and if he had been of any assistance to anyone he felt amply repaid for his trouble.—J. SPENCER, Hon Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Committee held August 18th. Tenders were considered for schedules and catalogues, and the tender of Mr. Kelly accepted. A member who joined last year too late to participate in the annual show wrote asking that last year's subscription should cover both years, but the committee could not see their way to that. It was decided to have three Cinnamon classes this year, viz., yellow, buff, and unflighted. The price of advertising in catalogue and schedule was fixed. A discussion arose re judging members' classes, and this was left till the monthly meeting. T. C. CRAWHALL, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual fortnightly meeting, held August 20th, in the Fawcett-street Cafe, Mr. J. Farrar presiding over a splendid attendance. A letter from the secretary of the Cage Bird Union was placed before the members, requesting us to send a delegate to the C.B.U. meeting at Leicester, and also giving details of the agenda to be placed before that meeting. After a short discussion, it was decided that we do not send a delegate, and the secretary was instructed to write to the secretary of the Union to the effect that our decision regarding the C.B.U., and Rule 22, remain unaltered. This decision was that we do not rejoin the Union until Rule 22 is deleted. The watch competition was then gone into, and the winner of the gold watch turned out to be Mr. Wm. Vart, Kendal. The question of our Annual Open Show was again brought forward, but it was ultimately decided to postpone the discussion until our next meeting, on September 3rd, when it is to be hoped all our members will turn up, and give their views on this subject, which must be settled at the next meeting. W. REID, Hon. Sec.

BRADFORD W. & WINDHILL O.S.

The members of the Bradford West C.B.A. and of Windhill O.S. met at the Fox and Hounds, Menston, on August 20th to play the game of cricket arranged by the clubs. We gave an invitation to all fanciers, but owing to the rain falling in torrents there was only a poor turn-up of about thirty fanciers. We arrived at Menston at three o'clock, and had to wait patiently until 4.30, when the rain ceased and the sun came out. Of course, we were all glad when the wickets were pitched. Bradford West won the toss, and batted first. During the game a very serious accident occurred to one of the Windhill players (Mr. Atkinson), who, whilst throwing a ball in sprained the spine of his back, and had to be carried off and sent home in a cab. We hope that by now he is progressing favourably. The results of the teams are as follows:—Bradford West: T. Odgen 14, F. Hammond 6, L. Odgen 7, P. Drake 48 (not out), A. Bennett 19, F. Western 11, W. A. Cowgill 3, J. Greaves 1, A. Cooper 0, A. Cook 0, W. Crabtree 0, byes 7: total, 116. Windhill O.S.: H. Bailey 10, J. Cook 5, M. Broadley 0, M. Drake 1 (not out), H. H. Towers 1 (not out), byes 3: total, 20 for three wickets. The game had to be stopped owing to bad light. Hard lines, Windhill, or the scores might have been more even. Just a word with respect to the players. For Bradford West Pete was "on the top rung," doing some high-class batting. For Windhill, both Matt and Phillup stood alone, Matt B—y for his bowling and Phillup for his fielding. Everyone enjoyed the game, which was got up for its fun. Tea was provided at the Fox and Hounds, and all did full justice to it (who said another leg?). After the feed we had a sing-song until the captain called time for the 8.45 train to Bradford; which ended a very enjoyable afternoon's outing.—F. WESTERN.

NORTHERN COUNTIES NORWICH AND CINNAMON P.C.

Meeting held August 17th, at Headquarters (Lockhart's, 65, Grainger-street), Mr. T. C. Crawhall presiding over a fair attendance. The chief business on the agenda was electing a President, Vice-president, and chairman, etc., for the ensuing year. It was proposed and carried unanimously that we ask Mr. Grey (Morpeth) to be our President, and the following gentlemen to be Vice-presidents: Messrs. J. Currah, J. Mackenzie, T. Parkinson, M. C. Potts, A. Brown, J. Patterson, T. Taylor, C. Dobson, and F. F. Lawson. It was decided to ask Mr. R. W. Smith to stand as chairman, and Mr. W. Coxon was elected as his right-hand man—Vice-chairman. The following were elected on the committee: Messrs. R. Topping, T. C. Crawhall, A. Holden, R. Hope, F. Ayre, T. Robson, A. Hermiston (local), E. Cowling (Morpeth), H. Seely, J. Dixon (Choppington), W. Woollett (Barrington), with power to add to their number. The next item was drawing up rules, and we also decided to give our patronage to five shows, and to provide two silver medals one for champion and the other for novice members (so, you novice fanciers, join us now, and try and win one yourself). The same are to be won by most points, three highest birds only to count. The society will give a special over the five shows for most points for our champion members, and Mr. Grey has promised a special for most points gained by a novice member. A novice member is "one who has not won a 1st prize in open competition, or three open novice classes." The following societies were granted our patronage: Morpeth, Newcastle, Blaydon, Gateshead, and Carlisle. No member is allowed to win more than one medal, but points gained at the above-named shows will count for the specials over the selected shows. Will members kindly forward subscriptions on as early as possible?—W. CURRY, Hon. Sec., 60, Grosvenor Gardens, Newcastle.

Will Mrs. E. M. Sargeant, of Worcester, who has written us concerning Cuckoos, kindly send full address? This was omitted, and we are desirous of replying direct.

I have learnt a great deal of useful information from the last two "Nutshell" booklets I had from you—"The Skylark" and "The Goldfinch."—ARTHUR LODGE (Penicuik).

I should like to tell you, writes Mr. Favell (Sheffield), how very much I enjoy reading CAGE BIRDS, and how very helpful I find the reading in the treatment of my birds.

The winner of the Sunderland Cage Bird Association's gold watch competition is Mr. Wm. Vart, 50, Stramongate, Kendal, writes Mr. W. Reid, the hon. sec. of the Sunderland C.B.A.

Will members of the Brighton C.B.A. kindly look up specials for the annual show, and let me know as soon as possible, so that they can be included in the schedule? writes Mr. A. T. Riddles, the hon. sec.

Will every member of the Mid-Rhondda C.B.A. kindly attend the meeting to be held on August 27, at the Dan'x Temperance Bar, Tonypandy, at 7 o'clock, writes Mr. A. H. C. Legg (the chairman), as very special business is to be discussed?

We have decided to have our outing on Sunday afternoon, August 28, to Knutsford, writes Mr. J. Spencer, the hon. secretary of the Ardwick and Dis. Cage Bird Society. Train leaves Central Station, Manchester, at 2 o'clock. Local fanciers are invited.

Burnley C.B.C. are to have a lecture on August 30 on the Norwich Plainhead, by that good, old, and well-known exhibitor, Mr. Tom Edwards, writes Mr. A. E. Barwise, and it is hoped all the fanciers, members or otherwise, who are Norwich enthusiasts will be there to hear him.

Owing to the resignation of Mr. Fryer as show manager, writes Mr. H. Boothman, hon. secretary of the Manchester and Northern Counties O.S., I have been elected show manager with Messrs. Raynes and Spencer as assistants, for our next open show, when we hope to have a record entry, having got the patronage of most of the specialist clubs.

The judges for the annual show of the Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A., which is to be held on September 17, are, writes Mr. Thos. Smith, the sec., Messrs. A. Clark (Rutherglen), A. Hamilton (Calderc ux), D. Mar in (Rutherglen), and J. Watson (Glasgow). Entry forms will be issued to members next week, and they are requested to fill them up correctly, giving the price of each exhibit.

The members of the Choppington Social Club are to be favoured with a lecture on the breeding and management of the Norwich Plainhead on Sunday evening, August 28, at 7 o'clock, at headquarters, writes Mr. W. Woollett, sec. of the Barrington and Choppington Social Club C.B.S. All friends in the district will be given a hearty welcome, and we expect to have a very social and instructive time.

At a meeting held in the Co-operative Hall, writes Mr. J. Templeman, hon. secretary of the Dunfermline and West of Fife O.S., it was agreed to extend the cage bird classification at our annual show, to be held on January 3 and 4 next, as follows: Borders to be increased to 10 classes, the Crests and Crestbirds to 8 classes, the Norwich Plainheads to 3 classes, and an additional class for hen British birds.

We are arranging a series of lectures and exhibitions for the monthly meetings, writes Mr. A. Williams, hon. secretary of the Southport and Dis. C.B.S. Next month we are expecting Mr. J. W. Clemmeon (Preston) to give us a lecture on the Norwich Plainhead, and the following month Mr. T. Johnson is to give a washing exhibition for novices. Further particulars will be duly announced. We trust the members will turn up in full force.

Kindly let all my birdie friends know that I am leaving this country again on September 2 for the Far West—Nanaimo B.C., Canada, writes Mr. J. Nicholson (Maryport). You will, perhaps, remember that I had to return to England last October on account of my wife having to go through a serious operation. I am pleased to say she has got over it now, and is doing well. I am sorry to have to disappoint a few show committees that had appointed me to judge their forthcoming shows. I have again made arrangements to have CAGE BIRDS sent out regularly to me. My address will be: Box 446, Nanaimo B.C., Canada.

Mr. John Dewsnap, the noted Lizard Canary exhibitor, writes to J. W. Ramsden as follows: "Please send 22lbs. original tin of Ramsden's Pure Pepper at once, as I am running short, and I never use any other as I have had the best of results for the last five years. I think there is none like it." And so say hundreds of delighted customers. Ramsden's Peppers are pure and fully guaranteed. Use no other.—(Advt.)

A few years ago, writes Mr. Ernest Folkard (York), when I was one day going down to business, I found a paper lying on the ground, and read on it CAGE BIRDS in big letters. I was astonished when I looked through it, as I had no idea there was such a good paper on cage birds. I ordered a paper at once, showed it to a friend, and he too had never seen it before. I have received a great deal of help from CAGE BIRDS. I get it every week, and whenever I have anything for sale, shall always advertise in it.

The support of the Southern Yorks Canary Club has been alloted to the following shows, writes Mr. J. W. Rennie, the hon. secretary: Cup Competition, Plymouth, Cheltenham, Bournemouth, London C.B.A., Plumstead, Woolwich, and Crystal Palace (subject to acceptance); Trophy Competition, Battersea, Cheltenham, Southend, Wimbledon, Cardiff, and London C.B.A.; Novice Competition, Battersea, Hastings, Southend, Wimbledon, Bournemouth, and London C.B.A.

OBITUARY.

I regret to learn of the death of the only daughter (in her 19th year) of Mr. F. Armstrong, of Pear Street, Halifax, the secretary of the National Green Marked Yorkshire C.C., writes Mr. H. Whitaker, the assistant secretary of the Halifax O.S. She passed away on August 17, after a long and painful illness. Might I offer my sincere condolence, in which I am sure all fanciers will join me, to Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong in their great bereavement?

It is with deep regret that I have to let you know of the sad death of my little boy, Arthur Selwyn, who died on August 5, and was buried on August 9 at the Trehalaw Cemetery, writes Mr. A. H. C. Legg (Porth). Had the little one lived until to-day (Aug. 22) he would have been 12 months old. I had my little girl very ill at the same time; but she, being older, managed to pull through, and is steadily getting better. I wish to thank, through CAGE BIRDS, all those kind fanciers who were present at the funeral (there were many), and those who have written words of sympathy to me and to my wife.

Mr. GEORGE SANDIFORD (Preston).

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. T. Sandiford, that I have to tell you of the death of my uncle, Mr. George Sandiford, after a painful illness, lasting over 12 months. He was very well known amongst the Norwich fanciers around this district, and has bred a few noted champions in his time. He was always willing to teach anyone else what he himself had learned in the Fancy.

"Bird Notes"—the organ of the Foreign Bird Club—maintains in the August number its reputation for interesting articles and notes. Lady Dunleath writes on "A Tour in South America, and Aviary Notes" (illustrated by five nicely reproduced photographs); Mr. A. Sutcliffe on "A Holiday in the West Indies"; Miss L. M. St. A. Wait on "My Cage Pets and and How I Keep Them"; Mr. Douglas Dewar, F.Z.S., on "The Nest of the Grey-winged Ouzel"; and Mr. Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., on "Foreign Birds."

The committee of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. have decided to hold a members' autumn show on November 8, writes Mr. W. Hedson, hon. sec. Messrs. J. Robson and A. Silver have been appointed judges. The arrangements will be in the hands of Mr. H. W. Tomsett and Mr. L. J. Richardson, these gentlemen acting as joint show managers. I am pleased to say that the society has now the patronage and support of both local members of Parliament, Mr. A. Bonar Law (M.P. for Dulwich) and Mr. G. H. Gooch (M.P. for Peckham), and through the kind influence of Mr. A. Laing, our worthy host at headquarters, many other local gentlemen are taking a keen interest in our Show.

Scottish British Bird and M.C.

A general meeting of the Scottish British Bird and Mule Club will be held in Rooms, 142, High Street, Edinburgh, on September 3, at 4.30. Business: Granting of patronage. A large attendance is requested. Secretaries asking for patronage please note, to send names of judges and classification, this is imperative. Subscriptions are now due, and I shall be pleased to receive same.—JOHN ALLAN, 13, Elm Place, Leith.

Northern Yorkshire C.C.

Any society desiring the patronage of the Northern Yorkshire C.C. should apply at once any date but Oct. 22, 29, Nov. 5, 12, or Dec. 10. Please state classes and judge. We have a much larger membership this year, and enthusiasm runs high amongst the members; so there will be keen competition. We are inviting subscriptions towards a novice special; already I have several promises. The breeding season on the whole has been very satisfactory, and some good birds are coming out. We are looking forward to Mr. Cowgill's visit on Sept. 18, when we know we will have a treat.—T. C. CRAWHALL, Sec.

Part 5 of "Our Canaries"

Contains the advice of the foremost breeders and exhibitors of the day upon getting exhibition Canaries into the highest possible show form.... Every fancier must read this. Price 6d. On sale everywhere. Post free 7d.

On taking my usual look through my weekly paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. W. Nisbet (Musselburgh), I discovered an advertisement relating to some Canaries. "Thanks," says I, "here's something good"; and writes off immediately. I had sent me four of the finest Canaries one could expect to get. One, a Norwich hen, is well worth treble the price I paid for the lot. If I hadn't been a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS, what a golden opportunity I should have missed! I cannot speak too highly of CAGE BIRDS, as during the last three or four years I have been able to lay up as fine a collection of Norwich stock birds as one could wish for, without having to pay the fancy prices one sees on going round the shows. I have bred many good birds from them, birds that have won in capital company. Should my latest purchase see next breeding season, I expect with careful pairing to beat all previous results. And all thanks are due to our favourite paper, CAGE BIRDS.

I was very much surprised when I opened my CAGE BIRDS last week and saw the report of the ramble, etc., that had been held in connection with the Heptonstall and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. P. S. Mathers, the secretary. Anyhow, I can't say that "Old Tom" (whoever that may be) has exaggerated in any way. I must say that we had a very interesting and instructive outing, and if no good is derived from it, Mr. Greenwood, our leader and lecturer, cannot be blamed for it. The outing was all the more interesting owing to the fact that this society is mainly composed of novices. Speaking for myself, I was shown plants on that ramble that are beneficial to birds, plants I had seen hundreds of times before, but such a thing as taking any for my little stock of birds never occurred to me. There is one thing our friend "Old Tom" does not mention, and that is the excellent way Mr. Greenwood answered the numerous questions put to him after his lecture—in a way which shows that Mr. Greenwood knows what he is talking about. The friendly feeling that exists between the societies who took part in this outing should not be overlooked, and I hope one day to see a more friendly feeling existing among all cage bird fanciers in this district than is the case at present.

It was a great surprise I had on getting my CAGE BIRDS last week, writes Mr. Wm. Adams (Rochdale), to see my Lancashire Buff Coppy honoured by being depicted on the front page of your valuable paper. I thank you very much for the honour you have done me. I may say that the bird has had a very successful career on the show bench. Its principal winnings are: 1st Rochdale Oct., 1909, 1st Bristol, 1908 (winning tankard for best Coppy in show), 1st at Oldham, Middleton, Littleborough and Frome, 2nd Crystal Palace, 1910, 2nd Rochdale, Oct., 1908, 3rd Rochdale Good Intent, Manchester, Nottingham, Crystal Palace, 1909, Burnley, L.C.B.A., besides winning 2nd Lancashire C.A., and silver medals for best bird last season, and many other specials. The bird had to give way a little last season to my other well-known Buff Coppy, which had a most successful season; but I am sorry to say it met its death last week by an accident while I was at my work. This is a severe loss to me, having also had a bad breeding season—about 16 young. I hope, in conclusion, that, if only for the sake of our variety, fanciers will send their birds out rather more than they do to the outside shows, which would do more for the Fancy than all the letters about it. The birds are there declining, and fanciers would be successful if they had the courage to try exhibiting at outside shows for an odd season or two. I wish CAGE BIRDS much success.

"Cage Birds" (1910) Annual.

We have just obtained a few copies (slightly soiled) of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1910. If any of our readers require one, it can be forwarded on receipt of 8d. Address remittance to the Publisher, CAGE BIRDS offices, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. On account of the limited number of copies (about one dozen) we shall be obliged to give preference to the earliest applications received.

Fra' Glesca'.

A Scottish correspondent writes: I hear that Mr. John Traill (Motherwell) has had the good luck to breed eight extra good first crosses which, if all goes well, will be heard of later on. Well done, John! The good days are again in sight.—Mr. Marr, of Bridgton, has made a machine for extracting the thistle seed, and which I understand will be put on the market soon.—It is whispered that Mr. Thomas Smith (the popular secretary of the Scotch Fancy Derby O.A.) is about to take unto himself a wife. May all happiness be his, and may he still continue to help to improve the Fancy.—Mr. A. Porteous (84, Nithsdale Road, Pollokshields), has secured a perfect Albino Sparrow, pure white, and a young bird. It is doing well, and anyone may see it by calling, as Mr. Porteous is most willing to show it to interested persons.

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1910 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

Mr. John Fairly (Coatbridge) has had a tolerably successful breeding season, his young birds including some very promising ones. His total is: 9 Belgians, 14 Scotch Fancies, 20 Norwich, and 28 Commoners. The season all over has been rather disappointing compared with former years. Causes: empty eggs, hens refusing to sit, and, in many cases, to feed. The latter occurred in many instances when the young birds reached the 8th or 10th day.—"Scotch Fancy."

As a novice, I should like to give you the results of my first year's experience. I started the season with 5 cock birds and 11 hens—Yorkshire and Border Fancies. I have just finished up with 63 nice strong youngsters, and all doing well. I may say that I knew very little about Canary breeding until I took in Cage Birds about two years ago; and I have had valuable information from Cage Birds Annual, which I think is a very good book. I keep my birds on a landing over the stairs; and I was afraid when I started that I should have my stock suffering from chills and colds; but up to the present the birds have been very free from such. I have been running one cock with two hens. The hens hatched and reared the young ones by themselves. My food has been egg and bread crumbs, a little moist sugar, and maw seed, with young lettuce for green food. My breeding cages are of the box pattern. I think I have been very successful, according to the "records." If any readers of Cage Birds would like to see my birds they can do so by appointment, my address being 2, Aberdeen Place, London Road, Hounslow.—W. Lear.

Wild Bird Life.

Preparing to Migrate.

It seems early yet to write of the autumn migration, and yet signs are not wanting that wild bird life will soon be removing to other lands. The House Martins have somehow lost their independence; they court each other's company, and act in a manner different to their usual summer habits. In the very early morning they can be seen clustered thickly upon the sunny side of tiled buildings spreading their wings and tails and sunning themselves for a long time before taking wing, and then during the day we meet them away on the hills far from houses, roaming over the undulating grassland, or hawking for hours under the larger trees; and where the telegraph wires cut across the open fields we see them sitting in long rows between the poles, a few of them flitting around like huge butterflies, but all within easy distances of each other. These are mostly in flocks of from forty to fifty birds, evidently the nucleus of one of the big gatherings to be seen later in the autumn, which sometimes number many thousands. These the writer has seen for several days in one locality crowding the tall elms and farm buildings, and skimming the surface of the river and marsh land in search of food. During the evenings they are apparently most active, or do they seem to be so because they somehow limit their roamings and cluster more thickly around some favourite spot? So numerous are they that they compel attention by their activity and constant twitterings; but early one morning we have missed them, they have gone during the night on the long journey over land and sea, from which many never return. After the big flock has left us a few stray birds linger for some days apparently loth to leave, or waiting for favourable winds.

But Martins and Swallows are not the only birds that collect in this manner before journeying South. All along the South Downs migrants are commencing to gather; hundreds of Wheatears can be seen at the foot of the Downs, around the sea walls, and on the marshland. Among the sheep on the hillside, graceful Warblers flit about in hundreds, also Chiffchaffs, tiny Willow Wrens, Whitethroats and Redbacked Shrikes. The majority of these are young birds of the year, who, contrary to what one might expect, are the first to leave our shores.

In the Courts.

Alleged Cruelty to Three Linnets.

At Lawford's Gate Bristol Petty Sessions on Aug. 18, George Packer was summoned for ill-treating and torturing three Linnets by bracing two of them and tying a third to a stick by means of a stick, and from time to time jerking it in the air on August 1 at Filton.

P.C. Ewins deposed as to seeing the defendant crouching under a hedge and a bird being jerked into the air by means of a stick. The bird was jerked up to attract other birds. The bird's body was raw in places owing to the action of the string. When witness got over the fence defendant ran to the birds. Witness went to the place in plain clothes, wearing a railway porter's cap, as it was difficult to get to the place before men who were in the habit of doing such things before they let the birds free.

Inspector Cole said he examined the birds and found they had been injured, the feathers on two of the birds being completely worked off the back. Previously he had seen the man with birds, but before he could get to him he allowed the birds to fly away through the hedge. The man went out each year and caught birds. Defendant was fined 9s., including costs, or seven days' imprisonment.—"Bristol Evening Times and Echo."

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds." 151, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Post cards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

CANARY QUERIES.

Moulting Advice, etc.

Novice.—For all practical purposes you may treat both old and young alike so long as they appear to be going on all right, and keep fairly bright and active. The only material difference in the feeding is that the young should not be treated so liberally with green food, which should be mostly plantain or shepherd's purse seed stalks. These may also be very largely supplanted by blooms of marigolds or nasturtiums, which will help to tone up the natural colour. In addition to the usual diet a pinch of maw may be given daily until the moult is well advanced, and then a pinch of linseed substituted for it, and given only three times a week, and a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a split pea dissolved in the water three times a week on days when the linseed is not given. Throughout the moult give about half a teaspoonful of egg food, or one of the usual substitutes, to each bird, three times a week. Allow free use of the bath to all in a normal condition, but not to any which show signs of wheeziness. These should only be allowed to bathe in mild weather when moulting. The sample of food is, I think, hardly the thing, as it contains a much larger amount of cod liver oil. On this account it is not at all suitable for a regular article of diet, but would be useful to give a little occasionally to weakly or sick birds.

Crests Sitting Thick.

H. Thomas.—It is nothing very unusual for young birds to sit thick when they are moulting, and it does not necessarily mean that anything is wrong beyond the natural conditions of moulting. Your feeding is quite liberal enough; if it errs at all, it is on the side of generosity. Add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the drinking water for two consecutive days, and feed as follows until the birds seem to have returned to their normal condition as nearly as can be expected whilst moulting. You must not, however, expect them to be as active and bright on the whole whilst moulting as they were before this condition commenced. As staple diet give plain canary seed only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of egg-food, and a quarter teaspoonful of maw twice a week, and on the other two alternate days give an equivalent quantity of bread soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Also give the maw on these days separately until the moult is getting advanced, when you may substitute a pinch of linseed on these two days for the maw. Give a little seedy chickweed and plantain stalk instead of more succulent green stuff. Keep cages strewn with clean, gritty sand. After giving the above special give six drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid in the water every second day for a week.

Bald and Panting.

A Jackson.—It is quite possible your treatment has failed simply because you did not take the necessary steps to remove the cause of the trouble. You must now see she is kept quite free from all draught, and fed on dry and extreme fluctuations of temperature. When she is about moulting this time see she is kept quite on the warm side and the health equable and constant in order to induce a quick and complete moult. Allow her to have fresh air when the weather is fine. For the next fortnight feed on a staple diet of plain canary seed only, give a liberal supply of seedy chickweed, plantain, and shepherd's purse stalks, and similar green stuff, daily; and twice each week give half a teaspoonful of crushed stale sponge cake slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur. Every second day give a pinch of maw seed. In the drinking water during this time give 6 drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts every second day for the first week as will cover a sixpence. In the second week give 20 drops of whisky, 6 of oxymel of squills, and 2 of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together every second day. After the first fortnight add a half teaspoonful of summer rape to the diet every second day, and when bird has commenced moulting a pinch of linseed twice a week. You may also paint the bare place twice a week with a mixture of equal parts glycerine and tincture of perchloride of iron for a few weeks, or until you see the new feathers beginning to grow.

Bad Legs and Beaks.

M.E.F.D.—Am inclined to think the trouble is constitutional and congenital rather than a local affection. Have you any fowls suffering from "scaly leg," or has the nesting material been in contact with any such place? If so, I suspect this was the trouble. But without seeing the birds, I could not say positively what. Give the following a trial for a month or so, then write again and report result, referring to reply. Take away and burn all nest boxes and materials. Keep cages and perches scrupulously clean, and the cage floor strewn with sawdust, which burn when removed. Allow birds to bathe freely, and every few days dissolve a few crystals of permanganate of potash in the bathing water. As staple diet give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day add a piece of bread scalded in hot milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar (allowing a piece the size of a hazel nut to each bird), and on the alternate days a quarter of a teaspoonful of maw seed. For the first week give in the drinking water ten drops of dandelion juice, and as much sulphate of soda every second day as will cover a sixpence. After this time give in addition a little bread and milk, or egg-food, twice a week only, a pinch of maw twice weekly, and on two other days a small teaspoonful of cracked hemp. For one week give three drops each tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid in the water every second day. Touch the sores on beak twice a week with a small feather dipped in Friar's Balsam, and, as often, bathe feet and legs in a boracic solution and anoint with zince ointment.

About Moulting.

M.C.—You must see it is not exposed to any draught or extremes of heat and cold, and that it is not hung near or over a burning light. Remember, birds are far more susceptible to these influences when moulting than at other times, which explains why a bird may go through the year without showing the least effect, and then break down whilst moulting. If you are doubtful about its position and cannot move it to a better one keep it in a box cage and cover over the front until the moult is finished. Drop the linseed at once as a regular item of diet, and give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as a staple. Give the colour food daily, and every second day a pinch of maw. A small scrap of green food may be given on the alternate days. When the moult is well advanced, begin to give a pinch of linseed two or three times a week, until finished. Add six drops of syrup of buckthorn to the drinking water for two days, and later on, when the moult is about half through, begin to dissolve a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a split pea in the water three times a week. You may give the saffron mixture so often recommended two days in every three for a week or fortnight, to get the birds well started in the moult; after that twice a week should suffice; or it may be stopped altogether, if the moult goes on well and quickly.

Brevities.

Yorkshire Gaping (C. G.).—Stop the hemp and the cod liver oil food, and limit diet for the next fortnight at least to plain canary only as staple, with just a pinch of summer rape every second day, and a pinch of maw on the alternate days. Give a fairly liberal supply of green food daily. In the drinking water give 6 drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts every second day for a week as will cover a sixpence, and in the second week give 6 drops each of tincture of gentian and dilute sulphuric acid every second day.

Is it Asthma? (Dalstonite).—You are correct, and I do not hesitate to say the bird is much too far gone to be cured. I doubt, indeed, whether you will afford much relief. Still, you can but try. So keep it in a quite comfortable and cosy position—not necessarily overheated, but still not on the cold side—and see it is quite free from draught, impure air, or sudden fluctuations of heat. Give a staple diet of 2 parts canary to one part summer rape, and every second day for the next fortnight give a morsel of bread and milk, with 2 drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar; and on the alternate days a pinch of maw seed. In the drinking water give 6 drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days 20 drops of whisky and 5 each oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine and syrup of tolu. Continue the latter on alternate days for a fortnight, then miss a week and give for another fortnight.

A Bad Habit (Lamplighter).—I should not discard the cock if he breeds such good birds simply because he and his progeny have the bad habit of clinging to the wires. It may take time and patience to cure them, and some may not be cured, but the proportion of successes will well repay the trouble. Keep them in box cages and cover the fronts over within two inches of the wood frontpiece. This will allow plenty of light. Make the cross perches fast to the back of cage and cut them short so that they do not reach the wires within about an inch and a half. Remove cover from cage front about an hour before roost time or when it is getting dusk, and the birds are not so active. Place all greenstuff inside the cage, and also any extras in the way of hemp, etc. Keep cages, when uncovered, near where someone is passing frequently. A tiny mirror stuck on back of cage will often prove effectual as a last resource with apparent incorrigibles. Cover cages again as soon as birds begin flying on wires, and as they begin to leave off the habit gradually leave them uncovered longer. In the case of incorrigibles, use cages with loose wire fronts, and fix a sheet of glass over the inside of the wires, and cave them uncovered altogether for a certain time sooner or later, but the plumage is apt to get a little damaged, so that the bird is not always let for showing immediately.

Colour Feeding (M. E. F. D.).—Colour feeding, when properly done, chiefly or wholly with tasteless pepper, is not in the least degree injurious to health. It should commence a fortnight or so before the moult begins, at about 6 weeks old for the late broods, and 8 to 12 for the earlier broods, according to age. With the old birds it may begin any time from the middle or end of July to the middle of August, according as the birds seem likely to drop into moult early or otherwise.

To Force Moult (Hard Moulting).—No, I do not advise you to interfere with the natural course of the moult. Some birds naturally moult very gradually all through, and as long as they keep in such good condition as yours they are none the worse for it. Leave well alone. It is just possible he may drop deep in moult at any time, but unless he does so naturally do not try to force it. If he does, then see he does not get a chill whilst scantily clad. As a regular staple diet I prefer to give a simple mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape, reserving such elaborate mixtures as you name for special occasions.

Making Sucking Noise (J.B.N.).—They are almost certain to be exposed to some draught, either constant or occasional, or to a greatly fluctuating temperature. It is probably not very obvious to your senses, but sufficient to have this effect upon the birds, although it may not have affected them before moulting commenced, when they would be less sensitive to slight changes. Try to discover the cause as suggested—I am inclined to think it will be an occasional draught, perhaps from an open door or window—and remove it. If you cannot discover any such cause, place a light covering over the cage fronts, which I presume are of the box type, until the birds have finished moulting. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whiskey, and six each of glycerine, oxymel of squills, and sweet spirits of nitre, two days in every three for a week.

Effect of Seeds (Geo. Barker).—The experiments you suggest would, in my opinion, need to be carried out on a much larger scale if they were to be of any really practical value, and it would also be advisable to continue them over a much longer period. Years ago I commenced a series of experiments with Britishers on these lines, but did not exhaust them on account of having to drop the experiments. The results, so far as I was satisfied, are embodied in my present views on seeds and feeding generally. Seeds were rather fully dealt with in the series of articles in CAGE BIRDS, entitled the "Novices' Notebook," about two years ago. As regards information on feeding Canaries, you only need No. 5 of "Our Canaries," ready immediately, to know all that is worth knowing.

Fits (M. E. B.).—It is extremely doubtful whether the bird will recover. If you had said how you had been feeding it or its condition of body, I should have been able to help you better. If it is still alive give a supply of plain canary, and each morning a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with a pinch of maw seed. Give a half-ripe plantain stalk or bunch of shepherd's purse seed heads each day, and, if the bird will eat them, two mealworms a day. Limit the food solely to this. In the drinking water dissolve as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and add 10 drops of lemon juice for two days. After that give 6 drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of calumba and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea in the water every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days as long as the fits are frequent dissolve in the water as much bromide of potassium as will cover a threepenny piece.

A Pigeon-Cote Aviary (A Reader of CAGE BIRDS).—It is very difficult to advise you without knowing something of the position and to what extent the cote is exposed to the weather. The way in which your birds have been bred will also make a very material difference. If they have been used to any artificial heat it will be folly to turn them into this place at this season without being prepared to keep it at a comfortable temperature in severe weather. On the other hand, if they have always been used to normal temperature, they should thrive all right in the place, provided it is soundly built and free from damp and draughts. See it is well ventilated. The size of the cote is such that I should advise you to avoid heat if possible. In a small place of this kind, it is extremely difficult to avoid cold draughts and to control the temperature over a long absence when heat is used. Far better stock it with a strain of good hardy birds and leave heat alone.

Stiff Hind Claw (Tommy).—Get two saucers side by side, one containing cold water, the other fairly hot, but not scalding; a heat in which the front of the wrist can be borne will be about right. Catch the bird, wash its foot clean in the hot water, and then hold it immersed for a couple of minutes or so; then take it out, and place it directly into the cold water for a similar length of time. Repeat these changes several times, but be careful to finish in the cold water. Dry the foot carefully, and paint it with a feather dipped in Friar's Balsam. Treat in this way three times a week for a fortnight. Add to its diet a morsel of bread and milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed each day for a time, and in the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for one day, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food two days in every three for a fortnight.

Sleepy Heads (W. Willoughby).—Cage the three birds by themselves. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape, mixed together. Every second day give the equivalent of a small teaspoonful of bread and milk with 6 drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped about it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week on the intervening days give a small teaspoonful of maw seed, and on two other days a teaspoonful of hemp. Give a half ripe plantain stalk each about three times a week. Limit the diet to this for two or three weeks. In the drinking water give 6 drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for three consecutive days, and afterwards dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, a crystal of sulphate of iron about half as big and 6 drops of dilute sulphuric acid in each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water every second day for a week.

Ailing Crests (G. M. D.). Place both in the coolest part of your room and keep the cage fronts covered until moult is over. Put the hen on a diet of plain canary as staple. Every second day give a small piece of bread soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and a quarter teaspoonful of maw on the alternate days. Give a little green food four times a week. In the drinking water give 10 drops of syrup of buckthorn for one day only, and afterwards 6 drops each tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week. Give the Green cock a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, prepared as above, but with 9 drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, before sprinkling with sugar. Give the fresh each morning and remove in the afternoon all that is left, giving a small teaspoonful of a mixture of two parts canary, one part summer rape, and one part maw. Limit diet to this quantity and treat thus for a fortnight. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for one day, and afterwards the same gentian mixture as the hen, but using 4 drops each instead of 6 every second day for a week.

Colour-food for Waxbills, etc.

M. G. L.—I do not consider many of the Waxbills will be improved by the use of this, as most of these birds retain their colour well in captivity. The Avadavats have a summer and winter plumage, so that it is quite natural for them to be merely brown during a portion of the year, the hens always so. The same applies to many of the Finches, such species as eat soft food or will take moistened sponge cake. The only course is to stir in a good proportion of either red or orange colour feed, according to the colour required. A natural way to supply this is to give them marigold (any variety) flower heads to pick over, but candidly I consider, at any rate so far as the Waxbills are concerned, that they are best left alone, as I repeat they retain their natural colours in captivity. The flower heads can, however, be offered. If you give me the names of the Finches I could then be definite about these.

Birds for Aviary Cage.

Life-long Fancier.—(1) Nine birds the size of a Norwich Canary, or double that number of small Waxbills and Finches. (2) In the Waxbills recommended to that correspondent, the sexes differed in plumage and variety was thus secured; otherwise your assumption is quite correct as to variety in the space. (3) Please describe the upper and lower plumage separately, as I do not gather you mean an entirely spangled or scaled bird, unless they are Amadavats. (4) The price was about right, but if you have Whydahs there is only space in your aviary-cage for these alone to disport about in. (5) These were probably hens, or males out of colour; cock Whydahs only wear their long tail plumes and bright colours during the breeding season; at other times they are very similar in plumage to the hens. Many thanks for your kindly expressed appreciation. I should advise the following: Common and Green Amadavats; Zebra, Grey, Orange-cheeks and St. Helena Waxbills, with cocks only of the following: Grey and Green singing Finches, Napoleon Weaver, Alario Finch, and Silverbill.

Parrots Out of Condition.

Mrs. Jackson.—I much fear it is a mild attack of paralysis, and that there can be no complete cure, but "while there's life there's hope." Continue the treatment advised in our previous reply in its entirety: a weak stimulant occasionally will do no harm. Keep the birds warm; at the same time it must get fresh air without draught; also permit it to take as much exercise as it cares to. The bowels must be kept moving freely by an occasional dose of Dinneford's magnesia if necessary. I much fear your local vet. is not accustomed to birds, and unfortunately you cannot send it to London in its present bodily condition. It is evident to me that the leg is either rather badly strained, or injured, or paralysed. The chances of recovering are certainly doubtful, and if the other leg becomes useless I should advise having the bird euthanised at once, as the most humane course. Providing the other leg does not go wrong, try the treatment for another fortnight, and then write again, as fully as in your present letter. A better opinion can then be formed as to any chance of partial or complete recovery, or whether the more humane course will be to destroy it.

Are They Rare?

"Volueris".—(1) The Blue Sugar bird (you have either a hen or a cock out of colour) is not exactly rare, but certainly uncommon. They make good exhibition birds, and are almost sure to catch the judge's eye if in condition. The male is mostly a rich blue when in colour, while the female is mostly green. (2) There certainly would be no harm in making the experiment. In many cases, where cocks have died while incubation has been going on, the female has brought up the young, and I should say there was a reasonable prospect of success. At the same time, Red-headed Finches are most unsatisfactory breeders, many pairs lay numbers of eggs, incubate for a time, and then give up and nest again; and others hatch and refuse to feed. In most of the cases that have come under my notice where full success has been attained, the parent birds have had access to almost unlimited live food, principally gentles.

Grey Parrot Indisposed.

H.H.—Provided the bird gets no worse, there is no reason why you should not bring it round—ripe fruit may be given liberally—otherwise your diet should suffice. Give Dinneford's magnesia every third day for the next fortnight—one part magnesia, two parts water, and on other days, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Keep the water in the cage, also a piece of cuttlefish. Its condition should gradually improve, though if the present symptoms become aggravated write again at once, giving fullest possible detail. Give two doses. Four drops of tincture of opium dissolved in a little syrup direct to the beak, and repeat this whenever there is any blood traceable in the birds' voidings. Keep the bird in some warm position, yet where it will get fresh air without draught. The aromatic mixture may be given twice weekly in lieu of the Chemical Food. I must repeat that the above treatment is only intended to cover fourteen days. If the bird is kept where it hears plenty of conversation and you talk to it and teach it by constant repetition, it will soon begin to talk when it has got over the present indisposition.

Combativeness of Birds.

L.G.M.—Very many thanks for your appreciative remarks. It must be borne in mind that when constructional advice is given, it is with the idea that such will be qualified by the environment, etc., of each particular case. As regards the combativeness of birds, what you say is very true, yet in a measure this can only apply to roomy aviaries, and you may possibly have occasion to somewhat modify your opinion with a more lengthy experience. Also, it is worthy of note that in crowded and overstocked quarters, a bullfinch or bird I have found into pugnacity and an unusually unsuitable and quiet bird will almost fiercely many have experienced this. Again, many species that are amiable on ordinary occasions are little fiends of ferocious when they once commence nesting, and a careful overhaul of the aviary is very necessary during the breeding season. Red Weavers, these birds often attempt to reproduce their kind in captivity, though numbers of nests are built, and they do but little harm in a mixed series, reserving their combativeness for their own kind, and more particularly for those of similar coloration, through the common Red-billed Weavers will usually agree together in the same aviary in almost any number. I must admit that my experience leads me to the conclusion that in the matter of variableness of demeanour, birds are very near akin to genus Homo, and must be studied as individuals and a given species judged only from a large number and not by units.

Sick Parrot and Budgerigar.

H. H. Colvill.—It is always unwise to try other treatment when you have placed the case in the hands of an expert vet., which your local vet. as named by you is. However, if you wish to now treat it yourself, and you have given no Dinneford's magnesia recently, give one dose at once—water and magnesia in equal parts and let the bird have three hearty drinks of it at intervals during the one day. Give for a time Parrish's Chemical Food rather strong in the water; this has a slightly constipating effect. Also give one drop of laudanum dissolved in a teaspoonful of water for three consecutive days, and report progress a week hence. As regards the Budgerigar which throws her eggs out, it is an individual vice, though probably not permanent, and she will probably nest and rear young without trouble next season. Ike the ailing bird, cage this up and keep it warm, out of the reach of draught; yet at the same time where the air is fresh; anoint the vent and swollen area with sweet oil, and also with a quill give two drops direct to the beak. If this does not appear to give relief, then the following day well steam the affected part over hot water and then again anoint with sweet oil; the bird should soon become normal and fit again unless matters have already progressed too far.

Brevities.

Parrot Losing its Plumage (A. J. K.).—In addition to the seed mixture, half the bulk of which should consist of Canary and white millet seed, supply ripe fruit, plain biscuits, and nuts. It must also have either water in its cage or be permitted to satisfy its thirst at least twice a day. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Every third day supply as drinking water Dinneford's magnesia, diluted with an equal bulk of water; on other days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's chemical food. Keep a piece of cuttlefish continually in the cage. While the bird must not be exposed to draught, it must be kept where it will get fresh air. Spray it twice weekly with quassia solution.

About Moustache Parrakeet (A. A. B.).—I have found the Monstache rather quiet and stolid, but have come across talking specimens. It should be noticed that very seldom do Parrakeets kept in aviaries indulge in imitating human speech. Their conditions are more natural than those of caged specimens, and they retain more of their natural characteristics. These should certainly breed if given a fairly roomy outdoor aviary, furnished with a couple of roomy nest logs, but often the patience is sorely tried, as many species do not breed till they are several years old, and adults generally take a season to settle down before commencing nesting operations. They are quite hardy, however. The female lacks the black mandibular streaks.

Parrot Weak on Legs (T. E. F.).—Continue the treatment already prescribed. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Give one dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one part magnesia to two parts of water—and then only as required to keep its bowels working freely. Anoint any bare patches with Spratt's Pennacura. Continue the bathing, it will do good. Confine the diet to seed mixture, half the bulk of which should consist of canary and white millet seed, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit, and as the bird has been accustomed to scraps, a piece of unbuttered toast. When not giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, and the biscuit and toast may be moistened in this if the bird so prefers it.

Green Parrot with Growth (C. Q.).—So long as matters continue as they are, I should leave it severely alone, but if it increases in size, and the growth is hard, and does not contain pus, it can be touched (use a camel-hair brush) with tincture of iodide daily so long as the skin continues unbroken. If ultimately there is evidence of pus, then as soon as it is sufficiently ripe, it must be lanced, and the pus got rid of by gentle pressure. I do not believe in drugs for a healthy bird, but in the present instance the bowels should be kept moving freely by occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia, but not sufficiently often for the voidings to become watery-loose.

Roseate Cockatoo (H. C. Arumer).—As a rule Rosy is not a talkative species in this country, nevertheless some individuals become quite loquacious, and there is no reason why yours should not prove to be one of these; in fact, from your letter, I should say there is a strong probability of its doing so. Keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, nevertheless it must not be scared; talk to it, pet it, and teach it by constant repetition of such words and phrases as you would like it to utter; this is best done when the bird is in a quiet and restful mood. It may not respond for quite a little time, but will ultimately do so. The only royal road to teaching these birds is kindness and unlimited patience, and then, as a rule, all will talk, at any rate, a little, sooner or later, for some individuals are much more teachable than others.

Ring-necked Parrakeet in Moult ("Joey").—Yes, the bird should have a bath. If it will not bathe you must spray it two or three times a week in summer, and once a week during the winter months, in all cases keeping it carefully out of draught till dry. While the moult lasts keep the drinking water well coloured with Parrish's Chemical Food; also regulate the bowels by an occasional dose of Dinneford's magnesia—equal parts magnesia and water—but the voidings should not be watery-loose. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, cuttlebone and grit, also water either kept in the cage or the bird permitted to satisfy its thirst three or four times a day.

Birds for Indoor Aviary (Chemists).—The floor must be covered with either linoleum or thin zinc, and the aviary well furnished with twiggy branches, husks, handy travelling cages and nest boxes, also several seed and water hoppers, so that all are not forced to feed from one receptacle. All the following are suitable, and mostly obtainable from 3s. 6d. to 5s. 6d. per pair. Silverbill, Grey Java Sparrows, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Zebra and Spice Finches, Gold-breasted, Orange-cheek, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills. The following 10s. to 15s. pair: White Java Sparrows, Rufous-tailed and Long-tailed Grassfinches, Aurora and Red-headed Finches. You have ample room for 20 pairs such as above. Diet: Canary, millet, spray millet, paddy rice, greenfood (such as lettuce, grass in flower, etc.), cuttlefish, grit and water, and a little of such ripe fruit as they will eat. Canaries will live and agree with the above.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Feeding Young Blackbird.

F Frampton.—I can recommend to you the Nutshell booklet (post free 2½d.), on the Blackbird, it is full of useful hints. There are several ways, equally good, in which a Blackbird may be fed. Soaked chicken-meal (without grit) is excellent if a little of a good mixture specially designed for insectivorous birds is mixed in with it, and some suitable live foods given, also fruit and berries, according to season. But the best (though not the cheapest) method is to feed the bird on the following lines (any good corn dealer would mix you the stock food). Stock mixture (store it in tins): Finely ground chicken (or game or pheasant or partridge) meal, six parts; ground silkworm pupae, meat meal, good ants' eggs and dried flies, one part each, by measure. Get the chicken (or other) meal without grit. If you have any difficulty in doing so, finely crushed puppy cakes (or puppy meal) makes an excellent substitute; or the "broken" biscuit obtainable from the grocer. If the latter be used, add an extra part of meat meal and silkworm pupae. Damp quantity required for daily use with grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, or cold boiled potato. Vary them frequently, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg flake, or half a hard-boiled egg, finely minced up, occasionally. Give some mealworms daily, and any other live insects you can lay hands on, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, according to season. "Black-beetles" are very much relished. The cage should be 24 inches (not less) to 36 inches long, by about 16 high, and 12 wide (front to back). The larger it is, the better for the bird.

Nightingale in a Kitchen.

A. Lodge.—Your query is vaguely worded, and you do not say whether the bird is to be a newly-taken one, or one used to captivity. A Nightingale can be successfully kept in a warm, well-lighted kitchen, providing it is not subjected to great extremes of temperature (hot by day, cold at night) and to fumes of gas, etc. To obtain a good insight into the treatment of newly-taken Softbills, I advise you to purchase a copy of Mr. Frostick's "Meating off and Feeding Softbills" (sold by CAGE BIRDS, post free 6½d.). Briefly put, live food is the best for all newly-caught small insectivorous birds; it is, in fact, essential to their successful "meating-off." One can manage very well with mealworms only. But more variety is helpful, and live ants' eggs especially, or flies, wasp grub, aphides (or smother fly), smooth caterpillars, and any of the crawling things found on garden plants are excellent, according to season. At first the bird should be put in a quiet corner in a suitable cage (a light cover over it, if necessary), and have a free supply of mealworms or live ants' eggs; also the other things mentioned, as obtainable. Pin a few mealworms to the perches, at front of cage, and put a supply inside in a shallow earthenware or glass dish. The general feeding should be on the following lines:—As a stock mixture: Powdered Osborne or other suitable biscuit, four parts; best ants' eggs and dried flies, two parts each; ground silkworm pupae one part; meat meal, half part, by measure. I take the quantity required of this and mix it just crumbly moist with grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, watercress or chickweed (use young leaves only). It is necessary, of course, to give in addition all the live insect food one can possibly obtain. To the above stock mixture I add, after damping, a teaspoonful or two of preserved egg-flake, or part of a hard-boiled fresh egg, finely minced, and, more occasionally still, a little finely scraped raw lean mutton or beef. High-class insectile mixtures are also advertised in our columns. Don't try to keep a 'Gale on poor food. To get the bird on to the stock mixture cut up a number of mealworms, and well rub the pieces into the daily food allowance (after, of course, it has been prepared for use). Gradually lessen the supply of live mealworms. The bird will pick the cut pieces out of the food mixture, and gradually get to eating the latter. Many small Softbills also like ripe fruit.

"Feeding Up" a Goldfinch.

New Reader.—Pleased to welcome you into the ranks. Your Goldie has certainly got over the moult very early, and if good in the essential exhibition points ought to do well at the early shows. Give him plenty of thistle heads and hardheads, and let him bathe freely, and the "bloom" will soon appear on his plumage. Feed your bird on the following lines: This is the seed mixture I am using at present for my own Goldies: Teazle four parts, canary and hemp three parts each, linseed one part, sunflower saf-flower, summer rape, and charlock half-part each. The sunflower and saf-flower I crack lightly by passing them through a seed-crushing machine, and mix them with the others only when about to feed, but this, of course, is not convenient to everybody. In addition I have two other mixtures, of which I give a small teaspoonful daily—one, one day, the other the next day, and so on. They are (1) niger three parts, and maw one part; (2) thistle three ounces, dandelion and sesame two ounces each, lettuce, gold of pleasure, and cornflower one ounce each. All the others are mixed by measure. These seeds are those I have found by long experience the Goldfinch is particularly partial to, and as "tit-bits" they help to bring them into song and condition quicker than anything else I know. Plenty of dandelion, young tender leaves, and flowering and seeding heads are essential in the Spring to bring them along into breeding condition. When they are in full, vigorous song, and drooping and spreading their tails and wings as they "sway" to and fro on the perch in the manner so peculiar to this species, then Goldfinches can be looked upon as "fit" for pairing up, especially so if they have a clear beak (free from any dark mark at the tip of the upper mandible).

Brevities.

In the Throat (Night).—For two or three days try the effect of stirring one drop of Lysol (obtainable from any good chemist) in three tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Give it fresh twice daily, and on no account exceed the strength mentioned. This I have found an excellent remedy for throat troubles.

On Jays (Anxious).—Get Part 2 of the "British Bird Manual" (post free 1/1 from CAGE BIRDS office), wherein you will find a chapter dealing with the Jay. There is no particular method which needs to be employed to teach the bird to talk; it will soon begin to pick up words and imitate sounds on the moult is over. Choose a simple, "snappy" phrase, such as "Come on, Jim," and repeat this plainly to the bird at every possible opportunity and especially before you are offering him any little dainty in the food line. The bird will soon pick this up. Then follow with other host sentence.

A Linnet Bullfinch Hybrid (Lon.).—Keep the hybrid in a good roomy cage, where it can use its wings. For exhibition purposes it is necessary to colour-feed these bird; you cannot by any other means obtain that high colour which is essential to success.

Watery Excreta (F. Rosle).—Get a small quantity of crystals of citrate of iron and quinine from a chemist, and in three table spoonfuls of drinking water dissolve as much as will just cover a sixpenny piece (not heaped up). A few days on this should tone up the birds health, and alter the nature of the excreta. I assume, of course, that the bird is not ill otherwise.

Thrush with Asthma (No nom-de-plume).—"Asthma," especially if of long standing, is said to be incurable. Get one ounce of tincture of benzoin from a chemist and stir 6 to 8 drops of this into each 3 table-spoonfuls of drinking water. Give it fresh twice daily, and continue with it for at least 14 days, but occasionally giving the bird plain water for half a day. The bird must be kept out of draughts.

About a Siskin (Aberdevine).—I should say that 4 (or 5) years is a good average period for a Siskin to live in captivity. Unless given plenty of room, and fed plainly, they are very apt to overeat, get very fat, and succumb to liver troubles. It is best to give them part of the year in an aviary. I don't think keeping them in pairs would tend to longevity. I have had pairs of Goldies, Linnets, and Greenies up this year, but did not find the cock birds cease singing; nor have I experienced it with hybrid pairs. I certainly don't think it is the general rule for them to do so.

An Injured Foot (E. E.).—I really cannot advise you unless you tell me the precise nature of the injury. Has the bird broken its leg, broken a "toe," pulled out a nail, or what? If the leg is really whole, then the bird will soon get over the effects of the wrench, and begin to use it again; leave the cure in the hands of time, for it is not possible to do anything helpful. If there is some injury which has caused a toe to mortify, it might be best to amputate this with a pair of sharp scissors, or a razor, afterwards washing the part and touching it with a red-hot knitting-needle to stop the bleeding, when it will quickly heal. In any case, whatever be the matter, there can be no harm in bathing the foot in warm water to which has been added a drop or two of a good germicide, such as Lysol.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. And bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

W. E. Cuthbert.—Sex of Quail Finch, male; cause of death, bronco-pneumonia, induced by an attack of bronchitis. There was no evidence of disease existing at time of purchase; it is of recent origin. I suppose you have already received skin of bird forwarded to you; a local taxidermist will complete its preservation.

Contest.—Linnet died of congestion of lungs. The affection of the feet would not be sufficient to cause death, but would have a predisposing influence in interfering with its free movement, and so conduce to congestive disease. Like yourself, I believe that could the local trouble have been remedied the bird would not have died. Anything which inhibits movement and healthful exercise interferes with the circulatory system; the heart becomes weak and fails to maintain its force in driving the blood through the lungs. This, associated with the pain it experienced, was the exciting factor in causing its death.

Mrs. R. L. Younger.—Acute inflammation of the bowels, originating in the first instance in a bacterial disease of the liver, caused death of Budgerigar. Both lobes of the liver presented yellowish areas, each area representing a necrotic change of living tissue into dead. Its cause is a microbe which gains access to the liver by the digestive tract, and in this position sets up disease centres. This organ in time becomes disorganised, and its biliary secretions materially lessened or altered. These secretions which in health act as intestinal antiseptics, begin to cease or even become contaminated from the liver, inflammation of the intestines resulting. It is a disease which varies considerably in the length of time which elapses from the moment of infection to the termination. I frequently meet cases in which the bulk of the liver tissue is badly affected, whilst in this case I should consider the lesions in the liver have endured only two or three weeks. In this particular instance the process of moulting acted as a contributory cause in bringing about its demise.

A Secretarial Matter (A.H.C.L.).—We are sorry to hear the news, and trust the misfortune will be faced in the right spirit, and that the Society will go ahead and prosper.

Suggestions and An Idea (H. Terrett).—We will give your suggestions consideration, but are afraid the one advocating the advertisement pages being intermixed with the reading matter would not commend itself to our readers generally. The idea you send is hardly suitable for the "Illustrated Ideas" column; it has ten accompanying sketches, whereas one or two mark the limit.

Net-Making Record (Antonio).—The following is the gist of the correspondence to which you refer. "Netter" claimed to be able to tie 1,500 knots (2in. mesh) in an hour; and "A. B.," using linen thread (cost 3s. per lb.) took five hours to make a yard of netting (70 mesh wide ou a 4ft. 9in. staff). Another correspondent disputed "Netter's" ability to tie 1,500, upon which "Netter" renewed his claim, and vouched also for the ability of a brother of his to tie 1,600 knots in the hour (2in. mesh). He asserted, too, that he could do three rabbit nets (22 by 20 knots—2in. mesh) in an hour. We know nothing as to net-making "records."

WHERE DO BIRDS DIE?

An interesting discussion on the subject of where the birds do has been proceeding in the columns of the "Western Mail," it was opened by Mr. G. S. Collins, who wrote: "As I was sauntering the high South Park Cardiff, the other evening I chanced to pick up a dead bird, a young Thrush, the sight of which after slight reflection, suggested to me an ornithological problem. Where do our feathered friends die? We have various birds with us all the year round, yet of the myriads that frequent us, or are already natives, how rare a sight is a dead bird, except when one falls an occasional victim to a cat or a catapult, for the one in question I picked up had undoubtedly met with a violent death. Even in the great breeding grounds the dead body of any bird is an unusual sight, and particularly in the case of Swallows, gregarious as they are. Speaking to an ornithologist, he was equally perplexed, and suggested that, doubtless, many of the birds, especially in Cardiff, were devoured by rats, others were drowned in the lake, while many more were killed by getting into drains and pipes. These explanations are not at all feasible to me, having studied the question. Even if those hypotheses were granted, it would only explain the disappearance of a limited number of birds, and the ornithological mystery remains: When and where do the birds die?"

This drew the following reply from a correspondent signing himself "E. F.":—"Mr. Strangways Collins asks a question that might remain unanswered for ages. For obvious reasons the biologist, ornithologist, or other scientist could not answer it. Nor could the naturalist, unless he were a strenuous enthusiast prepared to face the rigours of climate night and day, even through periods of torrential rain, ice and snow.

"I can answer it because I have had the experience; I have been bedless, foodless and shoeless, and have dozed and slumbered in the woods in all weathers, in all seasons of the year. In addition to the experiences, I am a bird lover and a keen student of all natural phenomena.

"Last autumn I sought shelter in the confines of a large wood about five miles from Cardiff. I was ensconced beneath the sable foliage of a thick hollybush and was further protected from rain and cold winds by the dense foliage of coniferous trees which more or less formed the margin of the wood. One morning about 8.15, or soon after daylight, I espied a cock Blackbird crouching against the base of an oak trunk. It remained motionless, and as the light advanced I perceived that its eyes were closed. Putting the factors together, I became aware that I was watching a dying bird. As the thought ran through my mind two old hen Blackbirds appeared on the scene. These were joined by two more old hens, and also by a handsome young cock. The hens fell to pecking and hustling the dying bird, the young cock meanwhile bouncing around, flourishing and bobbing his tail in the manner peculiar to the sex, as if he were beyond the possibility of such maltreatment! In about half-an-hour the old cock bird lay dead. The others flew off immediately. I rose and handled the poor old cock, whose body was still warm, its legs having only just extended in rigor mortis. No more would he tune his puny pipes! I re-placed it exactly where it died. I left the spot ruminating how cruel is Nature in some of her moods.

"I have found dead birds in cavities between branch and trunk of trees.

"In the spring of 1909 (March) I was tramping between Weymouth and Bridport—nineteen miles. There had been a very heavy snowfall during the previous night. En route I found eight young Thrushes, dead and dying of starvation and exposure. They were about eight months old, probably the last brood of the previous breeding season. What becomes of such birds? Sometimes rodents eat them, bones and all. Others rapidly disintegrate after the loss of the flesh, and are blown in sections into crevices or are trampled out of existence. On one occasion I found the skeleton of a bird of the Fieldfare type wedged tightly in between thorns in a thick-set hedge. It had probably been sucked by a weasel or shot."

In the next issue, Mr. M. Radley wrote: "'E. F.' is quite right in pointing out that birds attack and kill off any sickly member of their kind. Even in the case of the domestic fowl this can often be observed. A sick hen, crouching down in a dark corner of the fowl-house, invariably comes in for the pecks of all the other inmates.

"It is the nature of all wild creatures to creep away into a thicket or dark hole to die, and that may be one of the reasons why one so rarely sees the corpse of a bird in the fields and woods frequented by man.

"Both of your correspondents, however, seem to have forgotten the work of that useful little scavenger, the sexton or burying beetle. Thousands of these insects are at work in our woods and fields. Shortly after a bird, mole, squirrel, or other small creature dies, the sextons, with their keen sense of smell, scent the carcases and fly to it. They scoop out the earth from beneath the body, which ultimately sinks into the hole thus made. The female beetle then bores holes in the carcase and deposits her eggs in them, knowing that when these hatch into grubs they will be provided with abundance of food from the decaying body which surrounds them.

"A collector knows well that a dead mole or bird forms good bait for both the sexton and tiger beetles. In a wood in Devon I once saw burying beetles at work within an hour of the bait being laid."

Shepherd's Purse as a Remedy for Diarrhœa.

SIR,—As I myself find a lot of good information in CAGE BIRDS, I thought this little remedy might be of benefit to others. I happened, in conversation with a capable physician, to learn that "shepherd's purse" was a capital thing for diarrhœa in human beings. So I decided to try it on my birds, which I did, with excellent results. The birds readily take it, and always enjoy it.

SIR,—Could any of your readers supply me with the following information: (1) The address of Southall Bros. and Barclay, or (2) where I could obtain Southall's Aquarium sea salt, and (3) where I could obtain Specific Gravity Bulbs, for the aquarium? I have Bennett's "Book of Aquaria," but need the above information, and trust to be supplied with it by fellow-fanciers. I have tried P. H. Gosse's recipe, but can't get it right.

To Preserve a Wooden Aviary Floor.

SIR, In reply to Mr A. B. Timmis's letter for a wood preservative and a non-poisonous solution, he cannot possibly do better, in my humble opinion, than use "Peter's Carbolineum," which costs about 3s. 9d. a gallon, and one gallon will cover from 30 to 50 square yards (one coat) according to the nature and the surface of the wood to be treated. It should be applied hot, and be given at least two coats. I believe the solution is only procurable from builders. It is undoubtedly, to my mind, the best thing of its kind at present on the market, and it possesses all the necessary requirements.

The Ring Danger: A Warning and a Question.

SIR,—I have a hen that had its leg off, and it has had fertile eggs and brought me up three nests of young ones. It had its leg off close to its hip, and it is as good as ever it was. So I am sure your correspondent's hen will be worth keeping. I wish success to CAGE BIRDS.

RICHARD HOWARD.

SIR,—In reply to "A Lover of Canaries," I may say that I had a hen that unfortunately caught its leg in the wires of the cage when it was about 10 weeks old. I had to cut its foot off close to the hock. I kept the bird for one season and then let a friend of mine have it. This season is its third, and every season it has had fertile eggs and hatched and fed the young well. It has always gone under the name of "Peggy." I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

Information on the Growing of Dandelion.

SIR,—With regard to Mr. Whittle's inquiry re the growing of dandelion, I have been successful in the following way: When out gathering dandelion I cut off the roots 4 inches below the ground; then plant them in a corner of the garden—as many roots as I require. If planted now they will be springing up next March ready for the breeding season. I trust this will be useful to Mr. Whittle.

W. RATCLIFF.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Whittle, the seeds should be sown in the spring, in a rather moist soil, previously well dug; or the roots may be planted now. In the following spring, as soon as the plants begin to push above ground, they may be covered with a layer of sand three or four inches in thickness. Or flower pots may be placed over the plants. Either of these plans ensures an early tender growth. The plants should not be allowed to scatter their seeds in the summer, unless you grow nothing but dandelions. Seeds should be sown on top of soil and covered with a layer of sand or fine soil.

A. E. WILKINS.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. J. Whittle's query re the growing of dandelion, I would like to say, feed your birds with the seed you have in hand; then in the early new year keep a sharp look out for young dandelion—it commences to sprout as early as anything I know in the old beds of cottage gardens, and hedgerows. Many is the time I have asked the householder's permission to weed his garden of the young dandelion, and I have never yet been refused. Use a strong knife when getting the plants up, and be sure to get a portion of root with each head. Re plant them in a sheltered position, and you will have plenty of dandelion to cut at by the time you require it for the birds, more especially if you have an old glazed window frame that you can put over a forcing box. I formerly had forty feet or more under glass, though this year I have grown it in beds in the open, and have been using it practically all through the season. I now have a late nest of young Yorkies that are being fed on dandelion, and all my other birds are having more or less of the same herb. It certainly is a splendid stand-by for the bird breeder. All the dandelion users I have spoken to this season have done well, and I have had my best season by far with never a bad feeding hen, though, through business pressure, after the birds were paired up and had built their nests, we carried most of them into a spare room, hung the nests on the wall, giving the birds their liberty to "go" as they pleased; they "pleased" to give us about twenty young in the first round and brought them up too with dandelion as the green food. Our dandelion is in fine fettle to-day, cultivation does it a power of good. We have tried to raise it from seed, and so have several of our friends, all with the same result—it refused to "come up."

The Plainhead Judges at a Coming Glasgow Show.

SIR,—In your issue of August 20th, there is inserted a letter, under the signature of J. Sinclair, criticising the judges appointed for a certain Glasgow Show. I, John Sinclair, 4, Clavering Street, Paisley, wish it to be known that I am not in any way responsible for same. I prefer to do my criticising at the meeting appointed for the selection of judges.

Canaries Dying: Advice Wanted.

SIR,—I have lost six Canaries this last fortnight. The birds seem all right at nighttime, and the following morning make a weasing noise, although the room where they are kept is well ventilated and free from draughts. The birds are always eating, and yet when you come to catch them the bones are almost through the skin, and death relieves the suffering. Perhaps some of the readers of CAGE BIRDS could give me some advice, which will be thankfully received.

Progress in Scotch Fancy and Belgian Circles.

SIR,—With the return of the show season the probability is that a good entry will put in an appearance in the Scots Fancy sections. During the holidays a visit to this and that bird room has been a pleasure to me. Messrs. McClure, Black, McLennan and Nairn have been fortunate in numbers and quality. It goes without saying that they could have a show themselves; they have reason to be proud of the work of the year. Buff birds (cocks and hens) in their various sections are strong in merit; indeed, we have seldom come across anything to equal them, and be it to their credit the size is in advance of former years. Next month will give them a chance of coming together and exhibiting their fine qualities. Yellow hens, clear, piebald, and foul, are also a grand team, full of style; for young birds they have not been surpassed for years. Breeders unfortunate numerically, yet have birds of good quality—four or five birds, with one probable winner, is satisfactory, and that has been the experience in a number of rooms. Belgians, so far as the writer knows, have not advanced in quality; they are too small and thin through the chest. They are not getting encouragement, for the City of Glasgow O.A. are reducing the classes. Would it not have been wiser to have increased the prize-money and classes? It would, in after years, yield a return all over the Scotch Fancy section. "Common" Canaries are plentiful, and now is the time to secure foster parents. Fifty per cent. of the calamities experienced is due to being too late in securing feeders. They may be done without, but a pair of reliable feeders are worth their weight in gold. Some advocate the Border Fancy Canary. A good sized bird is preferable; it can pull the young up, having more power and endurance. For beauty of plumage and action, the Border Fancy Canary carries the palm. They can be reared anywhere. Beginners nowadays generally start with Borders, which is right and proper provided the knowledge gained is afterwards utilised for the breeding of the higher class birds.

Is There Any Cure?

SIR,—I have a cock Song Thrush, who has a white disc forming on the ball of each eye, and he seems to be going blind. He is but a year and six months old, and a good songster, and is kept in a cage in an open window facing a street. Can any of the numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS tell me the cause, and if there is any cure? In other respects he seems all right, although he has begun to moult. This blindness has been coming on very gradually for some time.

How a Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrid was Bred.

SIR,—"Mrs. Multy" is named after the place, Mullyfarnham, commonly called Multy, in Westmeath, from whence she came by post in an egg packed in cotton wool. The egg was supposed to be a Goldfinch's; it was hatched out by a Canary. In a fortnight little "Multy" promised to establish a record for size in British Goldies. The promise was not fulfilled as she is a Greenfinch. She was hatched in 1908, and passed the next two years quietly, a spinster companion to another maiden lady (genus homo). In April of this year she was mated to a yellow Norwich. She accepted his attentions fairly graciously, and paid a good deal of attention to the nest pan, being successful in removing its felt lining. She then commenced to lay—off the perch. Of six eggs four unbroken ones were given to a Canary to hatch, and proved unfertile. A separation was arranged by mutual agreement. The Canary was mated to one of his own species, and "Mrs. Multy" to a British Goldfinch. She laid five eggs, of which two were hatched out by a Canary, who allowed the little hybrids to die. Five more eggs were laid; some were broken, and the others were unfertile. Still another five were laid, of which one proved fertile. The youngster, brought up by a Canary, is now five weeks old, doing well for himself. "Mrs. Multy" was now given a nest-shaped basket made of green snowberry twigs, with the leaves on, and a screen of holly. She laid two eggs on the floor, and commenced to build the same day. Two more eggs were laid, one in the nest and one on the floor, building still going on. She was given three china eggs, which she rattled through the bottom of the nest. Then she was given three of her own. She sat on these, and laid three more in the nest. Of these six eggs one hatched out on August 6th, and one the following day. The others were clear. The young ones are now a week old, and are doing well. "Mrs. Multy" feeds them and cleans them in a most exemplary manner, while her husband for the time being looks on and makes music, "swaggering" himself behind a wire partition. "Mrs. Multy's" home is an ordinary three-compartment box cage. She is sturdy, active, and very self-composed. Her favourite food for infants is hemp seed and dandelion leaves. She is given egg and biscuit, and a variety of seeds and greenstuff, but uses little except the hemp and dandelion.

An Albino Jackdaw that Laughs and Talks.

SIR,—Having heard of a White Jackdaw in a village some few miles from where I live, and being a lover of Albino and rare-feathered birds, I went in search of this freak of Nature. Mounting my cycle I started off, having to pass through the sleepy town of Bridgnorth, with its ancient-looking town hall built from an old barn, standing in the middle of its main street in High Town. A few minutes' riding brings me into Low Town. The high and low parts of this town are connected by a railway. Then over the stone bridge that spans the beautiful river Severn I soon find myself on the Stourbridge road. Branching off from it is a country lane which leads to the village I am in search of. At last, after a pleasant spin through winding country lanes, I find myself in the pretty little village of Claverley. Stopping opposite its old church I enquired of a boy in the street about the white Jackdaw, and I had stopped in front of the very house where it was kept. After rapping at the door I was answered by the old lady of the house, to whom I stated my business, and she at once asked me to come through the house and into the back yard, where the white Jackdaw was kept in a large cage. She told me that it could talk and laugh. It is pure white in colour, not having one single dark feather; and it has pink legs and feet and a pink beak. Its mistress told me she reared it from a young one. It was found on the ground under its nest when quite young, as if the old birds had thrown it out on account of its colour. The lady told me that the butcher of the village wanted it when it was a young one, telling her it would moult out black. So she told him that if it did he could have it. She sometimes now tells him it has not turned black, and it is now 6 years old. She gets visitors to see her pet, of which she is very fond, and the parson of the village is interested in this bird, she told me, and had put a note in the church magazine about it; and he advised her to charge a penny for anyone to look at it, he himself and some friends being the first to pay, thus giving her a start. I promised to send her a copy of CAGE BIRDS. I always buy an extra copy from my newsagent when I want to send one away. I like to keep my CAGE BIRDS to refer back to at times. While I was telling the old lady some little story, she laughed, and the Jackdaw flapped his wings and laughed as well. She keeps him caged because the only time he was at liberty a stranger in the village tried to take him away. The old lady keeps a large brown Owl, which she has reared, and I was surprised to learn that she fed him on bread and butter when she had no meat for him. Anyway, considering he was fed on such unnatural food, he looked very well indeed. The owner of the lovely white Jackdaw told me of the offers she had had for him, someone in Manchester having offered her a Parrot, and a new policeman who had come to the village had offered her a bantam and a Goldfinch, but she told them that if she parted with her Jackdaw she would have to go in black for him.

A Mule which Brought Home a Young Linnet.

SIR,—Thinking that my experience with our feathered pets might be of some interest to the readers of CAGE BIRDS, I am taking this opportunity to write a few lines. On August 16th I had a very interesting thing happen, and it is that which has prompted me to write. At the back of my house I have an aviary 12ft. by 5ft. by 6ft., which I built for the purpose of Hybrid breeding. On coming out of this aviary on August 16 a young Goldfinch Mule followed me out and took to the housetops. It being so young (five weeks to the day) I felt sure I should lose it. For some time it amused itself flying from house to house. Then it went for a good long flight, and flying round in circles, it attained a considerable height. Then dropping down almost perpendicular for a considerable distance, it took a wide circle and alighted on the aviary. As soon as I approached it it was off again. But now it had found its way back once, I felt sure it would return as soon as it began to feel hungry. I then shut all the other birds in their sleeping quarters, and left the door of the aviary wide open so that if it returned again it could get in. I then sat down in the garden to watch it for a time. Directly behind where I am living there is a piece of waste ground, and I had watched the bird fly round this several times; each time it came back and alighted on a house-top; after taking a few moments' rest it was off again. On passing over this waste ground I noticed another bird rise up and join it in its flight. This time, instead of returning to a house-top, the young mule alighted on the aviary, its companion doing likewise. I could then see that this bird was a young Linnet about the same age as the mule. I was successful in catching the Linnet, but the Mule took off again; so I left it to come back at its pleasure. After being at liberty just over 3 hours, it came back and went inside the aviary. This made the fourth time I have had a bird escape; on each of the other occasions it has been a Canary that has escaped, but in each instance it has returned after an interval varying from 10 minutes to 1 hour. But never before has a bird brought a companion back with it. The young Linnet is a very promising young cock, showing good distinct markings and very nice flights. I doubt if I could have picked a more promising bird if I had had a few score to pick from. I have not had a very successful season, having only reared two young Mules, although I have had a considerable number in the nests up to a week old when the hens stopped feeding. With two Bullfinch hens that were flying in the aviary, one built a nest and laid five eggs, which I transferred to a Canary. But all were unfertile, although I had watched a cock Goldfinch pair with this bird several times. The other one built a nest and then went "thick" and died. All my birds are now deep in moult, so I am hoping for a more successful time next season. With best wishes for CAGE BIRDS,

A. E. ARGYLE.

Concerning White Java Sparrows.

SIR,—A word or two concerning my White Java Sparrows may prove interesting to the many readers of CAGE BIRDS, who, like myself, take not a little pleasure in foreign bird-keeping. White Java Sparrows are the most fascinating and cheeky little birds it is possible to find anywhere. They are pure white in colour, with pink beaks, legs and feet, and dark eyes (which I am told by an eminent naturalist prove that they are a distinct species and not an Albino sport from the Grey Javas). These birds, like Budgerigars, are content with a cocoanut husk to nest in, but they very much like to have hay, feathers and shreds of material given them, with which to line it; and in common with our English Sparrows they prefer the scraps to be bright in colour. I do not consider that these birds stand severe weather as well as their hardier companions (Budgerigars and Cockatiels) in my aviary, so when I found mine standing with ruffled feathers and one leg drawn up I put them into a large cage, brought them into the house, and hung them before a sunny window where they completely recovered, and have done well ever since. I feed the Javas on millet and Canary seed, with a little rice; they are also provided as they should be, with cuttlefish, grit and greenfood.

A Distemper for Bird Cages and Bird-rooms.

SIR,—The following distemper will not rub off when dry, but you can wash it off with hot water. By being able to wash it off clean each time you will always have a smooth clean job. With other distempers that are hard to wash off you will find that what is not washed off will flake off in time, and then the work will always look bad and rough. Get three knobs of whiting, 2lbs. of size, 1oz. of powdered alum, 1 gill of turps—you can buy all these things at any oilshop for about fivepence. To make the distemper follow these instructions closely, and you will have something worth using. Get half a pail of cold water, break up the whiting into it, and let it soak for half an hour; then drain off the surplus water, squeeze the size up as fine as you can into another pail, and add half a pint of boiling water; then work it up well with your hand till it is in strings of jelly. Add the turps, and mix well. Now mix it with the whiting with your hand, add the alum and mix it up well. Strain through a piece of canvas, and stand it in the coldest place you can till next day. It will then be ready for use. If you wish to stain it, mix the dry colour stiff in water, and add it to the distemper before straining; when it is chilled beat it up well with a broad stick to mix the turps that has come to the top during the night. If you find the distemper works too stiff, add a little size water. Emerald tint is a very nice colour to have the distemper, and it is cheap.

Hens which Refuse to Feed their Young.

SIR,—Young hens are often bad feeders, especially over their first nests. Many a young bird has died from this cause. This letter is for the benefit particularly of young beginners, as most of the old hands can take care of the birds themselves; and as there are so many new fanciers joining the ranks, a few lines on this subject may be of much use to them. A case came under my notice a few days ago. A young friend who had this year made a start with Canaries had one of his best hens which refused to feed the young. She sat very close and would not get off the nest at all. He came to me for advice. I told him to take the cock away and see if that would mend matters. He did so, but she still refused to feed and let all the young ones die, although my friend managed to give them a bit of egg food two or three times a day. He managed to keep them alive for three or four days by this means. By chance I had a nest of young Linnets brought me, these being four or five days old. They were alive, but too cold and weak to feed. I got him to place them under the hen just for warmth, so that I could hand rear them. The next morning they were quite lively, and would open their mouths. The hen still refused to feed them, but would sit on them. I got him to give them some food several times a day. This he did for three or four days. This "trick" gave the hen confidence, and she at last started to feed them right well; and she has brought them up well by herself. I now felt quite certain she would feed her own next nest, as the cock had been returned to her. It is not every one I am aware can get young birds to put under their hens as in this case, but they can feed them by hand a few times daily, so as to keep them alive. And this would give the hen confidence, and get her more used to her duties. This dodge I tried years ago, when I had hens which refused to feed their young the first few days. This frequently happens with young hens over their first nest, as I have said. Some fanciers I know often get rid of them at once without giving them another trial. I have saved many a good hen in this way. These notes may, and I trust will, be the means of young fanciers saving many a nest by the rendering of a little help to young hens who make so much fuss over their young that they refuse to get off them to feed.

OLD BREEDER.

Goldfinches and Bullfinches in Huntingdonshire.

SIR,—This year it seems, from reports from various parts, that Goldies are more numerous in Hunts. than has been the case for some years past. One lane seemed to be quite "alive" with them. Several nests of which I have heard and of which the young have now flown contained six youngsters each. "Sixes" seem quite a common thing among Goldfinches, in this district at any rate; and especially so of late years. Very few of these nests get taken; Goldfinches are generally late breeders; the trees they choose for nesting get plenty of foliage on them by the time breeding starts, and the boys have generally given up nesting by then. Very few Bullfinch nests are reported about the Fens; the birds generally breed up in the Highlands and round about the woods and preserves.

HYBRIDISER.

Several letters unavoidably held over.

Notes from Erin.

THE breeding season now being at a close, fanciers are devoting their time and attention to their young stock in preparing for the most troublesome time in a fancier's experience. Breeding cages have to be cleaned and thoroughly overhauled after the couples are split up; and the young stock has to be divided into twos and threes and placed on colour food so as to be ready before starting to moult. On the whole breeding results will compare favourably with those of previous seasons, although the season has been very trying owing to the changeable conditions of weather. Some breeders had a very successful season, and some had a very unfortunate time. Several with whom I have come in contact did not have a young bird although they had a good stock paired up. But our hobby is like everything else in life—full of disappointments. Yet, if at first we don't succeed, let us try again.

LONDONDERRY fanciers have met with disappointment this season, with the exception of one or two who have done well.

DUNDALK fanciers generally had a very fair season. Messrs. Lavery, Coyne, Keating, Gaskin, McEntaggert did exceptionally well with their Yorkies. Mr. McCann had 14 or 15 pairs, and although he had a large number of eggs he has only managed to rear some half dozen young. But he is not disheartened. He attributes his failure to his room being too low; consequently the temperature varied too much. But he has now gone to considerable expense and trouble in having the room rebuilt and the ceiling raised some 3 feet higher. Next season we hope to see him repaid for his trouble, and we wish him success.

BELFAST on the whole did well with Yorkies, Norwich, Crests, Scotch Fancies, and Mules.

DUBLIN men have similar experiences to relate. Some have done fairly well, while others only have a few birds. But it is hoped that what they lack in quantities may be made up to them in quality. Portrush.—Mrs. Tayler has had a similar experience. She has succeeded in rearing a fair number of Norwich, but was disappointed with her Yorkshires, rearing only about half a dozen owing to hens refusing to feed. This lady has also reared five Hybrids—Goldies-Greenies—and we trust she may moult them successfully so that we may all have a look at these very interesting specimens at exhibitions. Her old Yorks. winners are doing well, and with a successful moult will no doubt repeat what they did on the show bench last season.

BANGOR and District fanciers have apparently done well, and there are many promising young Mules and Hybrids to be found in the various rooms.

CORK.—I understand the fanciers from the South have done well, and we hope to see many winners coming out at our shows from this centre.

SLIGO results are very fair, and no doubt Messrs. Mulligan, Devins, Tighe, Osbourn, and Anderson, with others, will have a few champions to exhibit. Banbridge results were very fair. Mules and Hybrids are, I understand, numerous. Lurgan fanciers, I believe, on the whole are very fortunate, and are hoping to bench a few eye "openers" when the time comes.

THE show season so far promises to be a success, and we hope Lurgan and Derry will buck up this year and give us a chance of exhibiting with them, and thus increase the Irish shows this season and encourage and promote our hobby in their midst.

HOLYHEAD.

Second annual show held 16th at the Market Hall, a grand place for the purpose. There was a great improvement in the classification for so young a show. The Borders were cancelled. Norwich were the feature of the show. Mr. Winnard had the class to himself, with a grand team, shown at Vaynol. Yorkshires and Goldfinches were nice lots. Local birds were well represented. The secretary is Mr. H. Jones, who worked well; and Mr. Campell also made every effort to ensure the success of the show. Mr. J. O. Lloyd made the awards.

NORTH SUBURBAN CANARY I.S. (Australia).

The 15th annual show of the North Suburban Canary Improvement Society was held on June 14th, 15th, and 16th, in the Town Hall, Brunswick. The show was opened by Cr. Hichford, the mayor of Brunswick, who gave a very "birdy" speech. Afternoon tea and music were provided by the Misses G. Ward and G. Whaley. The entries numbered close on 750, which speaks volumes for the energetic secretary, Mr. C. F. C. Rose, who was supported by a committee who are worthy of praise for the way in which the birds were staged and the show managed. The society is composed of fanciers of the true order, having Mr. G. Ward as president, Mr. G. Whaley and C. Meaker as vice-presidents, Mr. E. Lockington as treasurer, and Messrs. W. Alder, E. Baillie, A. G. Boardman, R. Thompson, W. H. Stevens, and G. W. Alexander as committee. The show was a gigantic success, and the best held in the State; it was far in advance of those of previous years, and the quality was of a very high order. The Norwich were a very good lot, and some high class Crests and Crest-breds were staged. The British, Foreign, and Australian Finches were a great attraction, some being very rare, as also was a Hybrid between a Silverbill and Zebra Finch, gaining 1st and special. The judges were:- Messrs E. Lockington (Crests), G. W. Alexander (Plainheads), A. G. Gardner (Cinnamons) G. Coleman (Yorkshires, and any other variety), G. Whaley and G. Kearland (British, Australian, and Foreign Finches). One bird that attracted a lot of attention was the beautiful Crested Canary, which had been imported from Mr. Barnett, of England, by Mr. A. B. Mason. The bird is said to be the best Crested Canary in the world. It has a wonderfully large crest, very dense in feather. The most successful exhibitors of Canaries were: Crests and Crest-breds, Mr. A. B. Mason (best bird in the show "King of Kings"; Crest-bred challenge cup, Mr. G. Whaley, also best Crest-bred in show; and Messrs. W. H. Stevens, S. Chambers, A. G. Gardner, and J. Gilbert. Plainhead Norwich: Mr. G. Whaley, challenge trophy; Messrs. Warner and Rose, W. T. Francis, A. Hilton, F. R. Chapman, J. Hotery, and C. E. Schieferdecker (best bird in show). Cinnamons Mr. H. Kilner, challenge trophy; and Mr. R. Francis (best bird in show). Yorkshires: Mr. W. J. Myring (challenge cup); and Messrs. J. Myring and J. Goulding. Copies: Messrs. Dunn and Halliday, and Chittenden (England), also in Yorkshires. The foreign and Australian Finches: Mr. A. G. Boardman (securing all the leading prizes).

BRIGHTON C.B.A.

A nice little show and judging competition were held at the King and Queen Hotel, Marlborough Place, on August 10th, when there was a good show of Canaries and British birds. Mr. J. Roast was the final judge, and gave general satisfaction. Mr. E. Cadman took the special for best bird in show with a fine Greenie. The result of the judging competition was: F. Dandridge, 62; G. B. Absalon, 61; C. Pearson, 35; G. France, 32; H. Akehurst, 34; E. Cadman, 29; A. Hollingshead, 19; B. C. Comber, 11; W. H. Gibb, 10.

A most successful nest feather show was held on July 30th. The entries totalled 90, and the quality throughout was exceedingly fine. Mr. J. W. Clemmison judged, and he had to study each class closely to pick out the winners, so keen was the competition; but his awards were received with very satisfaction. Mr. E. Sutton won special for best bird in show with one of his noted Norwich.

ARDUDWY (Merionethshire).

Tenth annual show took place at the Park, Plas-y-Cryn, Llanbedr, by kind permission of W. Jones, Esq., on August 20th, the weather being very unfavourable. The show was well managed by the able and most willing secretary, Mr. Ellis Jones, the treasurers, Messrs. R. Griffith and W. Jones, the chairman, Mr. J. Thomas, the vice-chairman, Mr. J. M. Jones, and a good staff of stewards, who all worked well to make the show a success. We were pleased to see a few more classes and specials added this year, and probably a few more for Norwich and Yorkshires would prove an additional source of success. Norwich and Yorkshires mustered well, quality being good in both sections. Goldies were good, but few. Master O. R. Jones won special for best bird in show with a grand Norwich. Mr. E. J. Jones (Talysarn, Penygroes) made the awards, which were well received.

NOR (6): 1, sp best bird in show, Master O. R. Jones, grand cl. buff, immense size, good col., ideal type; 2, J. E. Jones, another buff, fine head, size and substance, pressed winner hard; 3, J. HALLAM & ECCLESALL.

Show held on August 18th, under canvas in the beautifully set out Endcliffe Park, kindly lent by the City Council. Considering the period of the year, the birds were really better in plumage than one expected. Entries were a little in advance on last year's. That well-known Mule expert, Mr. R. Colton, assisted by Mr. A. Somerfield, had the management of affairs, and right well did they execute their duties, praise being due to both. One rather regrettable hitch cropped up—the exhibit belonging to Mr. H. S. Davies, of Llandilo, did not arrive until after judging. Awfully hard lines, as without doubt it would have comfortably won in its class. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) judged.

YORKS. (4): 1, Bishop, cl. yell., capital feather, good colour, nice length and position; 2, vhc, Dr. Craig, buff, neck marked, fine stand, grand quality, lengthy and leggy; 3, Bingham, buff, cinn. marked, shooty, good colour and feather. YELL., BRED 1910 (5): 1, Dr. Craig, cl., nicely clothed, good colour and length, with a clean moult, should come out well; 2, hc, Bishop, cl., lengthy and slim, stands finely, very sweet; 3, Simpson, cl., true character, capital quality; vhc, Woolhouse. BUFF, 1910 (6): 1, 3, Bishop, bonny youngsters, clear and wing marked, both lovely feather, full of breed, good length; 2, c, Butler, marked wing, tight as wax, nice stand; vhc, Woolhouse; hc, Simpson. NOR. YELL., BRED 1910 (2): 1, Gill, cl. yell., very cobby, grand feather, good bird; 2, Kaye, var., capital quality, nice one. BUFF, 1910 (4): 1, Woolhouse, buff, marked wing and eyes, grandly clothed, fine shape, A1 colour and meal, in rare fettle; 2, 3, Clarke, both cl. buffs, former shade the better in headpoints, otherwise equal; vhc, Booth. MULE (4): 1, 2, vhc, Somerfield, both Greenie Cans., former the well-known yell., looking superb, latter good sized buff of nice shape, colour and feather; 3, Simpson, bordering on six-pointed, buff Goldie Can., nice markings, in moult. BRIT. HARD (9): 1, hc, Davison, Linnet, magnificent colour, beautifully pencilled, grand shape and size, in the very pink of condition; 2, 3, Axe, Brattling and Hammer, both in A1 trim, pat down well; vhc, Salter; c, Walsh. SOFT (7): 1, 3, vhc, Jackson, Chat and Gale, former in lovely bloom, shown for all he was worth, latter good size and shape, nice colour; 2, c, Davison, Waxwing, in nice feather, close up; hc, Milne, No. 863a, Fish, absent. CAGE BIRDS, 151, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Under the White Rose.

FRIENDS of Mr. F. Armstrong will be greatly concerned to hear of the loss sustained by this true fancier last week. His only daughter was taken away after considerable suffering lasting many months, and when I say that she was only about eighteen or nineteen years of age, the feeling of sorrow will be even more intense. To Mr. Armstrong she was a fancier friend; at any time she would take charge of the birds for an indefinite period. Also as his assistant in secretarial work she was invaluable. Therefore the loss is to the Fancy in general, and I am sure all fanciers will feel with Mr. Armstrong in his time of trial.

THE year book of the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. is now in the hands of the secretary. And a natty little book it is, containing full particulars of officers, rules and regulations, minimum classification to be given at, and the names of, shows having the C.M.Y.C.C. patronage, not forgetting the junior novice classes at Yorkshire Union Shows, the balance-sheet for last year, the list of members' names and addresses, and full particulars of next season's competitions. Of the latter, first and foremost comes the open competition, for which four grand prizes are offered; a four-guinea special as usual for the first, and other good prizes for the runners up. Then we have this year the CAGE BIRDS prizes, for both the champions and the amateurs—three good prizes in each section, totalling in value over £4 10s. The novice members, that is, those who are out of the Y.U. novice classes, have to compete in the open, and three good specials are given to them. Then the junior novices have also three nice prizes to run for, and they have to compete for these in the novice classes at Y.U. shows; thus having the advantage of being able to compete for their Union medal at the same time they can easily secure two specials where only one was possible before. Lucky novices! They are now living in quite palmy days. Over and above these, there are the half-crown specials for most points gained by fourth-prize birds in each section at each show; winners of first prizes do not compete for these. The novices have a chance again. So, if not already members, send your names up now.

BINGLEY was the scene of a little excitement (amongst a few of the birdy men there) on Sunday evening last, there being quite a chase after a buff-marked young Canary belonging to a certain fancier there (I won't tell who it is, but he keeps his birds at the school close by Myrtle Park). Passing through Bingley at about 6.30 p.m., I thought I would call and see my old fancier friend, Mr. J. Hartley. As we approached the house we beheld Mrs. H. at the door looking over towards the park. "Is James in?" I queried. "He is just over there behind the school. A Canary has escaped, and he and a few others are helping the owner to catch it," she replied. I found them gazing up into the trees and going round the hen-runs there. No bird, however, could be seen. A few minutes afterwards one of the assistants came round to say he had nearly had it—over by some houses—but it had slipped him. Away we went over there, but the bird could nowhere be seen, and had to be given up for lost. Hard lines!

IN regard to the visit which Mr. H. A. Nimmo paid to Yorkshire birdy men a few weeks ago, I hear that he was delighted with the reception given to him, that he thoroughly enjoyed the chats on birdy matters and the friendly exchange of views, and hopes that some of those he visited will return the compliment, when he will be glad to do all he can to make their visit a pleasure.

Eastfield Side C.B.F.S.

The members held their annual ramble on August 20, when, despite the bad weather, a very enjoyable afternoon was spent. Nearly a score of members met at headquarters (Mason's Arms), and journeyed to South Wingfield by brake at 2 o'clock p.m., where we had tea. The host and hostess (Mr. and Mrs. Hunt) at the Abbey Hotel proved that they knew how to provide a repast. After tea we had a selection by our noted Kaffir band, and songs by Messrs. J. Smedley, A. Wright, and J. G. Wright. Then we rambled to Crich, where we had a look at Crich Stand, spent a happy hour, and then came back to the interesting old ruins of Wingfield Abbey. On the journey we found several birds' nests, including those of the Blackbird, Thrush, Chaffinch and Greenfinch. Mr. H. Hall proved to be an expert at birding the nests. Then we went back to the Abbey Hotel and spent an enjoyable evening, with Mr. J. Cardin at the piano. There was plenty of singing, Mr. J. Smedley and the Bros. Wright being the chief contributors. The time arrived for returning all too soon.—R. NUTTALL.

NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

The committee, at their meeting, held August 20th, allotted the two remaining cup competitions to Crewe, October 14th and 15th and Manchester, October 27th and 29th, so that the cup competitions will now be held at the following shows: Wellingborough, Crewe, Manchester, Liverpool, and Nottingham. Messrs. T. Seed and E. Sutton have given 10/6 each for the runners up of Davis' clock. May I again remind members that subs are now due and must be paid before the final cup show, or they will not be eligible to compete for special? It would relieve me of much work, and save the club much expense if members would only send same without a special letter.—JNO. HOPKINS.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state where stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

* "Going Halves."

When I was going through the park I saw a large white Cockatoo and a small Parrot in one cage. When I gave them a nut, the Parrot, whose feathers were green, took it from me. Instead of cracking it, he gave it to the Cockatoo, who soon broke the shell, and the birds divided the nut between each other. This may show many how they can be unselfish.—Sent by Miss W. Sharkey (age 9), 41, Cowper Road, Old Swan, Liverpool.

 Goldie's Faithfulness.

I had a Goldfinch which was very affectionate. He was also tame, and won'd fly about the room. One day the window was opened and Goldie flew out. We were dreadfully sorry to lose him, but knowing his tameness we put his cage into the garden. We went out and forgot about him, and when we came home we were told by the neighbours that a little bird had sat there all the afternoon. We went to look in the cage, and there was Goldie asleep on his perch. I think this was very faithful of him to return home, and shows that he loved us.—Sent by May Somers (age 13), 66, Francis Street, Chapeltown Road, Leeds.

* The Sparrow on the Tree.

"Come in, you naughty bird, the rain is pouring down.
What will your mother do, if you sit there and drown?
You are a very thoughtless bird, and never think of me."
"I'm sure I do not care," said the Sparrow on the tree.

"Come in, you naughty bird, I see you're very cold;
So come in here at once, or I shall have to scold.
If you stay out I know you'll have rheumatics in the knee."
"I'm sure I do not care," said the Sparrow on the tree.

"Come in, my darling bird, and sit by me in here.
I'll dry your little wings; they must be wet, I fear.
Please come into this barn, my son, and cuddle close to me."
But never another word said the Sparrow on the tree.

The Cinnamon Marked Yorkshire Canary Club's handbook of rules, etc., for the season 1910-11 has just been issued. It comprises the members' names and addresses, the competition conditions, and the balance-sheet for 1909-10, which shows cash in hand of £2 14s. 6d., only 1s. 4½d. of which was brought from the previous year's accounts. The secretaries of the club are Messrs. S. B. Grayshon and F. Allen, Wormald Street, Flush, Heckmondwike, Yorks, from whom particulars as to membership, etc., may be had.

A copy of the Southern Yorkshire Canary Club's handbook for 1910-11 has reached us from the secretary, Mr. J. W. Rennie, The Junction Hotel, Andover, Hants. It includes a list of the names and addresses of the officers and members of the club, the scale of points for exhibition, the rules and bye-laws of the club, and the balance-sheet for 1909-10 (showing cash in hand of £6 9s. 11d., as against £2 17s. 8d. brought from the previous accounts). Other particulars, respecting membership, etc., may be had of the secretary.

A Useful Bird.

Half a hundred mice have been taken out of the crop of a single Buzzard. A more useful bird it would be difficult to find.

The Wary Ringed Plover.

It is said that the Ringed Plover (most wary of birds) is exceedingly tame in the remote northern districts of Scotland. Possibly it is so little disturbed by man, that it has no fear of him.

Rearing a Cuckoo.

Young Cuckoos have been reared by almost all our Passerine birds, but Wagtails, Pipits, and Hedge Sparrows appear to be the species mostly victimised. To rear one of those ravenous birds is a task far beyond the rearing of an ordinary brood of small birds, and just before the young Cuckoo can find his own food, the foster parents look fagged and tired to death of their task.

Fifty Years in the Fancy.

An Interview with Mr. William Shakespeare, of Kentish Town.

"What are your views on the colour question?"

"To-day this has to be viewed from a different standpoint to that which we viewed it from thirty years ago. In those days we all bred for colour, and the system of colour feeding was not so general, as its secrets were not so well understood as they are to-day. Further, we were just then in the flush of the first fruits of the K.N. feeding, and breeders prepared their birds for the K.N. and the non-K.N. fed classes. Nowadays colour is open, and any shade is permissible. Taking the Norwich Plainheads all in all, I should say there has been great advance. In fact, to such a high standard has the breed been brought that I don't think it can go much farther, and that presently a rest will have to be taken. Those who are seeking for new fields to conquer in Norwich should take up the breeding of the Even-marked birds. There is a big field here for fanciers of an enterprising turn of mind, and nothing to my mind looks better than a typical, rich-coloured Even-marked Norwich."

"What about your other favourites, the Crests?"

"I could say a lot about these if I only had the gift of speech in a greater degree. No words of mine can convey all that I feel about the Crests. They have made more headway than all the other breeds put together. Then look at the lovely Crest-breds. Years ago they were useless, except for breeding purposes, and fetched very little money. To-day they are as valuable, and just as much sought after both for breeding and exhibiting as the Crests. It is really wonderful what has been accomplished by Crest breeders, and the only fear now is that the breed has increased so tremendously in value that it has become the breed of the well-to-do fancier, and the working men do not breed Crests so largely as they used to do. This is the only drawback I can think of, but it's always the same—make a Fancy such as the working man cannot indulge in it, and its popularity begins to wane, and interest in its welfare decreases."

"From this I take it you consider high prices are not altogether for the benefit of the Fancy?"

"That is so."

"What about Dutch Frills; have you ever had anything to do with them?"

"Not as a breeder, but I have had over a score in my possession at once in the years that are long past."

"What for?"

"When the Crests were being improved Dutch Frills were largely used by some breeders, because they gave that much to be desired length of feather."

"What about the Borders?"

"This is another of the much improved breeds. The Borders to-day are much smarter, sleeker and typical than were the old-fashioned Cumberland fancies. They are very taking little birds, easy to breed, not so expensive as most other breeds, and they are finding many new friends every season, especially in the South."

"I fear I must be tiring you, but just one question more. Have you had any experience with that handsome, but almost defunct bird, the London Fancy?"

"What I have had to do with them has been more in the way of experimenting and trying to produce a London Fancy by a combination of Lizard and Norwich, also Lizard and Border blood, and from them I have bred some very nice birds. I have one, a hen, which except for a slight tick on one eye would not disgrace a really good class of London Fancies. I have had several birds that would have held their own well in competition, had classes been provided at any of our shows during the past four years. I am much interested in this old breed, and would like to see it brought to the front again. I am at the present time busy striving to produce something good in this line, and I hope before long to let the Fancy see a London Fancy as good as the champions of the ages past."

Wishing Mr. Shakespeare success in his endeavours to produce a tip-top London Fancy, I picked up my hat to go, at the same time apologising for the trouble I had put him to, and thanking him for his kindness in giving me such an amount of interesting information for the benefit of the readers of CAGE BIRDS.

My Experiences with the Norwich Plainhead Canary.

By ALFRED GREY (Morpeth).

Soft or Puffy-looking.

This can be attributed to several causes, the principal ones being diarrhœa, chills and insect pests. If it is diarrhœa, I put the birds on to milk sop, and sprinkle a little powdered chalk over it; a little scalded milk is also a good thing in place of drinking water.

Insect pests may be red mite or grey lice. If they are red mite they may be found in the crevices of the cage, at the back of the cage or on the partition on which the cage rests, and even in the seed boxes. I brush these places with methylated spirits and camphor.

If it is grey lice that are troubling the youngsters, they are much worse to deal with. I think these pests are got from old and lazy birds, for you will seldom find them on one year birds. If the parents or feeders have these grey lice on them, they will get into the young birds before they leave the nest, and will pester the young birds night and day until the latter pine away and die. To find these insects, take the bird in your left hand and turn it upon its back, and you will see them moving about amongst the feathers. Next transfer the bird to your right hand, and if there were many you will see them running in between your fingers. Get some freshly ground pyrethrum powder and dust the infested birds well with it, rubbing it gently in amongst the feathers all over the bird. Then take a cloth similar to that used when washing a bird; dust this also well with the powder, and roll the bird in it, leaving it in for ten minutes. After this remove the bird to a cage and give the bath, to which you have previously added quassia essence. You will find in a day or two that the bird is quite well again.

The "Fads of Judges."

The exhibition of one's birds is, of course, the pleasantest part of the hobby, and for my own part I have been wonderfully successful. To begin with, every fancier should try and get to the shows. There is no other way to see so distinctly what is wrong with your own birds. You should make up your mind to see every noted judge adjudicate on his Norwich classes. Everyone of the judges has some particular fad which, if you are observant, you will soon find out.

Some judges can't get over-size; some are "dead nuts" on quality of feather; some, however good the bird is otherwise, won't put him "in the first three" if it is narrow or snipy in the head; others, when the class is for clear, ticked, or variegated, go all for the clears. "Oh, I can't stand the dirty marked bird," is the answer you get if you ask why he is not further up. There are other judges who can't get past the red-hot one, and will allow it to beat a much better Norwich that is pale in colour.

I am glad to say there are some judges who will go for type alone. In my opinion type should be first, quality second, and then, two birds being equal in type and quality, the larger should win. It is easily understood why type should be first, for it is type that distinguishes a Norwich from a Yorkshire or any other variety.

I pretty well know now what every judge requires to "tickle his fancy." I remember once looking over the classes at South Shields with Mr. Robson, of Newcastle. We were looking at a hen class. He said, "Well, I don't like that big yellow hen you are wiuning with to-day, Alf." I said, "Then which do you think is the best hen in the class?" He pointed to one that was Commended. This was a very typical little variegated hen (which afterwards was first at the Scottish National). "Oh," I replied, "this hen is also mine." You see, when I don't know what the judge will go for I send the most typical hen I have and also the best of my large hens. "In this way," I said, "I stand a chance to win with one or the other of them." Many a time I have kept at home a bird that was fit to win at the Scottish National simply because I knew this bird would not suit this particular judge. I don't "care twopence" what class of bird a judge goes for if he will only stick to his particular fancy right through the classes, and not place one type in one class and another type in another class. Let him keep to his type right through and I am satisfied; and almost every big judge can be relied upon to do this.

While I am talking of judging, I may say I have often thought it would be in the interests of the whole Fancy if there were a separate standard for hens. I think the standard length of the hen should be reduced either a quarter or half an inch, and that more points should be given for quality of feather, shortness of wings, carriage and chest. For after all, a hen should look like a hen and not like a cock, and not be one of those great big feathery birds that you can scarcely tell from a cock.

The Training of Young Birds, and Colour-feeding.

While on the question of turmeric I may as well say that it is very useful to give in the water. Put about a teaspoonful of turmeric for every twelve drinkers, and stir well; then add a very small pinch of washing soda, and again stir up well. Give to the birds for, say, five days out of the seven, on the other days, of course, giving clear water. This, you will find, will greatly improve the colour of your birds, adding a great brilliancy to it.

Marigolds, nasturtiums and dandelion heads, or almost any other flower that has a bright yellow bloom, will add something to the colour of the birds, and many of the plants act as "conditioners" also.

Plenty of Baths Required.

All the time the feathers are growing it is wise to let the birds have any amount of water for bathing purposes; this helps them to keep their feathers straight during the time these are growing. If adhered to regularly the practice will not give the birds chills, but, on the other hand, will harden them and prepare them for the cold weather. Many times I have noticed that a bird that always likes the bath is stronger and more robust than those that "fight shy" of the water. And their being brought up to it has a lot to do with it; get them used to it when young, and they will always be ready for it. The only warning I must give in regard to this is, never to leave the water on after the middle of the day; this will give them ample time in which to dry before roosting time.

As stated before, the young birds usually show the colour first at each side of the breast, then by degrees it works round to the middle of the back, afterwards gradually showing itself up towards the head; the sides of the cheeks are the last to grow the new feathers. And as the head, neck and cheek feathers are very short, it is time when these are growing to begin to wean the birds off the colour a little. The same strength of feed not being required, a much less quantity must be given, and on some days it can be missed altogether; in fact, I prefer to miss it, as then with less soft food they will begin to get harder in feather, and will come into condition quicker. Some people, however, prefer to give the same amount of food, but made less strong; but this, in my opinion, keeps the birds on the "flabby" or "soft" side, which should be avoided.

Always Give Dry Food.

The same fault occurs where too much moisture is added to the food. Always give it as dry as you can get them to eat it; they will come into song much sooner than those that are fed too wet. The old birds always seem to moult quite differently; one day they are in full song and the next they are silent, the cage bottom being full of feathers, on inspection, just as though they were in a big hurry to get their new clothes on.

And really it does not take them long to do it, when in good health. Sometimes five weeks will suffice, but usually from six to seven weeks are required. During this rather trying period great care must be taken to avoid chills, as should any of the birds contract a chill at this time, it is long odds against effecting a cure. They usually cough and sneeze until death releases them.

When the old birds are in the moult, it is best not to trouble them by running them out, they being at this time very subject to fainting fits if put into the show cage, and in particular if kept in a darkish corner and brought towards the light. Should this occur, take the bird out of the cage, gently dip the beak into cold water, place the bird in the cage bottom to regain consciousness and give a slightly stimulating diet for a few days.

When the birds are to all appearances through the moult you naturally begin to look them over to "spot" the most promising ones requiring special attention. These, when found, it is best to put into separate cages so as to avoid the pulling out of their feathers by other inmates. You will thus avoid the waste of time—if a tail or wing feather should get pulled or broken, it necessitates a further wait of from five to six weeks before it is grown again, which is a long time during the beginning of the show season, and with a good bird is a waste of money.

Allow Plenty of Room in Cage.

A good sized cage to use as a stock cage for single birds is sixteen inches long by sixteen inches in height and eight or nine inches in depth from front to back. I like the extra height in the cages for my variety, the Yorkshire, as when kept in too low a cage they are apt to become crouched somewhat, and a Yorkie that crouches is no good either on the show bench or to the breeder. Therefore you must allow them plenty of room between the top perches and the top of the cage.

An excellent way to divide the space up for a cage 16 inches high inside, is to have the bottom piece four inches deep, then the lowest perch can be 3½ inches from the cage bottom, just a nice height to keep the tails clear of the cage bottom and the dirt. Then the top sticks can be put four inches above the wood front, leaving 8 inches head room for the birds to exercise in. This may seem a lot, but not less than 7 inches is really necessary. They must have room to stretch themselves to their utmost limit, and also room to jump upwards from the top perches.

Many fanciers use something with which to fix the colour when their birds are nearly through the moult, but with hot pepper (in the ratio recommended), it is really not essential. Should you, however, use only sweet peppers, it would at least do no harm to give a little iron tonic in the water; it would rather be a benefit at this stage. It can also be given when hot. Cayenne has been used as a tonic or "conditioner," but I can tell you it takes a lot of sun or soap and water to take the colour out when once it has been put in by feeding on peppers.

Preparing Birds for Exhibition.

When getting the birds into condition for the show bench each individual requires studying separately; for instance, one bird may be a little snaky about the neck, and very high condition will serve only to accentuate the fault; the same remark also applies to a bird that is a little sharp on breast, whereas one that is on the strong side improves with all the condition you can get on to it; the tighter you draw it, the better it is. A wide tail can also be drawn up somewhat by "conditioning," and by the frequent use of the bath. But where a bird is spoilt by being fishtailed, caused perhaps by the bird jumping on the wires, it can easily be made right by a dip into hot water, which straightens out the feathers in quick time.

Washing is a very important part of the work attached to the exhibiting of Canaries, and, in fact, all cage birds; but I will say nothing about this; you have had washing exhibitions here, and no doubt any of your members will be glad to give assistance to any novice who does not know anything about the art of scrubbing birds. But practice is the best teacher for this subject.

This, gentlemen, is about as much as I can say, but I will try to answer any question that any of you may have in your minds.

Mr. Cowgill made a few very interesting remarks on the subject of colour feeding before the times of pepper, enumerating a few of the old ideas. Several questions were asked and answered, after which a vote of thanks brought the evening to a close.

Questions After the Lecture.

Will eggs hatch after the hen has been treated for egg-binding?—I know of no reason why they should not; and, in fact, I have even cut a hen open and having taken the egg out after she was dead, the egg has hatched.

What is the cause of hens laying an egg without a proper shell?—I think it is for want of grit and cuttlefish bone; or one egg may have followed too quickly after the other.

Here the discussion became general, and our Secretary stated that many scientists were not satisfied that either grit or cuttlefish was necessary. He asked the lecturer why the cock ate the cuttlefish?—Because it is, I think, necessary to him for forming bone and feather, for I know birds in flights would eat the plaster from the walls if not given some form of lime, and, in fact, I am of the opinion that want of lime in some form or other is the cause of some birds being weak in the legs.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first sixteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over sixteen. MINIMUM, 16 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first sixteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of tha advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

My Self-Acting Net Traps

catch birds of every description without attention, price 1/6, larger size 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are A1 for catchers. Read two, and beware of imitations that are not worth the carriage.—"Sir,—Net trap to hand; it is honestly worth dozens of some nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I caught in other traps in two months."—George Matthews, 2, Lucas Street, Stockport. "Sir, Trap arrived; it is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches."—J. Scragg, Old Brewery, Armitage Road, Rugeley. Entirely self-acting and self setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1s. 6d.; loose netting, strongest and finest obtainable, ½in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 5d. yard; ¾ mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d.; 10ft. deep, 4d. yard, post free; clap nets, ¾ or ½in. mesh netting, geared all round and sent complete for catching; write for prices before buying elsewhere: Morris, 112, Cape Hill, Birmingham.

for anyone to select from among so many advertisements the most likely place from which to get the best value for money. Not only do I guarantee my goods to be correctly and accurately described, I send all on approval, at my risk, cash or CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, and if purchaser is not in every way satisfied, the goods have only to be returned and back comes the whole of his money; further than this, I publicly ask anyone to have anything they like on approval from me, test it side by side with any similar article from elsewhere, and if mine is not by far the best, smash it up, and I will refund every penny of their money. Clap nets, made from genuine ¾ in. mesh, 15 yards long, 12/-, 18 yards 5½ ft. deep, 4 ft. fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards, 5/-, 5 yards 6/-, 6 yards 7/-, 7 yards 8/-, 8 yards 9/-, 9 yards 10/-, 10 yards 11/- per pair, all guaranteed 5½ ft. deep, and fly 4 ft., fitted with stave poles, pegs, and lines complete, ready for immediate use; Lark nets, 1¼ in. mesh, 15 yards long, 12/-, 18 yards 15/-, 20 yards 17/-, 25 yards 21/-, all properly geared ready for use; bat-folding Sparrow nets, properly pocketed, fitted on 15 ft. bamboo poles, 5/6, ditto on 17 ft. poles, 6/-, ditto 19 ft. poles 6/6; loose netting, ¾ in. mesh, as used in above clap nets, 7 ft. deep 3d. yard, 9 ft. 4d. yard, 12 ft. deep 5d. yard, post free; Lark netting, 1¼ in. mesh, 10 ft. deep 4d. yard, post free; self-acting spring net traps, 24 ins. long, 1/- each; ditto 18 ins. long 9d. each; these net traps are by far the largest and most effective on the market, they are totally different to all others, and can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time and can be used with call bird inside, if desired. The only net trap used by Mr. Jeffries, the well-known Nightingale expert; single trap cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; double ditto, 1/- each, 8/6 dozen; treble ditto, 1/3 each, 12/- dozen; all have separate compartment for call bird; patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, without any attention whatever, 1/6 each; original Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest made, stands all weathers, and guaranteed hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample 3d., all carriage paid; pull lines specially spun from real Italian hemp, without snarl or back twist, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free; brace swivels, 3 3d., 12 6d., post free; round or square topped call cages, all wire tops and wood bottoms, 4d. each, 3/- dozen; everything required by catchers kept in stock; send stamp for list, and hints on net making; kindly note the netting used in all my nets is knitted from 60s 3-ply thread, very fine, but strong, specially for bird netting, and must not be confused with the thick American cotton netting so often sold as bird netting. All men employed by me are not only practical net makers, but experienced bird catchers as well, and so know exactly what is required for successful catching, and no nets sent out before being thoroughly tested. All the leading professional catchers throughout the world purchase their appliances from me, so if I can please them, surely I can please you. Mr. C. Cubley, the well-known Lincolnshire catcher, says "Your netting is as superior to other makers' netting as refined gold to copper." Thousands of testimonials have been received by me, and many of them published in CAGE BIRDS, testifying to the superior quality of my goods. All nets guaranteed to wear for 20 years. (See British Bird column for further advertisement).

The oldest firm in the Kingdom. Established nearly 100 years.

EGBISCO
that has proved "tip-top" for rearing Canaries and Hybrids, is one of the finest things you can add instead of eggs, to three times its bulk of biscuit meal or cage-bird food, as a base for colour feeding. It not only improves the feather, but insures getting the full amount of colour out of a good pepper. Sold by all Corn and Bird Shops, in 3d., 6d. and 1/- tins. Have you seen or tried
as a soft diet for Canaries and other birds? It strengthens and give stamina, and for growing stock and when colour feeding, saves any amount of trouble, in 3d., 6d. and 1/- tins, and in 7 lb. bags, 3/3.
Bear these things in mind NOW.
TROWER'S COLOUR FOOD
is a good one, and only requires damping for use; made with Finest Tasteless Pepper; requires no additions, and gives excellent results. Of all Corn and Bird Shops, in 3d., 6d. and 1/- tins, or direct from us.

EVERY BIRD SOLD

by me is sent on approval, at my risk, on receipt of cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, on the distinct understanding that unless birds prove perfectly satisfactory, you only have to return them, and back comes the whole of your money. No quibbling, or unmentioned conditions about my system, whether a man spends a penny or a pound, he gets the same straightforward treatment. I was the first, and for many years, the only advertiser to send all wild birds on approval throughout the year, and as my birds are exactly as described, am never afraid of dealing on CAGE BIRDS deposit system. I have splendid lot of genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches in perfect health and condition, at 1/6 each, 3 4/-, 6 7/-, 12 12/-, or £6 per gross; specially selected larger cocks for moulting for show or muling, and guaranteed now in song, 2/- each, 3 5/-, 6 9/-, 12 17/-; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, 3 2/-, 12 7/-; young Bullfinches, 1/-, 1/6, and 2/- each; adult cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; adult hens, 1/- each; grand lot cock brown Linnets, every bird guaranteed red-breasted, 8d. each, 3 1/6, 6 2/6, 12 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for show, muling, or contest singing, 1/- each, 3 2/6, 6 4/-, 12 7/-; hen Linnets, 1/6 dozen, 3 dozen 3/-; cock Chaffinches, 8d. each, 3 1/6, 12 5/-; specially selected large cocks for exhibition, 1/- each; hen Chaffinches, 3 1/-, 6 1/6, 12 2/6; cock Greenfinches, 3 1/- 6 1/6; hen Greenfinches, 6 1/-; nestling cock Skylarks, 1/- each, 3 2/-, 6 3/6; few very steady, and in nice song, 1/6, 2/- and 2/6 each; guaranteed genuine hand-reared cock Skylarks, finger-tame, and in free song, 3/-, 4/- and 5/- each; two-year-old hand reared cock Song Thrush, over moult, and in song, 5/-; Redpolls, 6d. each, 3 1/3, 6 2/-, 12 3/6; young Canaries, in perfect health and condition, 2/6 couple, 12/- dozen; Linnet, Goldfinch, and Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; Lark cages, 6d. and 8d. each, 4/- and 5/6 dozen; round or square topped call cages, with all wire tops and wood bottoms, 4d. each, 3/- dozen; dealers supplied with every description of cages; send stamp for wholesale cage list. Please note, all birds are guaranteed properly netted in County of Worcester, by expert catchers employed solely by myself, and that all are guaranteed exactly as represented, and thoroughly on hand seed before being sent out. I have no connection with any other advertiser, nor do I buy from advertisers, so purchasers from me do not get birds that have been picked over by every "Tom," "Dick," and "Harry." I claim to be largest dealer in Worcestershire birds in the world, so if you want birds of real merit, send to the fountain head. See Appliance column for further advertisement.

UNDENIABLE BARGAINS

1910 NORWICH COCKS.—Singing, and will make champions, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; now, to prove this, I offer to give six months' approval with these birds—i.e., to refund money in full or exchange same for a cock on full song. All other birds usual approval terms, as follows: 3/9, 4/3, 4/6, and 5/6 upwards. Hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/0 each. Pairs, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, all bearing my stamp as a guarantee of sex, and any bird proving not to be a cock bearing such stamp is exchanged, the lapse of time being no object. Hence, here is a security never offered by anyone else, and a safeguard against the now well-known "hen trick"—i.e., the tempting priced, so-called singing cocks, whether named Norwich, Hartz Rollers, or Yorkshires, it is all the same.

YORKSHIRES.—Cocks, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Pairs, 7/6, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6. Hens, 2/6, 3/6, 4/6. Travelling Cages, 3d. extra.

For other varieties, please send for Free Current Price List. All on approval any part of Great Britain.

W. RUDD, THE Bird Specialist, NORWICH, ENGLAND.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

The Shows.

NEWABBEY.

This show was held on August 20, in connection with the Horticultural Society, when Mr. J. Hannay officiated as judge. Seven entries, or less than one per class of their schedule, faced the judge.

SCOT. FCY. CK.: 1, McNeillie. MULE: 1, 2, Crosbie. GOLDFINCH: 1, McNeillie. BRIT. SONGBIRD: 1, McNeillie, Linnet. SELL.: 1, 2, J. Crosbie. Every bird in show received a ticket.

TROON (Ayrshire).

A cage bird show, under the auspices of the Troon and Loans Society, was held in the Unionist Hall, Troon, on August 27th. The entries were not up to those of former exhibitions in number, although some good birds were staged. Scotch Fancies leading the way. Norwich Plainheads were, comparatively speaking, only moderate. Some very decent Borders were staged. British birds made a good show, and were quite the feature of the exhibition. Mr. J. C. Crosbie had it all his own way in the Mule classes. We regret to chronicle that the class for large foreign had perforce to be cancelled for want of entries. Mr. Erskine (Glasgow) won in the small foreign bird class with a very nice superb Tanager. The Unionist Hall is admirably adapted for a bird show, being free from draughts; and it affords excellent light. Mr. Shaw is an ideal secretary, being very hard-working, courteous, and obliging. Mr. A. Cochrane (Edinburgh) made the awards, which, with one or two exceptions, were well received.

The Critique.

SCOT. FCY. CK.: 1, Hunter, nice size and position, good drive, hard up, fine length of wing and side; 2, 3, 4, Paton. 2, Yell. Pied, good top end, fine drive, worth its position; 3, clean Buff, nice stamp, good solid top, free drive, fine depth through, some preferred for first honours, rattling good youngster. HEN: 1, vhc, hc, Paton, 1, Yell., grand erect bird, fine free drive, hard up, good depth through, wins; 2, 3, Pearson, brace of very creditable birds, well placed: 4, Hunter. NOR., CK.: 1, Cowan; 2, Clearie; 3, Hendrie; 4, Harvey; vhc, Murchie; nice birds, considering the time of year. BORD., CK.: 1, Withers, Buff, nicely drawn, well tapered, fine wings and tail, in A1 order; 2, dark Yell., nice bloom, good mould, capital wing and tail carriage, in excellent order; 3, Duncan, nice stamp, well placed, in good order; 4, Ferguson; vhc, Gibson; hc, Livingstone; c, Murchie. HEN: 1, Duncan, sweet little lady, in prime condition, wins well; 2, Kerr, nice type of bird, some seemed to think this was a cock, in good order; 3, Mossie, grand stamp of a Border, good wings and tail, in nice condition; 4, Clark; vhc, Dick; hc, Wilson. BORD. CK., A.O.V.: 1, Duncan, Hvy. Var., nice bird all through; 2, dark Cinn. mkd., in good order; 3, Gibson, Var. Buff, finely moulded, must have pressed hard. GOLDFINCH, BRIT.: 1, McNeillie, nice rose, grand tans, some were inclined to doubt its nationality; 2, Campbell, will make a fine Finch when quite ready; 3, Knox, nice stamp of a Goldie; 4, Morrison; vhc, Hendrie; hc, Wright. LINNET: 1, Erskine, capital size, nice solid colour, good whites, clear win; 2, McNeillie, nice stamp of bird, in good feather; 3, McQuiston; 4, Hoyle. GREENFINCH: 1, McQuiston; 2, Calder; 3, W. Roxburgh; 4, R. Roxburgh; vhc, Hendrie; all nice birds, well shown. LINNET, FIELD-MOULTED: 1, Martin; 2, Bibby; 3, Muir; 4, McNeillie; vhc, Roxburgh; hc, Morrison; again a nice lot. DARK MULE: 1, Crosbie, the Ecclefechan winner, still looking well, fine bird; 2, Muir, Goldie-Can., great colour; 3, Hendrie. LIGHT MULE OR HYB.: 1, Crosbie, Var. Buff Goldie-Can. in capital bloom, well staged; 2, Muir, Goldie Siskin, lovely feather, close up to winner; 3, Clearie. SISKIN, ETC.: 1, Young, Siskin, excellent size and colour, good cap, in fine order; 2, Erskine, Twite, nice size and substance, good condition; 3, Bibby, Redpoll, lovely bloom, well shown; 4, Hoyle; vhc, Wright; hc, McQuiston; c, Martin. SMALL BRIT., A.O.S.: 1, Morrison, Tree Pipit, in good trim; 2, Small, Yellowhammer, fine size, nice head, in good bloom; 3, 4, McQuiston, 3 well-known Corn Bunting, looking well; vhc, Calder; hc, Erskine; c, Clark. LARGE: 1, McQuiston, real good Chough; 2, Cowan, charming exhibit in fine condition; 3, son, Crossbill, well shown; 4, Cowan. SMALL FOR.: 1, Erskine, superb Tanager, in rare bloom, wins well; 2, Cowan, charming exhibits in fine condition; 3, Duncan, Chestnut Finch, in capital feather, well placed; 4, vhc, hc, Rev. Brady. SELL. 10s.: 1, McQuiston; 2, Cowan; 3, Johnston; 4, Paton; vhc, Young; hc, Muir; c, Murchie. GIFT: 1, Cowan; 2, Hendry; 3, Young; 4, Murchie.

TORQUAY.

The summer show of the Torquay Ornithological Society was held in the Drill Hall, August 18th. The cage bird entries were not numerous, as most breeders' birds were heavy in moult. Mr. J. N. Jeffery judged, and gave satisfaction.

YORKS.: Prizes all fell to Mr. T. Berry. NOR.: Awards went to birds belonging to Messrs. Peake and Fox, the former winning the medal for best young bird in show. MULE: Mr. J. R. Fox here showed a good dark Mule.

TONG AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Last First Feather Show held on Aug. 20. There were 46 birds staged. Mr. J. Bailey (Allerton) judged, and his awards gave entire satisfaction.

CLASS 1 (7): 1, 4, Casey; 2, Bleazard; 3, Cheshire; vhc, Padgett; hc, Wilson; c, Walker. CLASS 2 (8): 1, 4, Casey; 2, 3, Gledhill; vhc, Dawson; hc, Cheshire; c, Bleazard. CLASS 3 (7): 1, 2, Dawson; 3, Walker; 4, Firth; vhc, Gledhill; hc, Tidswell; c, Wilson. CLASS 4 (18): 1, Bleazard; 2, Dawson; 3, Casey; 4, hc, Firth; vhc, Padgett; c, Wright and Son. CLASS 5 (4): 1, Padgett; 2, Gledhill; 3, Walker; 4, Wright and Son. CLASS 6 (2): 1, 2, Tidswell.—J. SMITH, Sec.

EALING, HANWELL & DIS. F.S.

Monthly evening show held Aug. 24 at St. John's Memorial Hall. Entries all over came up with a grand total of 159. We wonder whether any other London society can come up to this for an evening show, with every exhibit staged for the whole evening? Special for best exhibit shown by a new member was won by Mr. Fletcher with a beautiful young Yorkshire Canary. Special for the best cage bird, Mr. Fletcher. The cage bird judge was Mr. F. Smith.

YORKS (Young): 1, vhc, Fletcher; 2, 3, Melsom; res, Gibson; c, hc, Smith. OLD CK.: 1, 2, Gibson. HEN: 1, Gibson.—J. F. KENDAL, Hon. Asst. Sec. and Treasurer.

RADSTOCK (Som.).

The cage birds section of the Radstock fanciers', etc., show, held on August 19, although not so large in entries as we would like to have seen, contained some excellent birds of splendid feather for this season of the year. Fanciers of the Yorkshire variety here evidently know how to breed them, and they know how to introduce that "wee bit" of cinnamon and green blood so necessary to the feather and colour of a good Yorkie. The bird taking 1st and special in the 1910 class was really a grand bird both in feather and position, and a great credit to its owner. The bird also of Mr. Horler will greatly improve when tightened up. The hon. secretary, Mr. Clark, who has worked hard for this society for 15 years, and his worthy assistants, are to be congratulated upon the manner in which the birds were staged, and everything was arranged admirably. The show was opened by the Earl and Countess Waldegrave. The birds were judged by Mr. H. Paulley (Wells), whose awards were well received.

YORKS. OPEN: 1, spl, Woodland, grand bird of good colour, wins; 2, Horler, very nice exhibit, close run; 3, vhc, hc, Woodland; c, J. Hoder. YELL. (open to four miles radius): 3, F. Chivers; r, Woodland; vhc, hc, c, Hoder. BUFF: 1, spl, F. Chivers, nice typical bird; 3, r, Horler, both good birds, but not quite ready; vhc, Woodland; hc, c, Young. YORKS., 1910: 1, spl, Woodland, grand bird, best young Yorkie we have seen out this year, very typical, lovely feather, good position. In the Norwich section the entry was poor. A.O.V. CAN.: 1, spl, Green.

EAST BOWLING AND DIST.B.F.A.

Last first feather show of the season held on Aug. 27, in St. John's School, Paley Road. Owing to the late period there was not a big entry—only 52 birds being staged. Some fine young birds were on view, and should they have a successful moult no doubt will be heard of again. The society were favoured by a surprise visit from the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, and Alderman and Mrs. Land, who, accompanied by Mr. E. Mudd, Mrs. Hillas, and other friends, all received a hearty welcome. The party were shown the various classes of Yorkshire Canaries, and after a good look round congratulated the members, and wished them every success. The Lady Mayoress, in a few well-chosen remarks, presented Mr. L. C. Casey with a picture given by Mr. A. Gledhill for the member gaining most points at the three young bird shows. Mr. Casey suitably replied. The judge, Mr. L. Ogden (Tong), gave every satisfaction.

OPEN CLASSES.—CL. YELL.: 1, 3, Casey; 2, Gledhill; 4, Wilson; vhc, c, Bleazard. BUFF: 1, Gledhill; 2, Robinson and Sharp. TICKED YELL.: 1, Gledhill; 2, Bleazard; 3, Wilson; 4, vhc, Robinson and Sharp. BUFF: 1, Bleazard; 2, Atkinson; 3, Wilson; 4, Robinson and Sharp. FOUL MKD. YELL.: 1, Helliwell; 2, Bleazard; 3, Firth; 4, Wilson. BUFF: 1, 3, Firth; 2, Casey; 4, Helliwell; vhc, Atkinson. CINN. BUFF: 1, 2, Clark. NOVICE SECTION.—CL. YELL.: 1, 2, Booth; 3, Tolson; 4, Dawson; vhc, Padgett; c, Calloway. BUFF: 1, Calloway; 2, 3, Padgett; 4, Tolson. TICKED YELL.: 1, Dawson; 2, Padgett; 3, Tolson. BUFF: 1, Booth; 2, Padgett; 3, Dawson. UNEVEN YELL.: 1, Dawson. BUFF: 1, 2, Dawson. CINN. YELL.: 1, Dawson. BUFF: 1, Dawson.—L. BOOTH, Secretary.

Twitterings.

We have altered the date of our annual open show from November 11 and 12 to November 18 and 19, writes Mr. R. Taylor, hon. sec. of the Preston O.S.

A gentleman from Lancashire left an order with me, but omitted to leave his address, writes Mr. J. A. Reece (Bristol). I should be glad if he will communicate it to me.

We have been granted the patronage of the Green Canary Association and of the English and Welsh Border Fancy C.C., writes Mr. Jas. Irlam, Hon. Sec. of the Sale Open O.S.

Some fortunate reader on holiday (signing himself "J.C.") sends us a photograph of a charming scene in Scotland (Ardgay) which sets us simply longing for the "hielan's."

I have bred a fine lot of promising young Roller Canaries, writes Mr. C. Kerry (62, Oakwood Road, Uplands, Smethwick), and I should be pleased to see and have a talk with any fanciers at any time.

Could any reader tell me where I could obtain an all glass tank, 30 x 18 x 14, ⅜in. thick, writes Mr. A. G. Patterson, 31, The Terrace, Gravesend. Information will be gratefully received.

I would like to join some society, writes Mr. T. J. Reynolds (Dodsons Gap, Cury Cross Lanes, near Helston, Cornwall), in which I should be able to exhibit Yorkshires in the members' classes at its shows. Will some secretary please write me?

I have taken Cage Birds ever since about the second week of its appearance, writes Mr. F. Rackham, hon. sec., Lowestoft and Dis. C.B.S., without a miss, so far as I can remember, and I must say that I am greatly indebted to its information in helping me to get as far advanced in the Fancy as I am at present.

In reply to "Glasgow" in your correspondence column, re the address of Messrs Southall Bros. and Barclay, writes Mr. H. Bashford (Birmingham), I may say that it is as follows: Manufacturing Chemists, Bull Street, Birmingham. (Mr. H. A. Bates (Manchester) also obliges our correspondent with the same address.—Editor.)

I have purchased all of the late Mr. G. Francis' stock of birds and cages, comprising some really good Norwich Plainheads, Norwich Greens, and Cinnamons, winners at the Scottish National, Palace, and L.C.B.A. Shows, writes Mr. F. Rackham, sec. Lowestoft and Dis. C.B.S. These birds will bring my own stock up to about 180 birds.

Schedules for our annual open show, on September 23 and 24, writes Mr. J. H. Nayler, 6, Mary Street, Lancaster, hon. sec. of the Lancaster Primrose C.B.A., are now ready, and any intending exhibitor not receiving one by September 3 should please write to me. We have 30 open classes, good specials, and liberal prize money.

The return cricket match between the City and Suburban A.C.B. and the "Early Birds" Cricket Clubs, will take place on Saturday, September 3, at the Paddington Recreation Ground, at 3 o'clock, where we hope to put up a good game, and see a fine muster of our members and friends, writes Mr. V. Wynn, hon. sec. of the City and Suburban A.C.B.

Owing to our next meeting falling in Gorton Wakes week, it has been decided not to hold a meeting on September 8, writes Mr. Fred Washbourne, the sec. of the South Manchester C.B.S., but to postpone it till September 22, when we expect a visit from Mr. Atkinson (district sec. of the Cage Bird Union), and possibly Mr. Lythgoe (the sec. of the Union). Will all members please take note?

Our society has now an open rad'us for membership, the fee being 4s. per annum, writes Mr. H. Wallworth, hon. sec., Macclesfield C.B.S. Will fanciers in the vicinity please note? I shall be very pleased to receive any new members from Leek, Congleton, and Stockport. For particulars please apply to me at 23, Garden Street, Macclesfield, and I will forward them any information required.

Being a regular reader of Cage Birds, and seeing that you record breeding results in your columns, I send you the result of this year's bird breeding by Mr. Turner (Quorn). From seven hens he has reared 58 fine, strong, young Norwich, and some good ones amongst them. I have visited nine other fanciers, and all say what a poor season they have had.—C. A. Holmes (Quorn).

On behalf of my dear wife and myself, writes Mr. F. Armstrong (Halifax), I beg to thank you and your correspondents for the kind expressions of condolence through the medium of Cage Birds passed to us in the dark hours of sorrow in the irreparable loss of our dearly beloved and only daughter, after 28 weeks of terrible suffering, borne with Christian fortitude. We should esteem it a special favour if you would convey the same to them.

We are holding a special meeting on September 7 to make the final arrangements for drawing up of schedule for open show, writes Mr. R. S. Black, hon. sec. of the Darlington C. and B.B.F.A. Will members who are desirous of giving a special or who have obtained specials kindly attend meeting or advise me of same the day before the meeting, in order that they may be inserted in schedule? New members will be accepted at this meeting at half the ordinary subscription for the year.

The following gentlemen are to officiate as judges at our annual show on September 24, writes Mr. J. R. Meikle, hon. sec., Scottish Metropolitan Open Derby O.A.: for Scotch Fancy Section: Messrs. J. Arnot (Sauchie), A. Hamilton (Caldercruix), D. Low (Dundee), and J. Park (Govan); and for Belgian Section: Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh). Entry forms will be in the hands of members at an early date. We hope members will give the executive a large entry in order to make our show a conspicuous success.

Owing to a very large number of sheets not having been returned in the Accrington and Dis. C.B.S. Watch Competition, we cannot publish the result as stated on the sheets, but are reluctantly compelled to postpone publication until further notice, writes Mr. A. Taylor, the hon. sec. Will all those who have sheets in hand make an extra effort to get them filled up and returned to me at their earliest convenience? Up to date the return is very discouraging, as a large number of sheets have been returned blank, which fact surely does not speak well for the brotherly feeling in the Fancy.

I should like to say that I started the season's breeding with 8 hens and 4 cocks, writes Mr. W. Brooke (Smethwick), but 3 would not settle down, so I removed them and bred with 5 hens. I have finished with 40 nice young birds. I desire to tell you how valuable your publication, Cage Birds, has been to me since I started Canary breeding. The advice given on bird matters is the most useful anyone could have; and if all fanciers would follow the advice given they would have more successful results. I wish Cage Birds all prosperity.

Contains the advice of the foremost breeders and exhibitors of the day upon getting exhibition Canaries into the highest possible show form. Every fancier must read this. Price 6d. On sale everywhere. Post free 7d.

I noticed in last week's Cage Birds that a Scotch correspondent, "Fra' Glasca," writes you regarding Mr. John Trail's (of Motherwell) success in breeding eight splendid first crosses. I called on Mr. Trail on August 28, and was very sorry to hear that he had lost them all except one. I may say I have had the pleasure of visiting Mr. Trail several times this season, and I saw the birds. They were splendid specimens of the bird of circle, and no doubt would have been a credit to their owner. It is very hard lines on John, as he was quite uplifted after his many years of bad luck. I am sure his many friends and acquaintances wish him better luck next time.—James Mathieson (Motherwell).

We have received from the secretary of the Yorkshire Union of Cage Bird Societies (Mr. H. Hill, 15, Settle Terrace, Thornton Lane, Little Horton, Bradford), a copy of the Union's Handbook for 1910-11. This is now quite a bulky affair, running as it does into no less than 100 pages. It contains the general and show rules, and the regulations of the Union, the names and addresses of the members of all the societies affiliated to the Union, the balance sheet for 1909-10 (showing a balance in hand of £35 1s. 0½d.), which is £8 3s. 5d. more than that put into the accounts from the previous year, besides other matters. The booklet is attractively got up. Altogether it is a monument of labour which, being a labour of love on the part of the officials of the Union, reflects the greatest credit on them.

On returning from my holidays on August 28 I was agreeably surprised to find in Cage Birds that you had done me the honour of portraying my two Cinnamon hens, first and fourth at the Palace, and must tender my best thanks to Mr. Norman for his skill. The two hens in question won for me at all the principal shows under Cinnamon Club patronage last year. Last year was my first year as an exhibitor, but the Cinnamon Canary which, to my idea, is the most beautiful of all Canaries, first took my attention at the Palace Show of 1908, and in chatting with Mr. Dormer, of Rishton, I decided to try and breed a few good ones. Mr. Dormer kindly let me have some of his strain to commence with. From these I bred some good birds, especially hens. To Mr. Dormer, too, I must tender my best thanks for the kindly help he has given me. Again thanking you for your kindness, and wishing "C.B." all success.—Mrs. F. E. Deacon (Liverpool).

Jackdaw's Fight with Cat.

A lift attendant at a Victoria-street (London) mansion keeps a Jackdaw which roams at will about the building. Hearing the cries of a cat, the attendant went to find the cause. He found the Jackdaw had driven the cat into a corner of the yard and had a firm grip of one of its ears. The owner tried to separate the pair, but (according to the "Evening News") so firm was the bird's hold that the cat's ear was torn its entire length before this was accomplished.

The Sparrow's Holiday.

The town Sparrow is now taking his annual holiday. He and his wife and ten or a dozen of this year's children have gone into the country for fresh air and a charge of food. He is tired of crumbs of bread and scraps from the table, and is gaily feasting on the golden grain of the fields, while he changes his rusty old sooty clothes for a bright new one. He is now fat and plump, and will probably extend his outing until the first of the winter's frost bids him return to less open quarters.

Yorkshire County British Bird and M.C.

Having held our meeting re the patronages, etc., the following are the names and dates of the different societies to whom we have allotted patronage; also the names of the judges: Oct. 1, Bradford City (Mr. J. Robson), Oct. 15, Leeds (Mr. J. C. Barnes), Oct. 22, Bradford West (Mr. J. N. Harrison), Oct. 29, Huddersfield (Mr. G. H. Massey), Nov. 4 and 5, York (Messrs. J. H. Roe and W. Mundell), Nov. 10, Malton (Mr. W. Mundell), Nov. 18 and 19, Hull (Mr. J. Maddison), Nov. 23, Whitby (Mr. Tams), Dec. 3, Harrogate (Mr. W. Mundell), Dec. 9 and 10, Halifax (Mr. W. H. Battye).—Lane and Jowett, hon. secs., 15, Aberdeen Terrace, Bradford.

Brittish Roller Canary Club.

Our new young bird challenge cup will be competed for at all the shows where the young bird points competition takes place, writes Mr. J. W. Norris, hon. sec., British Roller C.C., the cup to be won three times (not necessarily in succession), the winner for the current year to be the member who has won the most 1st prizes in the champion and novice young bird classes. In the event of a tie, the member with the highest number of song points to be the winner. Under these conditions every member will now be able to compete, and as members have been holding back their donations to the new cup, I shall be glad if they will now forward same on at once. If every member gives a little the amount required will be soon made up. By the courtesy of the Editor, fuller details will be published in due course.

Early Risers.

A Frenchman (says the "Globe") has drawn up a time table from the singing of the birds. The Chaffinch, we read, is the earliest of birds. He is heard between one and two o'clock. About 2.30 the Blackcap begins his song. At three o'clock the Quail, the friend of unhappy debtors, commences, "Pay tes dettes! Pay tes dettes! Pay tes dettes!" Next comes the Redbreast. At four o'clock the Blackbird's beautiful song is heard. Between four o'clock and half-past four the Tomtit begins his little grinding chirrup, which would irritate were it not for the law of compensation, which gives this little fellow his charming acrobatic manners, clinging to any suitable food hung pendulum fashion. Surprising as it may seem, the enterprising Sparrow, terrified at nothing but the cat, does not begin his chirrup until five or half-past. It is sad this brawler, hardy, intellectual, amusing in his effrontery, should be a sluggard.

The L. and P.O.S. Change of Headquarters.

The London and Provincial Ornithological Society will in future hold their meetings at the "Leysian Hall," City Road, opposite the Old Street Station on the Great Northern and City and South London tube railways. The new headquarters are much larger than the old, and as they are on premises not licensed to sell liquors it is hoped that in future a great many more members will attend the meetings, especially some of our lady members. I shall be pleased to receive the names of any wishing to join the L. and P.O.S. Now is the time to join, with our two great shows in sight, namely, the Autumn and National (Crystal Palace) Shows. The first meeting to be held at the "Leysian Hall" is on September 15, full particulars of which will be announced in Cage Birds shortly. —Chas. W. Law, hon. sec., 9, Oak Villas, Archway Road, Highgate, London, N.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in Ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Park and Lake Aviculture—Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. M.B.O.U., &c. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Roller Not Rolling.

W. A. W., Coventry.—Unless you are quite sure of the age and breeding I should certainly say its youth is now a thing of the past. Your feeding will also bear much improvement. But the most important thing will be to see the bird is not exposed to impure air, as by hanging over or near a burning light or near the ceiling, or in a window where it would be exposed to cold draughts, etc. Examine cage carefully, scraping out any likely crack or joint with a pin to see if it is infested with red mites; if it is you must eradicate them at once. Feed on a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape as a staple. Every second day for the next fortnight give a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut scalded with hot milk, 2 drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week on the alternating days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, millet, and linseed, and on each of the other days a small spray of chickweed or a morsel of ripe banana or raw carrot. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand. In the drinking water give 6 drops syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea for two days, and after this 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days in the first week 4 drops each tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid.

A Trio.

F. W. H.—(1) I should be rather inclined to think the Norwich cock was somewhat closely inbred and had left his youth some distance behind. The latter point alone would account for the lack of feathers you speak of, but not for transmitting the deficiency to his progeny, as he seems to have done. Now the birds are moulting, follow the advice given "J.H.B.," but add two drops of cod liver oil emulsion to the bread and milk each time. Do not use either these youngsters or the old cock for breeding again. (2) I should not give up all hope of these hens breeding successfully next season. At the same time, you must not depend upon them for your results. Run them separately as a kind of "side show," then if they do nothing your season will not be wholly lost, and if they are a success, well, so much the better. If you act on this suggestion please let me hear how they succeed. (3) There is no reason why the birds should not thrive in such an outdoor building. It would have been an advantage had they been turned out prior to this, and it would be as well to let any birds that are deep in moult remain indoors until it is over. In building the place, use tongued and grooved boards, and do not forget to fit in efficient ventilation. It would be a great improvement if you could line it inside with matchboards, and fill in the space between the two walls with sawdust or slag wool.

Birds Dying.

B. Gordon.—The chilly, changeable weather will certainly help to aggravate the trouble, so you must aim at keeping them as free as possible from cold draughts or extreme fluctuations; let them have plenty of pure fresh air. Use sawdust in cages and burn it at once when removed. Keep perches very clean and see all your seeds, especially hemp, are clean, sweet, and sound, and not contaminated in any way by vermin. Feed on plain canary only as staple. Every second day give each a pinch of summer rape, and on the alternate days twice each week half a teaspoonful of hemp, and on the other two days a similar quantity of egg food, bread and milk, or crushed sponge cake, sprinkled with maw. Give a plantain stalk daily. In each tablespoonful of drinking water give 4 drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a large hemp seed every second day for a week. In the second week give a crystal of sulphate of soda as just named, a crystal of sulphate of iron half as big, and three drops of dilute sulphuric acid, in the same quantity of water, every second day, and on the alternate days 2 drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of calumba by same means. For those that are now very ill, vary this treatment by leaving out the hemp, etc., and giving instead on the days alternating with the rape a morsel of bread sopped in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with maw, and give both the first-named medicines on alternate days in the first week, and only the last-named mixture in the second week.

Losing Young.

Perplexed.—As I read your letter this trouble appears to be a new introduction last season. If so, and you still continue losing birds, I strongly advise you to send a body as soon as possible after death to Mr. Yates for post-mortem, in order to obtain some certain knowledge as to the nature of the disease—whether infectious or otherwise. Your feeding may be improved; therefore, try what effect the following will bring about, in addition to which see that all your cages and appliances are as clean and hygienic as possible. The "Nutshell" booklet on "Disinfection of Birdrooms and Cages," 2½d. post free, from our manager, will show you how best to do this. As soon as the young get on to hard seed, give plain canary as a staple. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and twice a week on the alternate days the same quantity of hemp; and on the other two days a small teaspoonful of egg food, varied now and again by substituting a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake, or bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a few plantain stalks two or three times a week. If any show signs of going "thick" when on this treatment, give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts in water for two days, and after this three drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid, for a few days.

A Couplet.

Mancestrian.—(1) I do not think there is anything seriously the matter. It is probably a trifle run down from moulting, as your diet, if by "plain canary" you mean only one kind of seed, is certainly not over-generous. Besides this staple give it half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day and a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, groats, linseed, and teazle twice a week on the intervening days, and on two other days a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. In the drinking water give 6 drops syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts every second day for a week as will cover a sixpence. This should set matters right. (2) I should scarcely advise you to moult the Goldfinch and hen Canary together, as the latter will be better with a much plainer diet than is suitable for the Finch. You should separate them and hang them in cages side by side. During the latter end of winter you may run them together occasionally, gradually increasing the frequency to alternate weeks towards spring in order to keep them on good terms. The bald patch at back of hen's head may perhaps be an indication of age. Treat her during the moult as advised to several others for baldness the last week or two, and paint the bare place with a small feather dipped in a mixture of equal parts glycerine and perchloride of iron.

Brevities.

Moulting and Weed (Gillyflower).—As the bird is quite healthy there is nothing to fear. It is all a good time yet for some to begin moulting. Its position near the window is at least a very risky one; you need to be very watchful indeed for draughts and extremes of heat and cold. You do not say whether it is a young bird of this season or not. If it is, it is probably a cock, and will sing out all right after the moult, but not before. The specimen you sent is only sufficient to enable me to say with certainty that it is not shepherd's-purse. The latter is quite a different weed, as you would see if you got the handbook "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants for Cage Birds," from our manager, post free 1s. 2d.

Birds Gaping and Dying (R.M.X., Mansfield).—Your queries are too vague to allow of a satisfactory reply. To he of any use at all in such a case it is essential for me to know full particulars concerning general management, and how and where the birds are kept. If you will send these particulars I will do my best to help you. Meanwhile, if you have any more birds that are ill, put them on a diet of plain canary, with half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, and in the drinking water give a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea, and 6 drops of syrup of rhubarb every second day for a week. Keep cages and perches scrupulously clean; see they are not infested with red mites, and are quite free from cold draughts. You would do well to get the Nutshell booklet on "Ailments of Cage Birds," 2½d., post free, from our manager.

Swollen Vent (H.J.Y.).—It is impossible to say what is wrong, if anything, without seeing the bird. Are you quite sure there is an unnatural swelling, and that the appearance is not really the normal condition of the vent of a forward young cock bird? Is there any unusual protrusion from the vent? The bird may merely be still troubled with a little diarrhœa, or it may be suffering from some internal displacement, or from prolapsus. You may try the following treatment for a fortnight, and if not better then, write again, referring to this reply, and give the fullest particulars you can. Feed generally as frequently advised. Give only half ripe plantain stalks as green food. Add six drops of syrup of buckthorn and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea to its drinking water for two days, and after that give four drops each of the tinctures of gentian, calumba, and opium, every second day until it has had the medicine on two days; then omit the opium, and substitute four drops of aromatic sulphuric acid, and continue it on alternate days for a week.

Swollen Abdomen (Stultus).—From your present description I have no doubt whatever the bird is suffering from dropsy, which, I think, is the outcome of advanced liver disease. I do not know of a cure for it. It is incurable; and the most you can do is to aim at keeping up the general health and strength of the patient, and, if possible, restoring the liver to healthy action, which may enable the bird to throw off the diseased condition. Keep the bird in a comfortably warm place, free from draughts and fluctuations, but with plenty of fresh pure air. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part rape. Every second day give a third of a teaspoonful of maw, and on the alternate days a morsel of bread scalded with milk and slightly sprinkled with soft sugar. This latter may be varied occasionally with a little crushed plain biscuit. Give a spray of seedy chickweed, or plantain stalk, or a small piece of ripe banana, about four times a week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea every second day for a week, and afterwards give the same quantity of sulphate of soda, half the quantity of sulphate of iron, and six drops of dilute sulphuric acid, in the water every second day for a week, then give pure water for a week, and repeat the above for another week. Continue this in alternate weeks for, say, two months.

Class Distinctions (Frank M. Irvine).—Am afraid it is not so much a question of class distinction as of physical health and stamina. Your prize winning strain and common one have been treated exactly on similar lines side by side and the latter have bred well and successfully whilst the more highly bred strain has failed to hatch out their eggs, the inference seems only too obvious. Although, perhaps, perfectly well and all that could be desired, to all appearance there is probably something lacking in vigour which is sufficient to so weaken the germs that the young fail to quite reach or get through the hatching process. I take it that you sprayed both classes of eggs alike. If you did not I should suspect the spraying was the cause of a chill which killed the young in the shell. The weather we have had all through this season has been such as to render egg spraying for hatching out quite superfluous, and, in my opinion, in practically all cases positively harmful. Next spring try the effect of giving the high-class birds a short course of syrup of Byno-phosphates just before breeding commences.

An Abnormal Growth (G.E.D.N.).—I am not clear whether the whole or greater part of the length of the growth is separated from the skin of the back so that you could place something underneath it, or raise it up after the manner of a feather. If this is the case, it is probably an abnormal development of one or more feathers which are coalesced. But if the growth is closely attached to the skin over all its area—a kind of thickening of the skin locally—I imagine it is simply an accumulation of fat beneath, and in the skin of the dorsal feather tract; in which case you should also find accumulations of fat on the flanks, and probably round the base of the neck, and base of tail. Try the effect of putting the bird on diet of plain canary seed only, with a liberal supply of green food daily, and just a pinch of summer rape three times a week, and adding about 10 grains of sulphate of soda to each ounce of drinking water three times a week for a few weeks. If the growth is separate from the skin you may still adopt the above treatment for a fortnight or so, and, in addition, paint the part with colourless tincture of iodine twice each week during the time, removing the downy covering a day or two previous to first painting, if necessary, to remove it.

Deformed Toe (Amadis).—This ought to have been attended to as soon as the young bird left the nest. Give it only thin perches, about the size of a lead pencil, for a day or two, and watch it to see if it sometimes rests with the hind toe over the back of the perch in its proper position. If it does so, especially when it settles down to roost at night, do nothing else, but let it have these thin perches only for three or four months at least, by which time Nature will have corrected the deformity sufficiently for the bird to have ordinary perches. If, however, it still keeps the toe forward with the thin perches, catch it, and, having first cut an eighth of an inch off the end of a rubber tube as used on a feeding bottle, place the rubber ring thus obtained over the three fore toes, and pass it on up the shank of the leg, holding the hind toe backward meanwhile until it is near the end of the hind toe. Leave it in that position, so that when the bird is released the ring will hold the toe back. Let the bird wear it a month, and have ordinary full size perches meanwhile. Then remove the ring and give the thin perches as above to complete the cure.

Hen in Bad Plumage (J.H.B.).—It is doubtful whether you will quite cure this bird, but by following this treatment during the moult you should make a great improvement. Keep cage in a nice cosy position, not necessarily very warm, but let it be equable, free from draughts, and have plenty of fresh, pure air. Give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give separately a pinch of summer rape and maw, and on the alternate days a morsel of bread and milk, about the size of a hazel nut, sprinkled with soft sugar. Twice each week for a month dust the bread and milk with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash. Give a green plantain stalk daily instead of other green-stuff. Allow her to bathe freely in mild weather. In drinking water mix twenty drops of whiskey and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and afterwards give 20 drops of chemical food three times a week until moult is finished. Paint bare places twice a week with a mixture of equal parts glycerine and perchloride of iron.

Sex of Bird and Oil Stove (T. McCulloch).—The way you say the birds behave does not necessarily mean they are both cocks. Indeed, two hens are even more addicted to using "language" at each other. If they are cocks they should have shown some signs by trying to sing a few notes before now. As they are now getting on with the moult so nicely, do not disturb them to cage off separately, but as soon as the moult is finished, cage them off and they should very soon begin to warble, if they are cocks. For full details of sex get our book, "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free. Providing the place where the birds are kept is free from draughts and damp, they will be all right without artificial heat through the winter, and, in any case, to introduce an oil stove into such a room is simply courting trouble. You may throw a light cover over the cages at night during the winter, though it is not really a necessity if there are no draughts.

Norwich Gaping (A Working Lad, Glasgow).—You probably made the common error of adopting treatment to remove symptoms without first removing the exciting causes. I suspect the bird is kept too near the kitchen fire, and thereby exposed to constant extremes of heat and cold. Move him to a position where the temperature is fairly equable night and day; do not hang near the ceiling, nor over or near a burning light. See it is quite free from any cold draughts. Also keep it in a box cage—that is, one wired in front only, and see it is quite free from red mites. For staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape; every second day for the next fortnight half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with 4 drops of sherry and 2 of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it; and on the alternate days a pinch of maw seed. Give a little green food three or four times a week. In the drinking water give 6 drops syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and after that 20 drops of whiskey, 6 each of oxymel of squills, and syrup of tolu, and 2 of eucalyptus oil (well shaken in the water) every second day for a week. BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

A Quartette.

S. H. L.—I have never kept cock and hen Blackcap together, except with a "mixture" of similar birds (Garden, Reed, and Willow Warblers, Wagtails, etc). The cock sang then. 2.—Both Nightingales and Blackcaps have been bred in captivity in outdoor aviaries. 3.—The only way to keep live ants' eggs for any length of time is to bake them for a short period in an oven; but then, of course, they are no longer "live" eggs. They may be kept for a week and longer if spread out thinly upon a tray (or something similar, such as the lid of a big cardboard box), and stored in the dark, in a dry place, such as a cupboard. They will mildew of a certainty if kept heaped up in a bag or box. 4.—The "short of food" method may be adopted providing it is not carried to any undue length; when hungry offer a mealworm or two direct from the fingers. A bird will soon learn to take them.

Another Quartette.

Glasgow Working Lad.—1.—"Best old hemp" means hemp of best quality that has been well-ripened and stored—not full of green-looking new corns. When a corn is cut through the middle (or a little of the seed is put through a seed-mill) the kernel should be white and of an oily nature; if it is brown in colour, and dry, reject the seed, for it is not good, and can do a lot of harm to one's birds. This brown, dried-up seed has been artificially dried (ripened), probably sulphur-dried. 2.—If the water is changed every day, and the seed rinsed, then soaked rape will keep quite "good"—that is, fit to give to birds. After a day or two, however, it will begin to sprout. 3.—Shepherd's purse will keep a long time if the stems are immersed in a pickle-jar containing water; change the water daily. 4.—The "belly" of a bird is never covered with feathers—the feathers do not grow on every part of a bird's body, but only on certain tracts—and its colour, in a healthy bird, is flesh-colour (not red). You are not "asking too much"; pleased to answer you, especially as your questions are not requests for information which I am giving someone or other almost week by week.

Food for Chaffinch.

West Ham.— No; the Chaffinch is not dealt with up to the present, in the Nutshell series of handbooks. Adopt the following stock mixture: Canary and teazle, two pints each; summer rape, charlock, and linseed, half a pint each. To this a half-pint of sunflower could be added; or give the sunflower in a separate dish, say a heaped-up teaspoonful daily. Wild seed mixture and some good maker's special packet Finch mixture can be occasionally offered for a change, while sunflower heads (gathered from the garden), full of seed, thistle, and dandelion heads, seeding chickweed, groundsel, and shepherd's purse, should be freely given as in season. An occasional mealworm, flies, etc., are relished. My own birds, too, are very fond of a teaspoonful of insectile mixture (such as I prepare for my small soft-billed birds) now and again. This is specially good during the moult (and especially so if a few live ants' eggs are mixed with it), helping to bring them out in fine condition and "bloom." A little colour-feed can, if one chooses, be incorporated.

Twite with Scaly Legs.

F. C.—It is unusual for a two-year-old bird to develop such unsightly scales on its legs. Still, some birds seem to get them much more quickly than others. The "cure" is to remove the scales. It is quite easy, providing one has confidence in the handling of birds; it need cause the bird but very slight pain, and it will bring great relief after it is over. I usually heat a little salad oil fairly hot (put it in a suitable vessel, such as a large egg-cup, or a glass drinker, and immerse the latter in boiling water), soak the legs well in this, and then pick off the scales with my finger-nails, also sometimes using curved nail-scissors or a pair of nail clippers, which occasionally come in handy. Afterwards I wash the feet and legs in warm water, dry them, and anoint them with a little healing ointment Zambuk, boracic, or mild carbolic. A bird's legs may also be scaled after soaking them in a lather made with carbolic soap and hot water. It is quite easy, if common care is exercised, so as not to violently wrench a leg or a toe, which, of course, may spell dislocation. If any blood be inadvertently drawn from one or other of the toe joints, touch the spot (after washing) with Friar's Balsam or "New Skin." The soap lather is the simplest; but the oil was the first method I tried, and I believe in sticking to old friends. Some fanciers use hot water only.

Fresh-caught Linnets.

H. Mansfield.—The chief thing is to give them at first something more than just dry, hard seed, and to now and again give a mild dose of saline medicine. An internal upset is the all too frequent result after a week or two's confinement, and a diet of hard, dry seed. I am (by all accounts) fairly fortunate myself with fresh-caught birds, and much of my success in keeping them alive I attribute to the frequent mild doses of saline medicine which I give them. I always keep handy a bottle containing a saturated solution of sulphate of soda, and of this I now and again add sufficient to the drinking water to give it a decided saline taste. This keeps the bowels working properly, and prevents that bad state of constipation into which so many newly-caught birds more or less quickly get when put on to dry seeds. Fresh-caught specimens should always be kept in cages with inside seed troughs, so that their food is directly under their noses, so to speak. If is well to have the water inside; if this cannot be managed, then be absolutely certain they get at it. For the linnets' stock food mix one pint of each of best canary and sound ripe teazle, with half a pint each of genuine summer rape, linseed, and charlock seeds. In addition to the stock mixture, in a separate dish, I give an unlimited supply of maw seed and niger, also lightly cracked hemp seed. These I gradually discontinue, arranging to drop them altogether after the birds have been in my possession twelve to fourteen days. As green food (or "soft-seed" food), I provide summer rape seed soaked in cold water until just commencing to germinate (dabbing it dry in a towel before giving it to the birds), and seeding shepherd's purse, plantain, and chickweed, and flowering groundsel tops, when obtainable. If I think my birds were caught during a wet spell, I soak the stock mixture for them at first. I very seldom lose a bird on the above treatment. The crushing of the hemp seed (all the stock mixture if you like), is most important at first; use a seed mill, a very handy thing.

Brevities.

Berries (British Bullfinch).—The berries you send I have never gathered myself for use of Bullfinches, so can say nothing about them. They do not, however, seem to contain much colour compared to blackberries, privet berries, etc., and I should certainly prefer the latter.

Mealworm Matters (Mealworms).—It is in the natural order of things for the beetles to die; this they do after having laid their eggs on the sacking, etc., kept in the tin. These eggs hatch out in due course tiny worms which, in a few months' time, grow to a suitable size for use with one's birds. If left to themselves, these mealworms will in the following spring or summer turn into beetles. The bodies of the beetles can be removed; but this is not necessary, for they dry up into mere shells and no smell is created.

Identity of Thrush (P.O.C.).—Your bird must be either a Song or a Missel Thrush. The latter is considerably larger than the former. Examine the tail feathers; if the outer feathers are "mooned" with white underneath, then the bird is a Missel Thrush.

Concerning Siskins (N.B.).—Siskins are only with us in any number during the winter months, so that one has to buy them as the market offers; they are not a stock item, so to speak, of the birdy market. Sometimes they are very scarce. Feed plainly, as they are apt to get over-fat. Stock mixture, canary and teazle three parts each, summer rape and charlock one part each, with, during the moult and the winter, half a part of linseed. They appreciate the tit-bits usually given to Goldfinches (wild seeds, thistle and hardheads, shepherd's-purse, chickweed, groundsel, dandelion, maw, hemp, cracked sunflower, etc.), and their diet should be varied with these things.

A Variety (L. H. Drnett).—1. The Song Thrush and Blackbird do not often build in trees, but any kind of hedge is used which affords reasonable shelter, and evergreens in shrubberies, parks, etc., are much favoured. The nests are very, very easy to find. 2. Feed the Greenie hen the same as the Goldfinch (see the "Nutshell" booklet dealing with this bird), but giving sunflower more liberally. 3. The two points to look for are a big, bold, wide head, and size generally (a big body, with wide chest). 4. The term "straight from the nest" (or "nets") is meant to denote a fresh-caught bird. It indicates no impediment to the breeding, of course; most birds have to be "fresh-caught" at some time or other. You would probably find a house-moulted bird (cost 5s. to 10s.) a better investment, as being practically certain to live and thrive with you.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Budgerigar with Cold.

E. M.—Budgerigars are the hardiest of birds, but like all others, cannot stand draught, which I think they have been subjected to from the window. Keep them in some position where they can get sun and air without draught. While the cold lasts keep them in a little warmer position, but not a stuffy corner; there is always a corner in every room where the air is comparatively stagnant. On receipt of this, take away the drinking water and replace it with Dinneford's Magnesia and water in equal parts, and when the bird has had a good drink of this, take it away and give the following mixture: Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine in equal parts. For use, take one part of the mixture to two parts of water. This must be continued till relief is given, after which a course of Parrish's Chemical Food (in the drinking water) will be beneficial. It is important that the bowels be kept moving freely, but not really loose, by an occasional dose of the magnesia. A few oats may be added to your present dietary, and I should certainly give greenfood—lettuce and seeding (flowering) grass liberally. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. Our booklet "Budgerigars and Cockateels" (see advt.) would be useful to keep by you for reference.

Violet Tanager, etc.

E. D. P.—It is evident that, in spite of good appearance, etc., this bird had not got over the hardships of importation. The Violet Euphonia, and indeed all the Euphonias are really difficult to establish. Keep it warm, yet where it can get fresh air without draught. Put a small teaspoonful of Scott's Emulsion into its daily supply of milk sop. Also for one day put a little Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water and follow this with Parrish's Chemical Food. Re the Plum-headed Parrakeet, I should not attempt to force a moult, and I should try it with a little milk sop; while this is injurious to caged Parrots, a little does no harm to them when in a roomy aviary. It will in no way harm the other birds. Also put in a saucer of moistened biscuit, the biscuit to be moistened with chemical food and water in equal parts; and for two days let the aviary drinking-water consist of one part Dinneford's Magnesia to two parts of water. This will do the other occupants no harm. This bird has evidently had a hard time during importation, and it will take quite a little time for it to rally therefrom. I have had many similar experiences and unless it appears to suffer it will be better out of doors. Re Sugar Birds: You cannot do better than continue your present diet. Some individuals like a couple of mealworms daily, and if your bird cares for them by all means supply them. Also sweeten the milk sop at times with a little honey as a change. The Pennant Parrakeets can be left out of doors all the year round, so also can the Virginian, Green, and Pope Cardinals, Rosey Pastors, and Pine Grosbeak. The Shama, Hangnest, Tovi Parrakeet and Red-vented Parrot can be moved to the heated aviary end of September or middle of October, according to the state of the weather.

Young Grey Parrot Unwell.

Hodgkinson.—I fear the bird is in a rather critical condition. Supply boiled maize for a time till it is in better condition; this only keeps fresh one day, so it must be prepared and given fresh daily. Also give ripe fruit and also supply at intervals during the day a piece of plain biscuit that has been moistened in chemical food and water in equal parts; also drop about a dozen drops of the chemical food over the daily supply of boiled maize. Keep it warm and out of the reach of draught, yet where it will get fresh air. Also give it a little milksop twice daily for a week, and then only once daily, for another week, after which gradually discontinue this. Do not keep the drinking water in the cage, but permit it to quench its thirst at least daily, every third day the drinking water should consist of Dinneford's Magnesia and water in equal parts; on other days put a couple of drops of aromatic sulphuric acid in the drinking water. The drinking water should be changed twice daily for an ailing bird; cover up at night, but not in the daytime. Report progress in a week's time, but I fear the bird has caught infection during importation, and is in a critical condition.

Cockatoels Not Rearing Young.

Disappointed.—Some pairs of Cockatoels are much of the same habits as yours. Possibly as yours are young birds they will be attentive and model parents next season. However, I think you are in error in keeping two pairs in the same aviary unless the space is very large. I may say, however, that freely as Cockatoels breed in many aviaries, they are very erratic in others; in point of fact, they cannot, to speak sweepingly of the whole, be accounted reliable in this respect. In spite of this many pairs are very prolific, thus clearly pointing to the fact that it is a matter of individuality with the respective pairs, though as you have two pairs each acting in the same manner, it rather shows they are interfering with each other. If they will take it, let them have plain biscuit and stale crusts of household bread when they are feeding young. You could hand-feed them with soaked seed, biscuit and bread, but personally I do not consider the "game worth the candle." Try them (in separate aviaries) with another brood, and if it is still unsatisfactory, get another pair, or exchange mates with some other fancier in your locality.

Brevities.

What Bird? ("A Lover of Birds").—It is either an Orange or Grenadier Weaver, the former, I think. These birds have a summer and winter plumage; the former is its present gorgeous dress, the latter was the plumage in which you received it; these dual changes take place each year. It should do well in your outdoor aviary, and also weave some interesting nests if you supply it with long grass and hay.

A Parrot with Fits ("Horace.").—I note with much satisfaction so satisfactory a result, and thank you for your appreciative remarks. There will be no need to continue the bromide unless there should be a recurrence of the excitement which presages a fit, but I do not think you need fear a renewal of these. I should continue to give chemical food in the drinking water till the bird is well over the moult, also keep the bowels properly regulated with Dinneford's magnesia, but the voidings should not be allowed to remain watery-loose. Supply the normal diet; let it have plenty of exercise and fresh air without draught.

Avadavats in Poor Colour (M.G.L.).—In poor chilly seasons these birds often do not assume full colour, but moult out more or less patchy. However, they will probably moult into full brilliance again next year. But these birds are very variable, and I expect yours will present an almost endless variety of colour as they change from winter to nuptial plumage, which in captivity, at any rate, is very variable, as to the extent of the crimson areas and their intensity. You cannot do more than the treatment advised in our previous reply, save, perhaps, if your birds will eat soft-food, stir into their daily supply some red colour-feed, and then leave the rest to nature. Probably, however, your birds have not yet reached their full brilliance; the change is a gradual one.

Blue Mountain Lorikeet (T.B.H.).—Supply Canary and white millet seeds, milk sop, made with boiled milk, ripe fruit, and a little sponge cake. Your Golden-fronted Honeysucker has evidently sore feet; its cage should be roomy, as it is a very active bird—say, not less than 24 by 18 by 18 inches, with twiggy branches as perches. Its diet should be milk sop, ripe fruit, soft-food (it will probably not take much of this), and two or three mealworms or other insects daily. Under the above treatment it should soon lose its nervousness and become quite sound. They are more at home on the wing and in the air, but still they can move about on the ground without anything approaching ungainliness; however, when the trouble increases, I should leave things to right themselves, which they soon will do if you treat as advised.

Waxbill Moulting (A.G.P.).—You certainly cannot add to your diet, which is very satisfactory, save, perhaps, supplying blighty sprays of rose and fruit trees if you have a garden. I should, however, advise caging this bird up separately till its plumage is properly renewed. Fix up a cocoa-nut shell nest and push in a little hay as a shelter for it. Lightly colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, and give a dose of Dinneford's magnesia, as required, to keep the bowels moving freely, but not loose—one part magnesia to two parts water. The bird should be kept in some warm position, out of the reach of draught, yet where the air is fresh. I strongly suspect that some of the inmates of the cage are plucking it, but it should soon be in condition again if you carry out above directions.

A Squeaking Parrot (Springburn).—This annoying habit is not by any means easy to eradicate. Great care should be taken to avoid scaring, annoying, or unduly exciting the bird. Keep it where it will have plenty to occupy its attention, and pet it and make a fuss of it generally. I have found covering the cage up when it is noisy as good a method as any; Parrots are, as a rule, quick to recognise this as a punishment, and I have known many cases of complete cure, but it must be persevered with, as a confirmed habit is not easily got rid of. It is highly important that the covering up should be done in a quiet gentle manner, or the remedy will simply aggravate the case. Shall be pleased to hear, say a month hence, how the bird progresses.

Budgerigars (Alpha).—Your aviary has only accommodation for ten birds the size of a Budgerigar, and I certainly advise you to keep to that species, confining yourself to two pairs—Green and Yellow—and then dispose of the young when able to fend for themselves. I take it you want birds of a different colour to the Green Budgerigar. Black-cheeked Lovebirds I do not think would agree with them, and I am also doubtful of the Madagascar Lovebird. Cockatoels would agree, but they are rather large for the size of your birds; they will agree with the Budgerigars, but I expect in such confined quarters there would be no breeding results from either. If you decide on the two pairs of Budgerigars, hang up four husks as far apart from each other as your space permits, and in due course you should rear young birds.

What Parrot? (J.H.L.).—It is a Roscate Cockatoo, and in a very bad condition, too. In addition to the seed mixture, supply a little boiled maize daily: this must be prepared fresh daily, as it only keeps fresh one day. Spot on to the daily supply about a dozen drops of Parrish's Chemical Food, and continue this till the bird is in decent plumage. Keep the bowels moving freely with Dinneford's magnesia and water in equal parts, to be given instead of the drinking water on the day in question. It should be sufficient to give it every third day, but you must be guided by its condition. The voidings must not remain watery loose. Also supply any ripe fruit it will eat, together with plain biscuit and a few nuts. Keep warm and out of draughts, yet not out of reach of light and air. It will be a work of some little time bringing the bird into condition again.

Blue Fronted Amazon with Parasites (Pretty Polly).—Rub pyrethrum powder into the parts where the insects gather, and till you have got rid of them bathe him twice a week with quassia solution. Do not let the pyrethrum powder get into the bird's eyes. The cage will also need attention if the pests are to be completely got rid of: it should be thoroughly painted with neat paraffin; see that it gets into all the crevices; let it stand in the open air for a day, then thoroughly swill every part, paying special attention to the crevices, with boiling water; after a good swilling with cold water, leave it out of doors for a couple of days to dry and for sun and air to complete the work. You had better send to the editor for the recently issued book on Parrots and Parrakeets, 6d., plus postage.—See advert.

Enquirer.—The arrangements you suggest will answer admirably. It is difficult to say, in respect of foreign species, when they will go to nest; they are not so regular in this respect as Canaries. Nevertheless, the season can be put down as from April to October, but under the favourable conditions you propose giving them (you must secure ventilation without draught) the period should be lengthened at both ends. In fact, once they settle down to breeding they will probably continue to breed more or less all the year round, only pausing for the moult. For the initial start, I should say that pairs procured now might be reasonably expected to go to nest next April, but with established pairs—that is, those that have been in the cages at least a month—they may bring off broods in either late September or early October; but, as already stated, the actual commencement of breeding operations with foreign species is very uncertain.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. And bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

M.G.I.—Acute pneumonia was the cause of death, induced by adverse weather conditions.

W. E. Parkin.—Parrot succumbed to liver disease. One cannot quite say how long this might have existed. There was no evidence of contagion.

E.D.G.—Congestion of the lungs accounted for death of cock Goldfinch. There is nothing infectious, so there is no reason why you should not utilise the same cage again. It is not uncommon to lose birds from this and other pneumonic complaints during, and just subsequent to, the moult.

W. H. Sears.—Your bird, I note by your letter, was sent off on the 25th inst., to Reading in mistake. It arrived to me on the 30th in a particularly "spicy" condition. Contents of body were quite unrecognisable. The only distinct feature remaining was the odour. I am afraid you must have had recourse to a very old copy of CAGE BIRDS not to have noticed the correct address. Send on another if you have a further loss, when I shall be very pleased to help you.

Richard Sonar.—The young Roller I examined died of pneumonia. No doubt the loss in each case is from the same cause. There was nothing to suggest infectivity, and the cause is not easily discovered. You must remember that the weather just recently has been highly detrimental to young birds. Particularly during the moult they are predisposed to the damp air which we have recently experienced. This in itself is quite capable of producing the symptoms you describe. Give to any that might be similarly attacked a teaspoonful of the following medicine night and morning in the drinking water: Carbonate of ammonia, 1 drachm; aromatic spirits of ammonia, 2 drachms; tincture of squills, 2 drachms; tincture of gentian, 1 drachm; simple syrup, half an ounce; and water up to 4 ounces. Your local chemist will prescribe this for you. If to be administered by the beak, from ten to fifteen drops only must be given.

LARGS AND DISTRICT O.S.

The 31st annual show was held on Aug. 13 in the Artillery Hall, where there was a nice collection of cage birds, although in point of numbers this section suffered on account of the lateness of the season. There was a good attendance. Mr. D. Hendry, the secretary, had everything in nice order, and it is to be hoped his efforts will meet with better response next year. Mr. T. Thompson judged, his awards appearing to give every satisfaction.

PRESTON O.S.

At a general meeting held at the Tobio Cafe, Aug. 25, it was decided to alter the open show dates from Nov. 11 and 12 to Nov. 18 and 19, so as not to clash with the Norwich Canary Club's show at Nottingham. Also there is no other show in the neighbourhood on the latter date. There was a lot of business in connection with the show that was left undone, and it was decided to hold a special general meeting on Sept. 8, when all members should attend. R. TAYLOR, Sec.

CRESTED CANARY CLUB.

The Crested Canary Club Show will be held at the L.C.B.A., Nov. 23 to 28. In addition to the usual cash and other special prizes, there will be offered for competition: A silver challenge bowl, value £10 10s., for best current year Crest Canary; silver challenge bowl, value £10 10s., for best current year Crestbred Canary. These bowls are to be won three times and must be competed for only by birds bred by the exhibitor. Purchased birds are debarred. The full complement of specials as enumerated below will be offered for competition at Birmingham, Cambridge, Cheltenham, Gateshead, Great National (Palace), L.C.B.A., Manchester, Nottingham, and Plymouth. No. 1, the Robert's £25 silver challenge cup for most points gained at twenty specified shows, only one bird in each class to count. The four highest receive a gold, a silver and gold, a silver, and a bronze medal with the club's diploma with each. No. 2, a solid silver challenge bowl, value £8 8s., will be offered (thanks to the generosity of our President and a few friends) for competition to be won outright in one season by the member gaining most points for birds outside the money. This bowl is offered with the idea of helping fanciers possessing really good birds that are just squeezed out of the money owing to the severity of competition at our classic events. It is also offered with the idea of swelling the entry list at shows receiving C.C.C. patronage. Nine specials, each of the value of 21s., for the best current year Crest or Crestbred that has not previously won a first prize. Birds competing must be bred by the exhibitor. No member can win more than one of these specials during the season, neither can he compete for any of the cash specials offered by the club at any show at which he wins one of these specials. The following cash specials will be offered in addition at the above shows: 5s. for best Crest not the property of 21s. special winner; 5s. for best Crestbred ditto; 2s. 6d. for second best Crest ditto; 2s. 6d. for second best Crestbred ditto; 5s. for best Buff clear body any colour Crest; 5s. for best Yellow Crest; 5s. for best Yellow Crestbred. Novice members' competition for 1910: R. Rhodes, Esq., again presents a solid silver cup, value £3 3s., for the most points scored by a novice member at all shows providing the two novice classes. A handsome electro-silver teapot will be given to all novice members who win their three first prizes in any one show season. Cash specials novice classes: 5s. for best Crest; 5s. for best Crestbred, not the property of above winner. In addition to shows above mentioned, the Robert's £25 silver challenge cup will be offered for competition at Baydon-on-Tyne, Bolton, Bournemouth, Clapham, Glasgow, Scottish National, Southall, and Westcliff. I want to allot this splendid trophy for competition at three other shows. Will secretaries please apply at once to J. S. CLARKE, hon. sec. L.C.C., "Sunnyside," Prospect Road, Woodford.

Wild Bird Life.

The Wild Birds' Harvest.

At this time of the year the seed-eating birds are having a bounteous feast. For several weeks now, while the corn has been ripening, there has been no lack of food; and now that the harvest is being gathered, scattered grain is plentiful everywhere. No matter how carefully the men work, or in what condition, the harvest is, bushels of good corn are sure to be spilt upon the ground. In the majority of cases this scattered grain is left for the fowls of the air to feast on, and all through the winter months flocks of Sparrows and Finches can be seen feeding upon the stubble ground.

No doubt while hunting for grain these birds do not disdain to pick up the seeds of the various weeds scattered about. While the corn is growing one may see among it charlock, thistle, dock, poppies, and other large weeds; these ripen their seeds at about the same time as the wheat, and are knocked out by the reapers.

To see the real harvest for the wild birds one should ramble along a hedgerow bordering a field of corn. Here wild Nature, during the past summer, has had her own sweet way. The hawthorn bramble, woodbine, mountain ash, and a host of tall, strong-growing plants, have thriven unchecked and undisturbed. Even the bird-nesting urchin has not dared to trespass along the edge of the cornfield. And so in most cases the wild birds' harvest will be scattered around by the sun and wind, and left for the use of the birds until the following spring. It is impossible for any one to estimate the quantity of good bird food laid out for them in this manner. A single stalk of plantain contains hundreds of tiny seeds, and in a head of thistle the grains are packed so tight together that once disturbed it is impossible for human hand to replace them. Doubtless this immense store is sufficient for the needs of even our growing bird population. But it is scattered far and wide, and the feathered tribe have to collect it under all conditions—in sunshine, rain, frost, snow, and winter storms; and however open the weather may be, the struggle for existence is severe, until the spring flowers once more brighten the hedgerows and sheltered copse.

Hybrid Breeding in North Hunts.

SIR,—I am sorry that I cannot hear of any Mules or Hybrids being bred this year in North Hunts, or even of many fanciers who have put pairs up in furtherance of this interesting hobby. The writer has several pairs up, but as yet has been quite unsuccessful in raising a single bird. Much patience is required for this branch of our hobby, but when you do strike luck and obtain a good bird, you are amply rewarded for all your trouble.

Hints on Soldering Wanted.

SIR,—Would any of the readers of CAGE BIRDS please give me a hint or two on soldering? I have tried various ways, and have not been able to succeed in any of them. I am sure there are many who take in CAGE BIRDS who can solder all right; so I should be very glad if they would just put me "in the knack" of doing it. It have, I may say, got some birds ready for separating, and wish to make some cages. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, having been a constant reader of it these last few years.

What Age Do Siskins Reach in Captivity?

SIR,—I should like an opinion on the longevity of Siskins in captivity. I have read that it is impossible to keep these birds alive longer than four years, and my own experience seems to confirm the statement. I have had three in succession, the first of which died after I had had it three years and eleven months, the second three years and a half, and the last, three years all but four months. At the end of these periods they were all seized with what seemed to be some sort of liver complaint. Would keeping them in pairs tend to lengthen their days? I should be much obliged if any reader can advise me; also to hear readers' experience of keeping these birds. If kept in pairs, would the cock bird cease singing, as seems to be the general rule?

ABERDEVINE.

Another Case of Twins.

SIR,—I have read some most interesting items in your paper, and I have had a most funny thing happen during my first year of breeding Canaries. My last nest from a pair of Norwich birds comprised four eggs, and I did not discover until the birds were over a fortnight old that there were five young ones! A friend of mine called to see me and I asked him to have a look at the "nest of four young ones." He at once said there were five. I told him he had made a mistake, but he was so sure he wanted to make a bet that there were five. I then had a look again for myself, and I found that he was right—there were five. They are five weeks old on Thursday, and are away from their mother, doing well. I should like to know if you or any of your readers ever heard of such a thing before? Any of your readers are at liberty to see the birds by appointment. I wish your most valuable paper every success.

E. T. ROEDER.

[Numerous cases of "twins" have been put on record from time to time, three or four, we think during the breeding season, which has just drawn to a close.—Editor.]

The Milkman and the Hawfinch.

SIR,—It may interest some readers of CAGE BIRDS if I let them know how I came to be possessed of a fine young Hawfinch this summer. A milkman who lives near me was on his way to town in his "milk float" to deliver his milk; and while driving along the road he noticed a bird strike the telegraph wire and fall to the ground. He jumped out of his "milk float" and picked up the bird. It proved to be a young Hawfinch, which was well on the wing. He put it in his pocket, placing his handkerchief over it, and went and did his milk round. When he got home he placed the bird in a cage and fed it on Parrot food and green peas (which I find to be an ideal food for an Hawfinch, mine having little else besides greenstuff and mealworms; and they are always in excellent condition). Knowing that I was a bird fancier, he gave me the bird, which is now in splendid condition, having been caged for several weeks. It eats its seed well, and will bathe. And it has not broken its tail, a thing which most wild-caught Hawfinches will do. I feel certain it is a cock bird, and is a good length—which is wanted in young Hawfinches, as they fill out wonderfully during the next two moults. I have a year-old bird now nearly through his second moult, and is making up a fine bird; I think he will beat in appearance my old Hawfinch, "Salopian Prince," which was claimed by Mr. F. Collins at the Royal Cornwall Show last June.

A Blackbird which Sings while Moulting.

SIR,—I have in my possession a Blackbird which has sung uninterruptedly all through the summer months; and in spite of its moulting it still pours forth its incomparable melody, even louder than it sang in the spring. Having kept and reared Blackbirds for a considerable time, I may say I have never yet heard one sing while moulting. Perhaps some of the many readers of CAGE BIRDS can enlighten me upon this matter. To my mind the case is of uncommon occurrence.

Judges at Scottish Shows.

SIR,—Can it be true that exhibitors in Scotland are taking a stand on the judge question? We have heard a deal of grumbling in the past in the Fancy Press, but nothing has seemed to get done. Now I was at a certain Scotch show where the entry was none too good—much less than they had had before in the same place—and it was being said that the secretary had received letters from exhibitors stating that they could not see their way to give support where dealers were placing the cards. Can it be true, as I asked before, that we are waking up?

Appeal to Members of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S.

SIR,—As a vice-president of the above Society I felt delighted when I read in last week's CAGE BIRDS the announcement from our esteemed Hon. Secretary (Mr. W. Hodson) that the Autumn Members' Show was to be held under the management of Messrs. H. W. Tomsett and L. J. Richardson. The venture could not be in abler hands than in those of these two keen fanciers, and the first-named gentleman has done, and is doing, so much for the Society in a financial sense, that I do sincerely hope members will rally round him next November and crown his efforts with complete success. Remember our old motto, "Union is strength."

Information on the Growing of Dandelion.

SIR,—On reading my CAGE BIRDS last week-end I was very much interested in the correspondence on the above subject, and being a great user of this green food for very many years I would like to add my experiences to those already recorded. To get the best results you must, in my opinion, grow your dandelion from seed, though, of course, there are certain important items to be taken into consideration when doing so, and to put one point in a proper light we will see how Nature sows the seed for the propagation of the plant. The plant blooms about the middle of May in our district, and about a fortnight later the seed is ripe, and ready for dispersal—almost every child knows how this seed is scattered over the countryside, and with the aid of which they pretend to tell the time, by blowing off the seeds, each with its little parachute, to soar away to other regions, there to take root, and, in turn, produce seed for the continuance of the species. The seeds, when ripe, are a nice deep brown in colour, and for our purpose it must be gathered when the slightest touch will set the "clocks" a-flying. They must be straightway put into the bed that has been previously got ready for their growth. Almost any soil will grow dandelion, but it is best dug pretty deep, say, to a depth of eight or nine inches. Sprinkle the seed fairly evenly over the bed, and lightly cover with soil, just sufficient to hide the seed from the Sparrows, who will eat it if they find it. If the weather is dry, you must water the bed daily; then, in from ten to fourteen days the green shoots should be peeping through, while the roots will have shot down into the earth, whore they will get a strong hold before winter sets in, so that the frost does not destroy it. Do not, however, be tempted to save the seed over until the spring. If you do, you will rue it. As Mr. Downing mentioned in his letter, it will refuse to come up. It absolutely loses its vitality when stored over the winter. Therefore, my advice is, put it in the ground as soon as it is gathered. In regard to growing it by transplanting the roots into the garden, I have found the weed to have a tendency to grow strong very quickly, so that it is not really worth one's while to transplant roots. But even here we can do something to improve matters. Any root that is growing strong should be cut off just below the crowns with a sharp knife, when a good growth of new crowns, as nice and tender as you could wish for, will result. Usually I have three small beds going, and each year the oldest is all cleared out, and new seed put in; thus I can always have a decent bit of dandelion to pull at when required, though, of course, I never go a walk without bringing back a bit of something green if I can find it.

"STRAIGHT UN."

SIR,—Perhaps the following information on the growing of Dandelion may be of use to your correspondents. I can't understand why it is Messrs. Whittle and Downing cannot raise it from seed. My experience, as a gardener, is that it is quite one of the easiest of plants to raise from seeds. Are your correspondents quite sure that the seed was perfectly ripe? It is absolutely impossible to raise dandelion or any other plants from unripe seed. When bird-keepers collect dandelion seed-heads for birds they generally get the seeds just before they burst to fluff. The seed is not ripe enough at that stage to sow for the purpose of raising young plants. It should not be gathered for that purpose until it is quite open, and just on the point of dropping. If your correspondents will follow these, and the following directions, I think they will be successful in raising a few plants. A few heads may still be gathered, late as it is, that is, if the sun ever condescends to shine again. Gather them as before mentioned, but I should not advise sowing them at this time of the year in the open ground. It would be better to save the seed until the middle or end of February; even then, it would be better with protection from frost by a frame or handlight for a month. When sowing, first dig your ground to a depth of from 15 to 18 inches; little, if any, manure is required. Dandelion will do in almost any soil. After digging, level the ground with a rake, and sow rather thinly. After sowing, stroke the ground over with the back of rake, and water with a fine rose watering can. Don't cover the seeds with soil; it is a mistake. The stroking of the ground with back of rake will cover them sufficiently. They ought to be up in from 8 to 14 days. Anyone with a greenhouse or garden frame, from which the frost can be kept, may sow them now in a small toffee box from the confectioners. A proper seed-pan would be better. Fill box within ½-inch of top with some light loamy soil, and well water. Sow seeds evenly on the surface, and cover very sparingly with fine sand. Very little covering is required. The seeds just want to be below the soil or sand. No more water should be afforded until the seeds are up, which should be in about eight days inside. When the seeds are large enough to handle, i.e., when they are making the 3rd or 4th leaf, they should be pricked out into other boxes or pans about 1½ inches apart. They will do all right in these until the beginning of March, when they may be planted in the bed—prepared as before mentioned—about 3 inches apart. They ought to be ready for use by the time the first young birds are hatched. In December, a bed of dandelion should be covered with long manure, i.e., with plenty of straw in it, until the middle of March; when it should be raked off. The dandelion will then commence to grow quite freely. As a stimulant, a dose of 3 parts superphosphate of lime, 2 parts nitrate of soda, and ½ a part sulphate of iron, at the rate of ½ an ounce to a gallon of water, is very beneficial towards the end of the summer, and will cause the bed to throw more new tender shoots up for the later nests. Once a fortnight will be sufficiently often to use the stimulant. Perhaps it is superfluous to say that dandelion should not be grown for birds in the immediate vicinity of trees. It should have the benefit of as much light, sun and air as is possible, and I should'nt care to use dandelion for nestling Canaries that was picked from a place less than ten yards from the nearest trees. The most successful rearer of young Canaries that I know uses dandelion grown as I have described. He always picks the young tender leaves, and gives it the parents about six times a day. He also gives young lettuce and chickweed; but the staple green food is dandelion. I don't think he has lost more than 5 per cent. of young ones hatched this last three years; which we must admit is very good indeed. Perhaps a word about the right kind of dandelion will not be out of place. To my certain knowledge there are not less than seven different varieties of dandelion; probably more. I am only a very indifferent draftsman, or I would have sent sketches of all the varieties; but I am doing perhaps the next best thing, I am sending the Editor some leaves of all of them. I have numbered them. If Mr. Whittle will let me have his address through the Editor, I will forward him some plants of the right sort, free of charge.

Another One-legged Hen Rears Young.

SIR,—Looking over CAGE BIRDS of August 20, I noticed a case of amputation of foot in the case of a Norwich Canary. I may say that I have a Yorkshire Canary hen whose foot I had to amputate myself in the middle of last (1909) season, the foot being caught in the wires. I had one nest of three birds from her after, and I have bred with her this season, having had some very promising youngsters. I trust "A lover of Canaries" will have the same success that I have had.

A Bathing Fatality.

SIR,—I regret to inform fanciers of the loss I have sustained through the bathing of a young cock Nightingale of great promise. As we were having our young stock show, on August 30, I gave him the bath on August 28, and forgot to remove it; so he had it on all day, and my father, who feeds my birds, thought I had put it in on the morning of August 29, so he left it in. When he returned home at about 4.30 o'clock, the young 'Gale was on his back in the bath nearly dead. He was taken out and dried, but died about an hour after. The bath I used was a earthenware dish about 1 inch deep—a kind I always use for my British birds. The 'Gale was one out of three I have hand-reared, and I feel the loss very much, as I had great hopes of him for the show bench, he being a very large bird. I hope no one will have a similar misfortune.

Under the White Rose.

SPEN Valley C.B.S. had a very interesting lecture at their headquarters last week, when that old veteran fancier, Mr. J. Overend, gave a very vivid account of his long and varied experiences with the Yorkshire Canary, his hearers being highly pleased with his reminiscences of the past forty years or more. He showed his first bird on a Sunday in 1870. This being the case, his relating of the doings of the Fancy, particularly in his earlier years, would make very interesting reading for the present generation, and perhaps also for the older hands; it would probably revive pleasant memories of the past for the latter. Does he ever sigh for the good old times?

THE Yorkshire Union Hand-book is now out of the printers' hands, and is a perfect fountain of knowledge in reference to the working of the Y.U. and the shows held under its patronage. The book altogether reflects great credit on the compiler, Mr. H. Hill, the genial secretary of the Union, its hundred pages of closely printed matter representing a vast amount of work and study. The book contains full particulars of rules, list of officers and delegates, list of Union shows, the competitions arranged by the Union CAGE BIRDS competitions and the prizes offered by the Y.C.C., C.M.Y.C.C., and the N.G.M.Y.C.C., the names aud addresses of the members in the thirty societies affiliated. Also for the first time the book contains the classification for the winter's shows of each society, along with other particulars, the Union balance-sheet for 1909, and one page (No. 72) of special interest to secretaries, giving particulars of the business to be transacted at various times of the year, so that the work of the Union can be carried out without delay, to the benefit of all concerned. Novice members' names should be in the secretaries' hands now, or they cannot compete for the gold medals offered, also this year nominations for next year's judges must be given in by September 15 latest.

ANYONE desiring one of these books can have one sent post free by the payment of sixpence, from the Union secretary, Mr. H. Hill, 15, Settle Terr., Thornton Road, Little Horton. All members of the Union will receive one free from their respective societies; see that you get it. The membership of the Union is only a few short of 1,200, and over 74 per cent. of them are novices, the figures reading 1,197—champions 308, novices 889. The society with most champions in its ranks is Windhill, they having only 20 novices out of 46 members, and having the honour to be the only society with a larger proportion on the champion side. On the other hand, we have a new society—Morley—who have 26 members, all of whom are novices; but they are somewhat closely run in this direction by the Pudsey and Stanningley Society, who boast one champion member out of a total of 22. The largest society affiliated is Halifax with 93 members, Gt. Horton being second with 84. On the other hand I am sorry to note that Guiseley have dwindled down to 15, thus holding the "wooden spoon." Buck up, friends, and get more members; you are closely followed by Batley with one member more.

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1910 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

I have had 4 hens and 2 cocks breeding, and have reared 38 young, all now doing well. I have besides a nest of 4 Linnets, which I put under one of my hens, as the old birds forsook them, the hedge in which they nested having to be cut down. I think this is a record for an amateur.—JOHN PYATT (Tamworth).

Clapham and District C.B.A.

Mr. A. W. Masters, a young member, has succeeded in rearing 75 very promising young Yorkshires, and the way in which he keeps his room does him great credit. Mr. Morris, of Tooting, has over 40 promising young Norwich. And there are several good Mules bred by the members this season. Generally speaking the members have had a very fair season.—A. C. ASKEW, hon. sec., Clapham and Dis. C.B.A.

An Excellent Record.

I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for five years, and would like to give you the results of my bird breeding this season. I started with 1 cock bird and 4 hens. One hen died on the nest and spoiled 5 eggs, all fertile. The three other hens have done very well. I have now 41 young ones on the sticks, and 4 in the nest, making a total of 45 living. There have been 67 eggs laid by the 4 hens (including the one that died), 64 have been fertile and 53 hatched. Of the others some were broken and others contained young "dead in shell," and all by the one cock. They are superb Borders, and are bred in curdoor aviaries. They are all in good health. I think CAGE BIRDS is very instructive for both old and young fanciers.—W. WATSON (Chippenham).

Loanhead and Dalkeith Societies.

The breeding season being over for another year, we are now looking forward to the show season. On the whole, I think there will be some good birds belonging to the members of the above club. I have visited nearly all the members, and found their various stocks looking well. The totals are: Scots Fancy, 58; Borders, 621; Norwich, 117; Mules, 24. So you will see the two clubs should be able to have very good shows. Dalkeith: Mr. Carson, 5. S. Fancy: Mr. J. Steel has only two Borders (wish you better luck next year, John); Mr. J. Hamilton 37 Borders and 4 Linnet Mules; Mr. J. Ewing, 12 Borders; Mr. A. Rowe, 42 Borders; Mr. T. Bickerstaff, 24 Borders; Mr. T. Hamilton, 26 Borders. Newton Grange: Mr. A. Gardiner, 36 Norwich: Mr. J. Thomson, 30 Borders; Mr. A. Thomson, 26 Borders. Bonnyrigg: Mr. J. Noble, 13 S. Fancies, 16 Borders; Mr. D. Noble, 2 S. Fancies, 18 Nor., 6 Borders; Mr. R. Fisher, 3 S. Fancy, 12 Borders. 1 Norwich; Mr. A. Betchin, 19 Borders; Mr. G. Harper, 16 Borders. Lasswade: Mr. J. Stirling, 26 Borders; Mr. W. Masterman, 15 Borders; Mr. W. McAdam, 1 S. Fancy, 4 Borders. 10 Mules. Musselburgh: Mr. R. Johnstone, 6 S. Fancy; Mr. J. King, 14 S. Fancy; Mr. J. Pearson, 34 Borders, 9 Norwich, 6 Mules. Portobello: Mr. W. R. Dunn, 45 Norwich, 15 Borders, 3 Mules. Bolton: Mr. J. Allan, 4 S. Fancies, 10 Borders. Our wortby president, Mr. A. Jardine, has been very unfortunate in not getting any, but we wish him better luck next year. Loanhead: Mr. A. Gilcbrist, 1 Scotcb Fancy, 14 Borders; Mr. D. Small, 6 Scotch Fancies, 14 Borders; Mr. G. Yule, 2 Scotch Fancies, 24 Borders; Mr. R. H. Douglas, 73 Borders: Mr. W. H. Nelson, 30 Borders; Mr. Dalgleish, 26 Borders, 1 Mule; Mr. W. B. Smart, 1 Scotch Fancy, 58 Borders, 7 Norwicb.—W. B. SMART, Hon. Sec., Loanhead C.B.S.

Dumfries, "Queen of the South."

The breeding season which is now closed in "the Queen of the South"—Dumfries—has been very disappointing to some fanciers, while to others it has been a most successful one. The cold east winds in the early part of the season caused many cases of eggbinding and "dead in shell," as well as the loss of many of the fanciers' best stock birds. The majority of the young birds are doing well in the moult, and several fanciers have very promising youngsters, which they are looking forward to putting on the show bench with success. The following are a few of the results:—Mr. T. McCredie has over 40 young Border Fancy Canaries, including some splendid clear yellows and buffs. Mr. J. Hannay has a few Scotch Fancies, and 16 young Borders, but things are not doing as he would like at present. Mr. McNeillie has had the worst of luck, not having been able to rear a young bird this season. Mr. McKean (Maxwelltown) has a few young Green Borders and Goldfinch and Canary Mules. Mr. R. Rome has 13 young Mules and 4 young Canaries. Mr. J. B. Richardson, president of the Border Fancy Canary Club, has over 60 young Borders and Mules, all doing well in the moult. Mr. S. Marchbank has over 30 young Borders doing well; but the disasters he has had would frighten many fanciers out of the fancy. Mr. W. Wilson has 26 young Borders, pleasing him up to the mark in the way they are going through the moult. Mr. R. Watson has 6 Goldfinch and Canary Mules, moulting nicely. Mr. J. Calderwood has 20 young Borders doing well, but owing to his "flitting" he has been terribly bandicapped in the breeding operations, losing many youngsters and eggs. Mr. R. Lawson has 6 fine young Scotch Fancies and 7 Border Fancies likely to be heard of later on the show bench, as they look like business. Mr. W. McMillan (Whitesands) has over 80 young Borders, mostly Greens and Cinnamons, and are bard in the moult. Mr. E. Johnstone has over 20 young Borders of a mixed variety doing well.—A DUMFRIES READER.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION FACES SOME DIFFICULT QUESTIONS.

Enthusiastic Meeting of Delegates at Leicester. Some Present-day Problems of the Fancy Grappled with. What will the Seceding Societies Do?

At the meeting of the delegates of the Cage Bird Union held at Leicester on August 27, it was plainly evident that business was meant, and a great deal of work was got through. So that if the Crystal Palace meeting proved a fiasco, it was more than atoned for.

There were eighteen delegates present at the Saracen's Head Hotel (the headquarters of the Leicester C.B.S.). Mr. W. A. Bladon (the President) presided. Others present: Messrs. R. Rhodes (Nottingham O.S.), Hy. Yeoman (Clapham C.B.S.), D. A. S. Longden (Welsh National C.B.S.), G. J. Warley (Wimbledon C.B.S.), J. A. Tyler (Leicester C.B.S.), J. H. de Maillet (Birmingham C.B.S.), J. E. Wood (Leicester Hand-in-Hand C.B.S.), A. Wright (Coventry Godiva), W. Lucas (Coventry O.S.), H. A. Nimmo (Liverpool O.S.), E. Ball (Wigan C.B.S.), W. Sampson (Cardiff C.B.S.), W. Stevens (Derby C.B.S.), J. Lomax (Bolton O.S.), T. Atkinson (Manchester and Northern Counties O.S.), J. Kelly (Sheffield C.B.S.), and the sec. (Mr. Geo. W. F. Lythgoe), who represented Pendleton and Salford O.S.

No time was lost in making a start; most of the delegates were ready, in fact, before the appointed time, and just after four o'clock a commencement was made. There were really two agendas to go through—the one submitted to the Crystal Palace meeting in February last, and the new one specially drawn up. It was decided at the outset to regard this as the adjourned meeting of the Palace, it being out of order otherwise for any alterations to be made to the rules of the Union.

The business transacted was of a practical nature, and, with the new spirit that is likely, it was thought, to be infused into the Union, this should pave the way to a useful and successful future of the C.B.U. All delegates required to attend meetings of the Union are in future to receive, where practicable, at least a fortnight's notice. The monthly list of C.B.U. shows which is sent to the Press is to be published a fortnight before the date of the first show appearing on the list. It was not thought necessary to form a special rule dealing with members showing Canaries in Mule classes, as cases of this description were already covered by the general rules.

Rule 17 (now rule 22) again came up for discussion. Very few were found to support the suggestion that the restrictive portion of it be deleted, it being thought one of the sheet-anchors of the Union; in fact, only four delegates opposed the amendment to allow the rule to remain as it was, which was agreed to therefore by an overwhelming majority.

A vote of thanks was accorded to the sec. (Mr. Lythgoe) for bringing about the amicable working arrangement with the Yorkshire Union. The suggestion that the Union hold a show for members only was very favourably received, and was thought a good idea by everyone; it was decided that the subject be considered at the next Council meeting. In future all birds must be the bona-fide property of the exhibitor at a Union show for at least fourteen days before the date of the show at which they are exhibited. Mr. Longden's recommendation that an exhibitor who is not a member of the Union be debarred from showing at any C.B.U. show, Crystal Palace excepted, was lost, it being thought prejudicial to the best interests of the Union to exclude small exhibitors from shows held under its rules.

The only recommendation the delegates "fought shy of" was "that the Union try to get better terms from the railway companies as regards rates of carriage of birds to and from shows." It was agreed that it was one thing to suggest, but another thing to "do any good."

In future the funds of the Union are to be banked in the names of the president, a treasurer, and the secretary, two names to be deemed sufficient. Sheffield's suggestion—to institute a system of card voting, delegates representing a society of 30 members to have 30 votes, and so on—was not adopted, chiefly because it would give the larger societies undue influence in the Union.

The above is a brief resume of the chief of the business. The meeting lasted well over three hours, not a moment of which, practically speaking, was lost or wasted. Not a hitch of any kind occurred, and the determination and disinterestedness of the delegates throughout the proceedings were no less conspicuous than the unanimity of feeling with which the various recommendations and suggestions were considered. At the conclusion of the proceedings some of the delegates had to leave hurriedly to catch trains, but the majority sat down to a meat tea, over which the genial Mr. J. A. Tyler (the sec. of the Leicester C.B.S., which holds its meetings at the same place) ably presided, playing the part of "mine host" excellently. None but those who were present can appreciate to the full the enjoyment of this repast. To see Mr. Rhodes carving the pork and beef, Mr. Tyler pouring out the tea, Mr. Lythgoe handing the plates round, and one and all feeling that they were sitting down to a well-earned tea with the satisfaction of having done a deal of business of which they had cause to be proud—to see these things, was alone worth the journey to Leicester.

The Business

After the reading of the minutes, which were passed, on the motion of Mr. Tyler, seconded by Mr. Longden, the Secretary, Mr. Lythgoe, read several letters of apologies for absence, etc. Before proceeding with the agenda Mr. Rhodes raised the point as to whether they were in order in dealing with alterations of rules, as, according to Rule 25, the Union's rules could "be altered or added to at the annual meeting of the delegates, but not otherwise." Mr. Lythgoe suggested that this meeting was the adjourned Crystal Palace (1910) meeting. Mr. Longden took it, he said, that this was a special meeting, called to consider the position of the Cage Bird Union; therefore they were perfectly in order in going through with the Palace agenda. The notice calling the meeting was then read out by the Secretary, after which, Mr. Bladon having emphasised the necessity of doing something definite now that such a good number of delegates were met together, it was decided, on the motion of Mr. Longden, seconded by Mr. Wright, to regard the meeting as the adjourned Palace meeting, and so go on with the agenda of that meeting before proceeding with that of the present one. Another informal matter needing to be settled was the election of a president and secretary; the Secretary pointed out that whilst Mr. Bladon and himself had been voted to the respective positions they had not been elected. They were elected on the motion of Mr. Rhodes, seconded by Mr. Nimmo.

The Sunderland Society's recommendation, "that all delegates required to attend delegate meetings to receive at least a fortnight's notice," was agreed to (with the addition of the words "where practicable"), on the proposition of Mr. Rhodes, seconded by Mr. Yeoman. The same society's recommendation "that the monthly list of C.B.U. shows to appear in the Press a fortnight before the date of the first show," was also agreed to, on the motion of Mr. J. H. de Maillet, seconded by Mr. Tyler.

On the next recommendation, viz., "That a member showing at a non-affiliated or a non-licensed show be severely dealt with, and that district secretaries obtain catalogues of all shows in that district, and enquire into doubtful cases," Mr. Lythgoe pointed out that the proposal came from a society that was no longer in the Union, having definitely withdrawn; he wondered, he said, if they were in order in dealing with the matter.

MR. LONGDEN: Our idea, I take it, is to try and get the societies that have withdrawn to come back again?

MR. YEOMAN: I propose that we pass this recommendation by, as the same matter is down for discussion in item No. 5.

Mr. Nimmo pointed out that similar resolutions were to be dealt with in Nos. 8 and 10, and MR. WARLEY said he thought all might be amalgamated under the names of the various societies—to show that none were overlooked. It was agreed thereupon, Mr. Wright proposing and Mr. Lomax seconding, to postpone the matter until later on in the meeting.

The proposal of the Leek Society, "That any member showing Canaries in Mule classes be expelled for three years," was thought by Mr. Nimmo to be a little too severe; anyone was quite apt to make a mistake, he said, and show a Canary unknowingly in a Mule class.

MR. KELLY said that if an exhibitor did so, and had his bird disqualified in consequence, and then sent it out again to a Canary class, he ought certainly to be severely dealt with.

MR. LYTHGOE thought it a matter that could well be dealt with under the existing rules of the Union—(hear, hear)—and Mr. Rhodes pointed out that as the rules provided for matters of that kind, it was not necessary to frame a particular rule. Mr. Nimmo proposed, and Mr. Atkinson seconded, that no action be taken in the matter, which was agreed to.

Rule 22 Again!

MR. KELLY proposed, on behalf of the Sheffield Society, "That Rule 22 be deleted." The Sheffield Society, he said, had lost members who had stated expressly that they were leaving on account of Rule 22 of the C.B.U.; and the society had friends waiting to enter its ranks providing that the society did not belong to the Union, or else that Rule 22 was deleted. He proposed that, as the Union had found Rule 22 of no use in the past, they should delete it, and see how they went on without it. But he wished to say that in moving the deletion of the rule he only meant the restrictive portion of it.

[The Rule 22 in the C.B.U. Handbook reads as follows: "22.—In like manner, affiliated societies shall be liable to suspension if they accept entries from such suspended individuals or engage suspended judges; and registered members of the Union shall be liable to suspension if found exhibiting at a suspended or non-affiliated or non-licensed club's show, other than first-feather shows, and shows or classes confined to members or limited to a county though given at an open show."—EDITOR.]

MR. RHODES asked if the representative of the Sheffield Society had considered what would be the good of the Union without the rule? (Hear, hear.) What would be the advantage, he added, of belonging to the Union but for the rule?

MR. LYTHGOE: We have to use compulsion. It took a long time for our (cage bird) conservative people to see the advantages to be derived from the Union. Other unions have taken a score or more of years to get into the position they are in; and, in any case, there was plenty of money behind them, whereas we have not plenty of funds. I think the rule is necessary because many societies would not trouble to be in the Union without it. Another very strong point is in reference to the mixed shows. In April, 1907, I wrote on this matter in a letter I sent to the societies belonging to the Union. The vote which was taken on the matter at the time resulted as follows: There were 120 societies in the Union, and 92 papers were returned, 72 societies being in favour of the retention of the rule, and 20 against. In the letter I said: "The Council would point out that without this rule many societies will drop out of the Union, and it is certain that few, if any, shows will apply for licences to hold their shows under the Union's rules. No mixed show would trouble to take out a licence, the cage bird section generally being considered a very secondary branch of the show. . . . Most of the cases that have been brought to the Union's notice are cases of default on the part of mixed shows, either by non payment of special prize money, amalgamating classes without notice, or paying half prize money without any notice to this effect being given in the schedules; and also almost wilful neglect of the birds themselves. Further, exhibitors suspended by the Union would have the run of all shows not applying for licence, as well as the shows of such societies as refrain from reaffiliating to the Union. . . . The Council further point out that this rule to which exception has been taken is no new feature; it is adopted by many kindred unions. . . . The secretary of the Pigeon Club writes: 'You have some splendid rules, especially 14, 15, and 17.' [Rule 17 is the one in question, it having subsequently become Rule 22.—EDITOR.] 'To be able to exercise real power in this fashion is a step in the right direction for the Fancy; I wish our rules were more to the effect of these three.'"

Another point, continued Mr. Lythgoe, is that at mixed shows you often get a rabbit judge to judge your Canaries. (Laughter.) If this rule is deleted we shall have absolutely no control over mixed shows.

MR. STEVENS: Mixed shows, as a rule, are composed of all sorts of fanciers, and they run just two or three cage bird classes at their shows for the benefit of the one or two cage bird members—to keep them in the society. This rule is stopping such from showing—(Cries of "No, no.")—well, at any rate, it keeps their friends from showing, who may belong to affiliated societies, and who may genuinely wish to help the society holding a mixed show.

MR. TYLER said he wished to show why he thought they should stick to this rule. He then related his early experiences in the exhibiting world—how he had, in ignorance, shown birds at "one of the most mismanaged shows" he had ever come across, one that did not have a licence from the Union. If you delete this rule, he concluded, what are you going to have in its place to safeguard the birds at the mixed shows against improper treatment, etc., such as I had to put up with?

MR. RHODES: It is absolutely necessary that we should exercise control at the mixed shows over the cage bird classes; and it is vital to the interests of the Fancy that this rule, or one like it, should be in force; and it is suicidal to attempt to carry on this Union without it. (Hear, hear.)

MR. LYTHGOE pointed out that by the retention of the rule they were going to hurt one or two societies in London who say that their fear is that if the rule is retained they will have to look to northern exhibitors to make their (London) shows a success.

MR. WRIGHT: If, as Mr. Rhodes pointed out, this is the only rule by which the Union can be kept together, well, I don't think the rules are worth much. I think there should be some better spirit at work. I don't see that coercion is going to help us to do the great thing needed.

MR. BALL: We all suffer coercion more or less; we all have to stand by the majorities in our societies. As members of the Union we must do all we can to retain those members who are far away from the centre of the Union's power, and to do all we can to make the exhibitions a success. Sheffield's included. We must show our loyalty by assisting them, sending them our entries. (Hear, hear.)

MR. KELLY: Rule 22 has been tried in the past, and it has not been a success. Societies are withdrawing from the Union, and it is becoming weaker each year; and I say it is only prolonging the agony. If, as has been said, we cannot stand without Rule 22, we had better not.

MR. LONGDEN: I don't agree with the last speaker that the rule has not been a success. (Hear, hear.) I think it is through the attitude of some of the London societies that the Union is in the position it is to-day; and I think, too, that if we stick to Rule 22 we shall show those London societies that we can do without them well enough.

MR. SAMPSON: I don't think it is right for us to blame Rule 22 for the withdrawal of the societies from the Union. It is through the Union's mismanagement in the past that the societies have withdrawn, I think.

MR. WARLEY: The Federation of London is the cause. If that hadn't been formed, the C.B.U. would have been in a better position at the present time than it is.

MR. BLADON: The difficulty seems to me to be that the objectors are not able to see eye to eye with the framers of these rules. If all were to be amicable they could not help but work smoothly, and the Union would be a grand thing, one of the grandest ever brought before the cage bird Fancy in this country. (Hear, hear.)

MR. LYTHGOE: The main objection that has, previous to this year, been brought forward is that certain members were not able to show at Yorkshire Union shows—London did not like the rule simply because it was London. Many of the specialist clubs gave their patronage at lots of the Yorkshire Union shows, and our members were debarred from showing, simply because the Y.U. did not see their way clear to come into line with the Union. But now that the two Unions have agreed to work together I think there ought to be no objection to the rule.

The motion of Mr. Kelly was seconded by Mr. Nimmo, viz., "That the restrictive portion of Rule 22 be deleted." There was an amendment, proposed by Mr. Atkinson, and seconded by Mr. Lucas, to leave rule as at present, which was carried by twelve votes to four.

A Cage Bird Un on Show.

MR. KELLY, on behalf of the Sheffield Society, proposed that the Union hold a show for members of the Union only. It was suggested by his society, he said, that the show should be run in place of that which would ordinarily be run by the society (in whose town the Union decide to hold it); also that the society in question run it, the C.B.U. appointing a show manager.

MESSRS. RHODES and LOMAX, and the CHAIRMAN said they thought the idea a good one.

MR. YEOMAN: And if we could fix it to be held on the same date as the Crystal Palace Show, so much the better. (Laughter.)

MR. WRIGHT asked if it were proposed that the show be financed by the Union, and worked by the society, any profits to be taken by the Union; to which questions replies in the affirmative were given.

MR. RHODES: So that the society will not hold a show of their own for that year? In that case, of course, the society will have the trouble and worry of running the show, but will derive no profits therefrom.

It was agreed that as most of the shows for the coming season had been fixed up, it was too late to do anything in the matter for this year.

MR. LOMAX thought that the holding of a show would help to bring other societies into line with the Union.

THE CHAIRMAN: There will have to be some plan of working the show, but that, of course, is a matter to be considered later. All we have now to do is to decide on the principle of the suggestion.

MR. KELLY explained that the proposition was one which he personally had had placed on the agenda. He was not, he said, particularly well up in the working of shows, but the holding of the suggested show would, he felt sure, serve to test the loyalty of the members of the Union.

MR. WARLEY: I should like to see the experiment made. If the Union members showed their loyalty by sending entries to Clapham Show (which is to be held quite early in the season), they (the Union) will then know whether it will be advisable to run a show.

On the proposition of Mr. Kelly, seconded by Mr. Yeoman, it was unanimously agreed that a Union Members' Show be considered at the next meeting of the Council.

Vote of Thanks to the Secretary.

Anent the proposal (of the Sheffield Society) "that an arrangement be made with the Yorkshire Union, so as to allow members of both Unions to show at both Unions' shows," Mr. Lythgoe pointed out that, as the suggested arrangement had already been come to, the matter, of course, would not need to be dealt with.

MR. NIMMO: As our secretary, Mr. Lythgoe was responsible for this amicable arrangement, I proposes that a vote of thanks be given him.

This proposal was seconded by Mr. Yeoman, and carried unanimously.

On the proposal of the Rochdale Good Intent C.B.S., viz., "That all affiliated societies be balloted regarding Rule 22, so as to give C.B.U. members an equal chance of exhibiting with the Yorkshire Union at any show, whether affiliated or not," Mr. Lythgoe stated that the Rochdale G.I. C.B.S. withdrew from the Union on account of their not being able to show in Yorkshire; but that difficulty had since been met, so that he supposed the matter would fall through. This was agreed to.

Verdict, 14 Days!

MR. LONGDEN proposed: "That all birds be the bona fide property, and in the possession of exhibitors at least seven days before the date of show." One case, he said, was known to him where birds changed hands three times in a week. It was, he said, nothing but fraudulent.

MR. LUCAS seconded the proposal.

MR. WRIGHT stated that he thought twenty-eight days was quite little enough time for a bird to be in the possession of an exhibitor.

MR. WOOD: It is a very simple thing to say twenty-eight days, but how are you going to prove that a bird has not been in the possession of an exhibitor for twenty-eight days? I think we are going too far in fixing it at a month.

MR. RHODES said he thought fourteen days quite long enough.

MR. YEOMAN: At the same time, you must not debar the man from purchasing who wants to make a legitimate deal, which you are likely to do if you fix the period at a month.

MR. LONGDEN said he was agreeable to amend his motion to read fourteen days, but

MR. NIMMO moved that the original motion reading seven days be adopted, this being seconded by Mr. Wood.

MR. TYLER then moved that it be fourteen days. This was seconded by Mr. Yeoman, and on being put to the meeting received nine votes for and six against. The Chairman then unwittingly concluded this part of the business with the words: "Very well, fourteen days; next business please," which caused a deal of laughter.

"What's Good for the Goose," etc.

MR LONGDEN proposed: "That an exhibitor not being a member of the Union be debarred from showing at any C.B.U. show, Crystal Palace excepted." He was, he said, strongly of the opinion that non-Union members should not have the benefits of Union shows.

MR. LUCAS: I second the proposition. And if the Crystal Palace Show is not brought into line this season I propose that steps be taken to endeavour to do so next season.

MR. TYLER: If it's good for the Crystal Palace Show to be excepted, it is good for any other society's show to be excepted. (Hear, hear.)

MR. WRIGHT: Our show (the Coventry Godiva C.B.S.) is made up of a wonderful lot of small exhibitors around the district, who show, in some cases, only one bird; and, although we have paid full prize money within 7 days of the show, we have never yet made both ends meet financially. So that if we are going to debar these exhibitors from showing at our fixtures, where shall we be? You are simply going to cut the ground from under our feet. You will also debar those exhibitors from joining our society, whose success will help to ensure the success of the Union.

MR. WOOD said he too had been instructed by his society to oppose this suggestion by all means. Those, he said, who were secretaries knew to what extent the success of a show depended on the support of the small exhibitor. The Leicester Hand-in-Hand had not for the last 6 or 7 years made a financial success of their annual shows. The passing of this motion would debar his society from accepting between 13 and 20 per cent. of their former entries. Many societies, too, would be ruined, and would, of course, secede from the Union. Some of the delegates might say: Then you could "levy" the members. Yes, he would reply, and bring about the ruin of the society all the quicker. (Hear, hear.)

MR. SAMPSON said he thought it would be folly on their part to pass the resolution, and Mr. Rhodes was of the opinion that they were not strong enough to pass it, while Mr. Lythgoe considered that, had the proposal been made when the Union was being formed, it might have been a very good thing.

On the proposition being put to the meeting, it was lost, two only voting for it.

The proposal of the Southend Society: "That the Union do not affiliate or license any society unless the said society guarantee to pay all prize money within 14 days. Secretaries failing to notify the Union Secretary within 21 days the secretary to take such steps as may be necessary for the recovery of same, and that catalogues be sent," was agreed to, with the additional requisition that secretaries send catalogues with awards to the Secretary of the Union within 3 days of the show.

The Pendleton and Salford suggestion: "That entries from non-registered members of the Union be not accepted at shows held under C.B.U. rules," having been already dealt with, was therefore dismissed.

The Railway Question Again.

The same society also recommended "That the Union try to get better terms from the railway companies as regards rates of carriage of birds to and from shows."

MR. TYLER: I suggest that the man who brought this matter forward have a try first. (Laughter.)

MR. LYTHGOE: I can't do anything in the matter. The only thing we can do is to act in conjunction with other specialist unions. He had written, he said, to the secretaries of other unions, and they had replied to the effect that, when next they moved in the matter they would send him word.

Under the heading, "Any suggestions calculated to advance the interests of the Union, Mr. YEOMAN asked what his (Clapham) society should do in the matter of accepting or not accepting entries from members of societies that had withdrawn from the Union, but, having paid the subscriptions for the current year, were virtually still affiliated? They (the society) did not want to do anything wrong, but at the same time they wanted all the entries they could get. (Hear, hear.)

MR. LYTHGOE: Under the existing rules of the Union Clapham may accept entries from anyone, whether a member of the Union or not.

A Knotty Point.

MR. NIMMO moved: "That any member of an affiliated society, being a member of a specialist club which is not affiliated to the C.B.U., be at liberty to compete in such classes at a non-union show, which should have been provided for the purpose of a competition between the members of his specialist club." This was a matter, said the speaker, which affected his (the Liverpool Ornithological) society very considerably, as a number of the members (himself included) were debarred from exhibiting at some shows where the patronage of the Green Canary Association was given; which was a serious matter in view of competition for points. And as a society, too, they would certainly stand to obtain more members if the proposed privilege were granted.

MR. YEOMAN drew attention to the fact that the last time the matter was brought before the Union the remedy suggested was that the G.C.A. (or for that matter, any specialist club, for no particular one was specified) should join the Union.

Letters that had passed between the secretary of the Liverpool O.S. and the secretary of the Union, between April and July of the current year, relative to this matter, and dealing with the same resolution, were read by Mr. Nimmo. The object of the proposal was, it was stated, merely to put the members of the Union on an equal footing with members of specialist clubs. To put the matter in a nutshell, 30 members were banded together for the purpose of running a show; 25 of them belonged to the G.C.A.; and in order to follow up the patronage of the Association they would have to resign membership of the L.O.S., which would mean the disbanding of the society. The only alternative to losing the 25 members would be to withdraw from the Union, which they (as a society) were reluctant to do.

MR. LYTHGOE: Would not your 25 members have sufficient weight with the G.C.A. to get it to join the Union? The only objection the G.C.A., 3 or 4 years back, had to joining the Union was that most of the Association's patronage was given to Yorkshire Union shows; but now that the difficulty between the two Unions no longer exists, this would, I think, be the time for the Association to join us. (Hear, hear.)

MR. NIMMO: I am very sorry to have to say that the 25 members could not bring pressure to bear upon the G.C.A. It rests therefore with the Union to say whether we as a society are going to stand or fall by being in the C.B.U. I am glad to say that, with one exception (Crewe and Dis. O.S.), the G.C.A. patronage has gone to C.B.U. shows. (Hear, hear.)

MR. LONGDEN said he thought they would find that most of the specialist clubs were affiliated.

MR. BLADON: I am afraid the concession would lead to a lot of confusion. (Hear, hear.) But

MR. NIMMO did not see, he said, where the confusion came in.

MR. WRIGHT then moved that the matter be adjourned to the next delegates' meeting. This was seconded by Mr. TYLER, and on being put to the meeting was carried.

Judging Questions.

This completed the Crystal Palace agenda, and the delegates proceeded with the agenda for the day, the first item of which was a proposal by the District Committee No. 3, viz., "That Union members be not allowed to judge non-Union shows"; which was supported by Preston O.S., who, in turn, proposed "That non-Union judges be not allowed to judge Union shows."

On the matter of the first resolution, MR. LYTHGOE moved "that we do not adopt the suggestion," which was seconded by MR. TYLER, and carried.

MR. LYTHGOE moved that the second suggestion be not adopted; this was seconded by MR. LOMAX, and also carried.

Another recommendation of Dist. Committee No. 3, "that the yearly meetings be held alternately at a show in the South, Midlands and the North," was thought by MR. YEOMAN to be a very good idea; but MR. RHODES said he was afraid they would not get the North to come South, nor the South to go North, and consequently did not think it would be a wise thing to agree to this suggestion.

It was generally thought that it was far the best plan to hold the meeting apart from a show, in order that delegates might concentrate their minds upon, and confine their attentions to, the business of the Union. On the motion of Mr. Kelly, it was decided to deal with the matter at the next meeting of delegates.

MR. ATKINSON, as representing Dist. Committee No. 4, proposed "That the Associate's fee be reduced from 2/6 to 1/-.—That the Council take steps to have Rule 22 extended, and to read that non-members of the Union shall be debarred from exhibiting at Union shows." The recommendation was also supported by Sale O.S. and Preston O.S. The speaker stated that it was thought this would be an inducement to the smaller exhibitor to join the Union.

MR. KELLY seconded the proposition, which was carried.

A Treasurer Wanted.

The Dist. Committee No 5 suggested an alteration of Rule 12 to read: "The Officers of the Union shall be a president, secretary, treasurer, and an executive council, and the funds of the society shall be banked in the names of the president, secretary and treasurer."

MR. LYTHGOE pointed out that at the present time the funds of the Union were banked in the names of the president and the secretary of the Union, and the suggestion was to have them banked in the names of the president, secretary, and the treasurer. He thought it would be a good idea to have another officer appointed.

MR. ATKINSON moved the proposition, which was seconded by MR. WARLEY, and carried, subject to confirmation at the next meeting, with the addition of the words, "two signatures to be sufficient."

MR. KELLY suggested, on behalf of the Sheffield Society, "A better way of disposing of cases of faked birds, the matter to be reported by the policeman delegate to the committee of the show where bird is exhibited, and they to settle matter on the spot, and if birds are faked, to report to headquarters." The idea, said the speaker, was to settle the matter without so much "round aboutness," so to speak.

MR. ATKINSON said he thought the said cases were quite covered by show rule No. 10, and as the meeting were assured of this, the matter was dropped and the suggestion dismissed.

MR. KELLY again moved, "To institute a system of card voting, so that a delegate representing 30 has a card of 30, 50 a card of 50, and 100 a card of 100, and so on."

MR. J. H. DE MAILLET said that he foresaw a difficulty over this, and wrote to Mr. Lythgoe, from whom he learned that 24 societies had over thirty members—having a total membership of 1,238—50 societies had members numbering 1,020, and another 52 societies had sent the minimum subscription without giving the number of members. Now, said the speaker, it was obvious that by the suggested system of card voting, the strongest societies would practically rule the roost; which should not be. (Hear, hear.) It would be a fairer way for a society to have one vote. (Hear, hear.)

MR. LYTHGOE pointed out that 6 out of the 24 societies having over 30 members each managed to number 705 members—over half the membership of the whole of the 24 societies.

MR. RHODES said he certainly could not see his way clear to support the proposal.

But the suggestion did not find a seconder; probably (it was explained) because the views of the majority of the members of the Union had not been ascertained. It therefore fell through.

West Bromwich Society urged the Union "to force the payment of prize money according to the rules of the Union, won at Union shows." The case of a London society that had defaulted in this respect was casually discussed, when it was thought desirable to instruct the secretary of the Union to obtain counsel's opinion as to whether or not it would be advisable to proceed against the society in question with a view to forcing the payment of prize money.

MR. RHODES stated that the difficulty was to find a solicitor who would be prepared to act in an honorary capacity for the Union.

It was unanimously agreed that here was one of the ways in which the Union's power might be made to be felt, and its usefulness made manifest.

MR. RHODES proposed, and MR. ATKINSON seconded, "that the secretary be authorised to consult a solicitor on the matter," which was agreed to.

This concluded the business of the meeting, the delegates having sat from 4 o'c until nearly 7.30 without a break. A vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding, proposed by MR. RHODES, and seconded by MR. NIMMO, and another vote of thanks to the secretary, proposed by MR. BLADON, and seconded by MR. LOMAX, concluded the meeting, these gentlemen suitably responding.

No. 440.
A Safety Travelling Box.
Sent by Mr. B. O. Brett, 62, Cantwell Road, Plumstead, S.E.

Enclosed is a sketch of a safety travelling box. After obtaining the travelling box, cut four angle pieces as shown in sketch, and nail them in the corners of the box. Having done this, get a piece of calico, linen, or any suitable cloth, and tack it to the centre of the four corner pieces, as also shown. "A.A." are holes in the side for ventilation. A small door can be made in the lid as at "B." This makes a very safe travelling box. When one's birds are sent on long journeys this box is very useful, for if the birds are roughly handled they have not the wooden sides to be jolted against. I hope this will be of benefit to some of your readers.—B. O. BRETT.

An Outside Feeder or Drinker.
Sent by Miss Latham, Park Hill House, Croydon.

Here is an illustration of an easily made outside feeder or drinker for breeding cages. It should be of a size to take the square ends of glass drinkers 2¾ by 1¾ by 1⅛ inches. Take a piece of flat tin or zinc, 7 by 6½ inches, and cut as shown in illustration. The five holes should be cut with a brace and ¼-inch bit before the sides are joined up. Bend up and then solder all the edges together. Bend a piece of straight wire to fit the bottom edge, go halfway up sides, then solder it on, bending the ends to form hooks. The glass drinker then goes inside, and the job is complete.—MISS LATHAM.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy" No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and illustrations from photographs. Another charming gift book.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and 12 words of description, 250 2/-, 500 2/6, carriage paid.

LOCHORE & GLENCRAIG F.A.

Meeting held in the Public Hall, about 40 members being in attendance. After the business, the company adjourned to Mr. McMenemey's to present Mr. John Brown, late secretary, with a handsome travelling bag and pocket knife. He is leaving shortly for America. Mr. John Philp was called upon to take the chair and to make the presentation. Mr. Brown suitably replied, and afterwards an enjoyable evening was spent in song and recitation, and the meeting concluded with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."—THOMAS W. PEEL, Sec.

MUSSELBURGH.

Monthly meeting held on August 27th. The treasurer, Mr. T. Nisbet, in the absence of the President, Mr. W. R. Dunn, took the chair. After reading the minutes of the May and committee meetings, the balance-sheet of the First Feather Show was gone through, and approved of, and the prizes paid over. The classification for the Annual show, to be held on November 26th, next claimed our attention. The result of the voting was: Scotch Fancy, two classes; Yorkshire, one class; Norwich ten classes; Border Fancy, 12 classes; house-moulted British, nine classes; field-moulted, two classes; foreign, three classes. The judges are: Messrs. P. McKenzie (Kelso), and Allan Chalmers (Kirkintilloch).—WM. NISBET, Hon. Sec.

BARRINGTON, ETC., SOCIAL CLUB C.B.S.

The members of the Social Club C.B.S. were treated to a very interesting and instructive lecture on "The Breeding and Management of the Norwich Plainhead," on August 28, at headquarters; and there was a good company, considering the very boisterous weather. The lecturer gave some practical advice. Various questions were answered in a satisfactory and straightforward manner, and a general discussion followed. No doubt the novices present gained a lot of information. Mr. McNally made an ideal chairman. Mr. Douglas proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer. He had, he said, followed him with great interest, and found that practical advice was much better than theory. Mr. Woollett seconded the vote of thanks. The lecturer suitably replied, and a most enjoyable evening was brought to a close.—W. WOOLLETT, Secretary.

PLUMSTEAD & WOOLWICH C.B.S.

General meeting held Aug. 18, at headquarters, Trinity Schools, Beresford Street, Woolwich, when a good muster of members turned up. By the way, the members are taking a good deal more interest in the society's welfare than formerly, and things look well for a very successful year. The business done, and two more new members elected, the chairman, Mr. Hartland, called upon Mr. Hazell to give his paper on colour-feeding. Mr. Hazell was well received. He started with the time he first began giving his birds the feed, and the strengths he used at the least and the most; and he explained how careful he was to reduce the strength as the birds got well on with the moult, so as not to get the birds too hot in the head, this being one of the things to guard against. The members well questioned him, and he was always ready with a most suitable answer. A vote of thanks to Mr. Hazell brought a very successful meeting to a close.—DIBBLEY AND MEADES, Joint Hon. Secs.

SWANSEA C.B.S.

Presentation to Late Secretary.

Special meeting held at Market Coffee Tavern, on August 23rd, the occasion being to make a presentation to the late secretary, Mr. Alf. Hitchings. Owing to the inclemency of the weather, there was not a very large attendance. Several letters were read from leading gentlemen of the town apologising for absence. The presentation took the form of a specially designed gold medal and pendant, bearing the Welsh Dragon. Mr. Phil Jenkins, being the oldest member of the society present, was called upon by the chairman, Mr. F. Heal, to make the presentation. Mr. Jenkins said he was proud to hand over to our late secretary these handsome gifts, because the idea of this presentation originated amongst the younger members, and they had shown the older ones that when they set their minds to do certain things, they accomplished them. He was proud, too, to tell them that when the society first started ten years ago, they had a membership of only nine, but after hard work and many ups and downs, they had to-day a membership of nearly 100. They now held the enviable position of being the premier Society of Wales. They had started in a small way in their open shows, and had gradually increased their classification, to which the fanciers of the country heartily responded with entries. They were able to provide 66 classes, open to all fanciers, in this year's schedule. Mr. Hitchings had for four years worked hard for the benefit of the society, and during that time had given great satisfaction to the members. Last year's work was crowned with great success; it being a record year for entries, nearly 800 birds being staged at the open show. This must have entailed a considerable amount of work for Mr. Hitchings. The speaker hoped the late secretary would continue an active member. He therefore had great pleasure, on behalf of the society, in handing over to him this present.

Mr. Alf. Hitchings, on rising to receive the same, was given a hearty reception. He trusted the same spirit which had been shown him by the members during his term of office would continue for his successor; by so doing the members would further the advancement of the society. It was with great reluctance he had given up his duties of secretary to the society, but was compelled to do so by a change of occupation. During his term of office he had received the support of all the members, who had lightened his duties considerably by their support, and had shared in bringing the society to its present proud position. He would like to mention the splendid part the Fancy Press had taken in helping to bring about this success, by their kindness in publishing the reports of the meetings, and also by giving such splendid reports of their open show the same week as it was held. He hoped to remain amongst them, and to do his part in the work before them. He thanked the members for their kindness, which they had shown him by their splendid presentation, which he would long cherish; it would always bring back to his mind the happy hours spent with them.

Messrs. F. Heal, D. Mugford, G. Balsh, and other members also spoke. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. D. Mugford for the manner in which he had carried out the duties of collecting for the presentation. During the evening a capital musical programme was gone through by local artistes, during which light refreshments were served. A most enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of the Welsh National Anthem, "Hen Wlad fy Nhadau" ("Land of my Fathers").—S. H. GEORGE, Hon. Sec.

CODNOR PARK AND DIS. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Aug. 27, Mr. W. Holmes in the chair. Very few members turned up to discuss the open show business. The show fixed for Oct. 22, owing to a strong debate, was altered to Nov. 19, which I hope will prove satisfactory to all. If members would only attend the meetings better the business would be much easier for me. Will they please try and attend a special meeting on Sept. 10 at 6.30?—J. H. MITCHELL, Hon. Sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Special meeting held at headquarters on Aug. 27, at 7, Mr. Stenhouse (President) in the chair. We received the patronage of the Border Fancy C.C. It was agreed to print their conditions in our schedule. Also agreed to accept the patronage of the Fife and Kinross Norwich P.C. Also to write for the patronage of the Scottish British Bird and M.C., and to pay first prize for 7 entries as before. A sub-committee was appointed to draw up schedule. This being all the business the meeting closed.—JOHN FOND, Sec.

FIFE & KINROSS NORWICH P.C.

Meeting held in Penman's Masonic Arms, Cowdenbeath, August 27th, for the purpose of granting patronage. The following societies have received our patronage: October 15th, Lochgelly (judge, Mr. Smeaton); October 22nd, Kelty and Blairadam (judge, Mr. Watson); December 17th, Bowhill (judge, Mr. Hampton). There is another show to receive patronage yet, and it lies between two societies, to be settled at next meeting, September 17th. The following donations have been received: T. Wildridge, 10s.; Sir C. E. Adam, 7s. 6d.; W. Spence, 10s.; Inspector Mitchell, 7s. 6d.; gold medal by Mr. Penman; silver medals by W. Lister and Messrs. Sandiford. The club is in a very flourishing condition, and any Norwich fanciers intending to join should do so now before the show season commences. All information from me.—A. DICKSON, Sec., 37, Adams-terrace, Kelty.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

At last meeting the schedule for members' young show, Oct. 26th (all sections) was drawn up, and a liberal classification provided for all sections. It was decided to provide open classes for mice and children's pets. The judges elected were:—Mr. A. E. Enfield (cage birds, etc.), and Messrs. E. J. Naish, and J. Lindsay. Several really good specials were promised by members present, and the president, Mr. T. H. Harrison, wrote promising a special of a silver spoon. Specials were also promised by other members for best in cage bird and other sections. Prize cards, certificates, and special prizes won at last monthly show were presented to winners. Several new members were proposed for election. Next meeting September 8th, when all members are requested to attend, as the schedule for young stock show will be confirmed; also other show arrangements made.—W. MAXEY, Hon. Sec.

STOCKPORT B.F.A.

Usual fortnightly meeting held August 23rd at Boar's Head Hotel. Mr. J. E. Davies presided. He afterwards offered to the society six valuable prizes for competition at the next annual show. These prizes are for section specials, and are: a barometer, a splendid set of carvers, a very nice timepiece (which only needs winding up once in 400 days), a handsome flower stand, a six-bottle cruet, and a smaller cruet. Needless to say, these prizes were thankfully accepted. A very hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Davies for his generosity. After several members had set longing eyes upon them, the gifts were placed in the hands of Mr. Goodall, tailor, St. Petersgate, in whose window they may be seen during this next week. A hearty invitation is offered to new members to join at once, as they will have an equal chance in the competition for the above prizes.—W. STAFFORD, Sec.

ASHINGTON AND DIS. C.B.S.

Questions and Answers.

Usual meeting held at Mr. Rowley's. The president being unable to attend, Mr. Barron took the chair. There was a good muster of members. Messrs. King, Middleton, Barron, and Graham were appointed subscription committee for Hirst; Messrs. Wallace and Tomlinson for Ashington; and Messrs. Graham and Waddle for Newbiggen. The chairman called upon those present to write any question or questions on paper; these were put into a hat and drawn out in rotation and discussed.

"In your experience of Mules, which would you place first between a dark Mule and a variegated?" by Mr. Hall.—There was a difference of opinion, but most were in favour of the dark winning, if size, shape, etc., were equal.

"When a hen refuses to feed her young ones and lays five or six nests of eggs, say 30 or more, has it any detrimental effect upon the hen?" by Mr. Lackey.—The majority thought that it would spoil her for another season.

By Mr. Baker: "What constitutes an uneven-marked bird?"—Mr. Middleton said that the term "uneven" applied to two, three, or five technical marks on eyes, wings, or tail separately, or in addition to other marks on the bird's body.

By Mr. Wallace: "What, in your opinion, is the best place to keep Canaries or British birds—outdoors or indoors?"—The general opinion was that if you had plenty of room available the Canaries were better indoors, but that the British birds would do better in an outside aviary.

By Mr. Waddle: "What is the best thing to give when a bird is stuck in moult?"—Mr. Lackey favoured a change of temperature and diet; Mr. Graham cochineal tea; and Mr. Armstrong a dose of penny royal, diluted with water and given in drinking water (twenty drops to two tablespoonfuls).

By Mr. Middleton: "What caused eggs I had to dry up? And state if there is any remedy for same."—The secretary thought that the eggs must have been claw-marked or fertile, and owing to weakness on the part of cock or hen had not been able to come to maturity. The remedy, he thought, would be a bit difficult to find.

By Mr. Hall: "In pairing an over-year cock bird to an older hen, which would have the most effect on the young as to type?"—There was a good deal of discussion on this point. Mr. Middleton thought that it would make no difference whether the cock or hen was the older, providing it was not too old and was in good health.

By Mr. Waddle: "What type of Border is the best to go for?"—Mr. Graham (Newbiggen) said it entirely depended upon the judge; some judges preferred the slim bird, and others favoured the stouter variety. Personally he kept one or two pairs of each and studied the type which different judges favoured, and entered accordingly.

By Mr. Tomlinson: "What constitutes a foul-marked bird?"—The secretary said that this was a bird so heavily marked that it was quite distinct from the evenly and unevenly-marked birds.

By Mr. Graham (Hirst): "What is the best green food to feed young on?"—Mr. Lackey said that he had used dandelion, and had had a good year; the next by using the same green food he had very had results; and he now used lettuce in preference to dandelion. Mr. Armstrong thought that the dandelion was all right if you used the fresh, tender leaves only.

By Mr. Barron: "How to get size in Norwich without losing colour and quality of feather?"—The secretary said it was a bit of a poser, and just what we would all like to find out. Mr. Lackey favoured pairing a good large cock to a typical hen of good feather; if the cock was a bit rough the young should be all right providing your hen was of good quality.

By Mr. Miles: "What constitutes an evenly-marked Canary?"—Mr. Graham (Newbiggen) said that an evenly-marked bird must be four-pointed both wings and both eyes, or six-pointed both wings, both eyes, and both sides of tail. The more precise the markings the better. The marks on eyes should be like the rims of spectacles, and all the markings should be clearly outlined.

By Mr. G. Hall: "Which bird—cock or hen—has the most effect on the colour of the young?"—Mr. Armstrong said that undoubtedly the most colour came from the cock.

The time getting now short, we had to disperse, it being one of the most interesting meetings we have had this season. It was hoped we would have others on the same lines. The members heartily congratulated Mr. Lackey on his success at Hybrid-breeding. He has a nice large Goldfinch-Greenfinch, now three weeks old, and doing well. I may add that he has a splendid outdoor aviary for Hybrid-breeding, and should be able to do better another year.—JAS. MILES, Sec.

The Nuthatch as a Cage Pet.

By E. R. BARTLETT (London, N.W.).

The Nuthatch is a small bird about the size of a Common Sparrow. It has a steel-blue back, reddish-yellow breast, and long sharp bill; the feet are large, with strong claws; and a black line runs across the eyes to the base of the bill, which gives the bird a somewhat snaky appearance. It is allied to the family of Creepers.

Although fairly common in most wooded districts, it is more often heard than seen. The tapping one hears in woods originates more frequently from the Nuthatch than from the Woodpecker; but it is usually attributed to the latter. Except during the breeding season the Nuthatch seldom seeks the company of its kind.

Very Active and Busy.

The Nuthatch is a very active, busy little bird, continually climbing about the trunks and larger branches of trees, incessantly tapping the bark as it diligently searches for grub and other insects. It is a matter of little moment to a Nuthatch what position it occupies while so engaged. It invariably commences its hunt at the top of a tree, working head downwards, and following the course all round the trunk until it reaches the roots, and travelling at times along the underside of a branch like a fly; in fact, a Nuthatch will as often roost with its head downwards as in any other position.

A hollow in a tree is usually selected as a nesting site, and if the entrance-hole is too large it is carefully plastered with mud and clay, so that an aperture is left sufficiently large to admit the slim body of the little architect. By this means a double purpose is achieved: the nestlings are less likely to fall from the nest, and intruders of a dangerous character are prevented from effecting an entrance.

Nuts form a large part of the menu of a Nuthatch, and although a small bird, a hard nut is soon opened, great ingenuity being displayed in the process. The nut is carried in the bill to the nearest tree and wedged in a convenient crevice; then, firmly grasping the bark in its powerful claws, the bird gives the nut several sharp blows, with wonderful accuracy, each blow accompanied by a curious little flutter of the wings, giving one an idea of intense enjoyment and excitement.

Easily Kept in Captivity.

Nuthatches may be easily kept in captivity, and it is difficult to suggest a pet that will give greater pleasure and amusement. The birds become very tame and will readily take food from the hand. For some years I have never been without a specimen, and at the time of writing a pair are before me busily engaged in searching for insects in the crevices of the cages in which they are confined.

If the following simple instructions are carried out, no one should have difficulty in keeping these charming birds in good health.

Procure a box about three feet in length, two feet six inches in height, and eighteen inches in breadth; well cover the sides, top and back with virgin cork, and affix the usual perches. For the front half-inch wire netting cannot be improved upon. A zinc tray, made to slide out from the front, for cleaning purposes, and a small door at either end should be provided. And if a cokernut husk, or a small box with an entrance hole sufficiently large to admit of an easy entrance is also provided, the house will be all the heart of a Nuthatch will desire.

The Staple Food.

The staple food should be composed of equal parts of pea-meal, dried flies, and ants' eggs (given in a slightly moistened condition)—the two latter can easily be obtained of any bird dealer—sunflower seeds, any kind of nuts, a piece of suet occasionally, and any kind of live insects one can find. Ordinary house cockroaches are especially appreciated.

As a special treat for my Nuthatches I often set out on an insect hunt, armed with a sheet of newspaper and an empty tin. I place the paper on the ground under a tree, and give the tree a few smart knocks with a stick. The paper is then soon covered with insects, spiders, flies, and grubs. There is also there a quantity of dead leaves and other rubbish. The catch is then turned into the tin, rubbish and insects and all, and the whole transferred to the Nuthatches' cage to be sorted over to their heart's content. Then, what a tapping goes on! Every victim secured is carried up to the bark and wedged in a crevice, receives a few smart taps and is eaten. The contents of the tin are reduced to a handful of rubbish in a very short time, and the birds are showing their contentment by indulging in the low, sweet notes which one hears so frequently in the woods.

Mealworms Appreciated.

In the winter it is, of course, difficult to procure live food such as is described above, but meal-worms can always be obtained, and three or four per day will be found quite sufficient to keep each bird in health. It has always been my custom to induce my birds to take meal-worms from the hand. Never visit your birds empty-handed. To a bird lover it is a very real pleasure to have gained the confidence of his pets, and the fact of a meal-worm taken from the fingers, proves that the instinctive distrust most wild birds have for man has been overcome, and your visits to the cage are welcomed by many signs of pleasure.

The birds are very fond of bathing, and go eagerly to the bath immediately fresh water is given. They are also very particular as to their personal appearance, and spend a long time in preening their feathers after their dip.

Nuthatches are very hardy birds, and if caged when young take very readily to their altered condition of life; and with ordinary care and attention, and, above all, cleanliness, they will thrive and live for years, especially if as much natural food as possible in the way of insects is given during the moult, which usually takes place in July—a time when live food can be most easily procured.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD C.B.S.

At the special request of several members, we opened the winter session with a semi-social meeting. The attendance was fairly good, some 40 members being present. Three new members were nominated for election—Messrs. G. W. Garner, T. W. Lawson, and W. Kiesel, of White Canary fame. Several specials for the autumn show were promised, and several ticket moneys from the young stock show were paid, thus enabling the show account to disclose a balance. Several members have not yet returned money for their Y.S.S. tickets, and also a great many subscriptions are still outstanding; will these members kindly remit as early as possible? The social part of the evening was a great success. Miss Rowles sang some very fine songs, and was loudly encored; Mr. Shakespeare was a great favourite with a recitation; as also were Messrs. Johnson and Dewberry in two very good songs; Miss Knight also rendered two very nice pieces on the piano.—C. W. LAW, Sec.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.

On the bookshelf. They are far too useful.

Such Standard works of unsurpassed beauty and usefulness as "OUR CANARIES" and "CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS" have never before been issued to the bird loving public.

A SUPERB STANDARD WORK.

"CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS"

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House) and is being published in 8 monthly parts, at 6d. each. Magnificently Illustrated by that great bird artist, Mr. H. Norman.

PART 5.

A superb number is now on sale; ask for it at your Newsagents, price 6d. The two coloured plates are marvels of beauty and accuracy.

Plate 1.—Redpoll-Bullfinch and Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids.
Plate 2.—Twite-Canary and Redpoll-Canary Mules.

This is a standard work, written by an acknowledged expert, and prepared for publication by experts. It has been designed as an authoritative and carefully practical work, embodying in the simplest and most straightforward language all that there is to be known on the peculiarly difficult and scientific subject of Hybrid Breeding.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID—not a pretty group suitable for a child's picture-book, but a plate that shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present-day type and general characteristics of modern hybrids.

A PRACTICAL BOOK FOR PRACTICAL FANCIERS.

It will, we feel sure, be generally conceded that "Cage Birds" has produced in "CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS" a dignified book on a difficult subject—a standard work of the highest merit and a fitting monument of the hybrid breeder's art.

Ask for Part 5 "CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS," at all Bookstalls or Newsagents, or fill up and send us the attached Order Form and we will send you the part packed flat in cardboard, post free for 7d. (Postal Order).

Parts 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 can now be supplied for 2/9 post paid; or for 4/6 prepaid, we will take orders to supply the complete work—in parts as published. Send your order at once, direct to us, with remittance.

"OUR CANARIES"

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first sixteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over sixteen. MINIMUM, 16 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Sixteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

IT'S A PUZZLE

for anyone to select from among so many advertisements the most likely place from which to get the best value for money. Not only do I guarantee my goods to be correctly and accurately described, I send all on approval, at my risk, cash or CAGE BIRDS' deposit system, and if purchaser is not in every way satisfied, the goods have only to be returned and back comes the whole of his money; further than this, I publicly ask anyone to have anything they like on approval from me, test it side by side with any similar article from elsewhere, and if mine is not by far the best, smash it up, and I will refund every penny of their money. Clap nets, made from genuine ¾ in. mesh, 15 yards long, 12/-, 18 yards 5½ ft. deep, 4 ft. fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards, 5/-, 5 yards 6/-, 6 yards 7/-, 7 yards 8/-, 8 yards 9/-, 9 yards 10/-, 10 yards 11/- per pair, all guaranteed 5½ ft. deep, and fly 4 ft., fitted with stave poles, pegs, and lines complete, ready for immediate use; Lark nets, 1½ in. mesh, 15 yards long, 12/-, 18 yards 15/-, 20 yards 17/-, 25 yards 21/-, all properly geared ready for use; bat-folding Sparrow nets, properly pocketed, fitted on 15 ft. bamboo poles, 5/6, ditto on 17 ft. poles, 6/-, ditto 19 ft. poles 6/6; loose netting, ¾ in. mesh, as used in above clap nets, 7 ft. deep 3d. yard, 9 ft. 4d. yard, 12 ft. deep 5d. yard, post free; Lark netting, 1½ in. mesh, 10 ft. deep 4d. yard, post free; self-acting spring net traps, 24 ins. long, 1/- each; ditto 18 ins. long 9d. each; these net traps are by far the largest and most effective on the market, they are totally different to all others, and can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time and can be used with call bird inside, if desired. The only net trap used by Mr. Jeffries, the well-known Nightingale expert; single trap cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; double ditto, 1/- each, 8/6 dozen; treble ditto, 1/3 each, 12/- dozen; all have separate compartment for call bird; patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, without any attention whatever, 1/6 each; original Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest made, stands all weathers, and guaranteed hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, ¼ lb. 6d., ½ lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample 3d., all carriage paid; pull lines specially spun from real Italian hemp, without snarl or back twist, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free; brace swivels, 3 3d., 12 6d., post free; round or square topped call cages, all wire tops and wood bottoms, 4d. each, 3/- dozen; everything required by catchers kept in stock; send stamp for list, and hints on net making; kindly note the netting used in all my nets is knitted from 60s 3-ply thread, very fine, but strong, specially for bird netting, and must not be confused with the thick American cotton netting so often sold as bird netting. All men employed by me are not only practical net makers, but experienced bird catchers as well, and so know exactly what is required for successful catching, and no nets sent out before being thoroughly tested. All the leading professional catchers throughout the world purchase their appliances from me, so if I can please them, surely I can please you. Mr. C. Cubley, the well-known Lincolnshire catcher, says "Your netting is as superior to other makers' netting as refined gold to copper." Thousands of testimonials have been received by me, and many of them published in CAGE BIRDS, testifying to the superior quality of my goods. All nets guaranteed to wear for 20 years. (See British Bird column for further advertisement).

EVERY BIRD SOLD

by me is sent on approval, at my risk, on receipt of cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, on the distinct understanding that unless birds prove perfectly satisfactory, you only have to return them, and back comes the whole of your money. No quibbling, or unmentioned conditions about my system, whether a man spends a penny or a pound, he gets the same straightforward treatment. I was the first, and for many years, the only advertiser to send all wild birds on approval throughout the year, and as my birds are exactly as described, am never afraid of dealing on CAGE BIRDS deposit system. I have splendid lot of genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches in perfect health and condition, at 1/6 each, 3 4/-, 6 7/-, 12 12/-, or £6 per gross; specially selected larger cocks for moulting for show or muling, and guaranteed now in song, 2/- each, 3 5/-, 6 9/-, 12 17/-; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, 3 2/-, 12 7/-; young Bullfinches, 1/-, 1/6, and 2/- each; adult cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; adult hens, 1/- each; grand lot cock brown Linnets, every bird guaranteed red-breasted, 8d. each, 3 1/6, 6 2/6, 12 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for show, muling, or contest singing, 1/- each, 3 2/6, 6 4/-, 12 7/-; hen Linnets, 1/6 dozen, 3 dozen 3/-; cock Chaffinches, 8d. each, 3 1/6, 12 5/-; specially selected large cocks for exhibition, 1/- each; hen Chaffinches, 3 1/-, 6 1/6, 12 2/6; cock Greenfinches, 3 1/- 6 1/6; hen Greenfinches, 6 1/-; nestling cock Skylarks, 1/- each, 3 2/-, 6 3/6; few very steady, and in nice song, 1/6, 2/- and 2/6 each; guaranteed genuine hand-reared cock Skylarks, finger-tame, and in free song, 3/-, 4/- and 5/- each; two-year-old hand reared cock Song Thrush, over moult, and in song, 5/-; Redpolls, 6d. each, 3 1/3, 6 2/-, 12 3/6; young Canaries, in perfect health and condition, 2/6 couple, 12/- dozen; Linnet, Goldfinch, and Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; Lark cages, 6d. and 8d. each, 4/- and 5/6 dozen; round or square topped call cages, with all wire tops and wood bottoms, 4d. each, 3/- dozen; dealers supplied with every description of cages; send stamp for wholesale cage list. Please note, all birds are guaranteed properly netted in County of Worcester, by expert catchers employed solely by myself, and that all are guaranteed exactly as represented, and thoroughly on hard seed before being sent out. I have no connection with any other advertiser, nor do I buy from advertisers, so purchasers from me do not get birds that have been picked over by every "Tom," "Dick," and "Harry." I claim to be largest dealer in Worcestershire birds in the world, so if you want birds of real merit, send to the fountain head. See Appliance column for further advertisement.

UNDENIABLE BARGAINS

1910 NORWICH COCKS. Singing, and will make champions, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; now, to prove this, I offer to give six months' approval with these birds i.e., to refund money in full or exchange same for a cock on full song. All other birds usual approval terms, as follows: 3/9, 4/3, 4/6, and 5/6 upwards. Hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6 each. Pairs, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, all bearing my stamp as a guarantee of sex, and any bird proving not to be a cock bearing such stamp is exchanged, the lapse of time being no object. Hence, here is a security never offered by anyone else, and a safeguard against the now well-known "hen trick"—i.e., the tempting priced, so-called singing cocks, whether named Norwich, Hartz Rollers, or Yorkshires, it is all the same.

YORKSHIRES.—Cocks, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Pairs, 7/6, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6. Hens, 2/6, 3/6, 4/6. Travelling Cages, 3d. extra.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1910 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

I have had a good breeding season, having bred 68 youngsters (Yorkshire and Norwich) from 18 hens, of which six have not bred me a single bird. At the time of writing my stock is 99 in all. I have lost one by removing, and I had just the 100 up to then. I wish your paper, CAGE BIRDS, every success; I take it regularly, and could not do without it.—ARCHIE SUTCLIFFE (Halifax).

Singing Contests.

CASTLEFORD.

The Castleford and Dist. Linnet Club will be having a special general meeting at headquarters on Sunday, September 11th, at 6 o'clock. Members are requested to attend.—WALTER DOWSON, Sec.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet F.A., usual quality singing contest, held at King's Head, Shannon-street, on August 21, when 16 birds sang for three good prizes. 1, 2, Hardcastle; 3, Sissons. Judges, Messrs. J. Melia and W. Naylor. Also on August 28, when 14 birds sang. 1, Hardcastle; 2, 3, Sissons. Judges, Messrs. W. Naylor and Wilson Naylor. Our Canary club has commenced. WM. SISSONS, Hon. Sec.

Usual quality singing contest, held at King's Head, Shannon Street, on September 4th, when 15 birds sang for three good prizes. 1, Hardcastle; 2, Richardson; 3, shared by Blund and Hardcastle. Judges, Messrs. W. Naylor and Wilson Naylor.—WM. SISSONS, Hon. Sec.

FALKIRK (Good Intent) C.B.A.

Monthly meeting held in the Oddfellows' Hall, August 27th, Mr. Hunter presiding. The business of the evening was enrolling new members and appointing a third judge for annual show. The treasurer submitted a very gratifying financial report of first feather show.—W. CLUBB, Sec.

STIRLING AND DISTRICT O.S.

Monthly meeting, held in the Douglas Hotel, W. Summers presiding. Minutes of previous meeting read and adopted, with the addendum that we grant two extra classes for young birds in the Crest section. A motion by Mr. Bishop, and seconded by Mr. Duff, that all classes be paid equal prize money this year was agreed to. Four new members were proposed and elected. Our books are still open for enrolment of members, and any wishing to join please communicate with me.—WM. BISHOP, Sec.

LEADGATE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held in Church-square Hall, September 3rd, Mr. E. Westhorpe in chair. Very few members turned up to discuss our first table show business. Show was decided to be held on October 1st, and each month during show season if a success. Several birds were nominated for the three classes, and after the names were put into the hat the following birds came out on top: First, Norwich yellow, clear, ticked, or variegated; second, Yorkshire yellow, clear, ticked, or variegated; and third, British bird any variety. Nomination of judge by ballot: Mr. Matt. Mason, of Dipton, was declared judge. All birds are to be staged by 6 o'clock. The hall will be open to the public at 6.30 and closed at 8. After this the usual monthly meeting will be held to decide classes and judge for next table show. A collection box will be placed at door to defray expenses of hall. A judging competition will be held during show, and a charge of one penny per class will be made, winner to receive the lot in each class, and must be nearest judge's awards.—J. A. TURNBULL, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held Sept. 1st. Mr. Currah presided. Secretary announced that we had received the patronage of the National Brit. Bird and Mule Club, the Northern Yorkshire C.C., and the Northern Counties Norwich and Cinnamon Club. The chairman gave a hearty welcome to the strangers present. Mr. T. C. Usher, Senr., was elected a member. It was decided to add another hen class for Scotch Fancies, which Mr. Chapman guarantees. The classes were fixed for judges, and it was decided to get a few catalogues without awards, so as to be available on Friday, for those who want them. It was decided to keep to the usual tickets for the classes, as the other method suggested would entail too much work for the steward upon the show day. The secretary presented his financial statement of the nest feather show. This showed a balance of 6/4 in hand. Decided, to hold a special meeting on September 15th to receive the final promises of specials for show. A committee meeting will be held on September 22nd to allot them. Will any member who has the promise of a special kindly let me or any of the committee know. It is imperative we should keep up our good name in this respect, especially as we have a larger classification.—T. C. CRAWHALL, Secretary.

BANKFOOT & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held August 30th, Mr. E. W. Johnson (president) in the chair. The distribution of schedules for our joint members' show with Wibsey, on December 3rd (which, by the way, is being looked forward to with no small amount of interest) was made. The "weeding out" process has been given to, and accepted by, Mr. W. Stables, and I am sure that "Will" may be relied on to fix them. Eighteen classes have been provided. After the show a dinner will be provided, and the whole of the proceeds are to be given as specials. The combined membership of the two societies is well over 100, so that there should be a real harvest of specials. The arrangement of our winter syllabus was gone into. By the way, it contains only one lecture—by Mr. H. J. Chittenden—the other dates being filled up with various competitions for the members. In connection with our members' show on November 12th (at which Mr. F. Allen, of Cleckheaton, will officiate as judge) a concert will take place after the show. Tickets, 6d. each, will admit to both show and concert. This is entirely a new departure in connection with members' shows, and should serve to awaken public interest in our hobby. Each ticket bearer will be given a chance (absolutely free) of securing a Canary and a cage, value 12s. 6d., to be given at the concert. In regard to our members' shows, several really good specials were given by the members, and include special for best cock and best hen at each of the three remaining shows, specials for best the bird (2s. 6d.), best hen (2s. 6d.), best cock (2s.), at our last show of the year.—F. GELDER, Sec.

The Liskeard, Devon, and Cornwall F.A. show will be held on September 28, writes Mr. H. Jones Robins, joint sec., when there will be 17 classes for cage birds, Mr. G. H. Billett, judge.

All communications in connection with the Mid Rhondda C.B.S., writes Mr. A. H. C. Legg, the chairman, should be sent to me direct to 7, Primrose Terrace, Llwyncelyn, Porth, Glamorganshire.

Our show on October 6 and 7 is open to all, and is not held under any Union rules, writes Mr. R. Roll, sec. of the Norwich Alliance C.B.A. Schedules will be posted to all last year's exhibitors.

The Glasgow and Dist. (Confined) Derby O.A. exhibition of young Scotch Fancy Canaries is being held this Saturday (September 10), in the Grand National Halls, Main Street, Gorbals, Glasgow. It is hoped there will be a fine show of birds and a good attendance.

Kindly inform secretaries of societies and others that I have removed from Warley Street, Halifax, to 46, Eldon Place, Hopwood Lane, Halifax, Yorks, writes Mr. Archie Sutcliffe. I am a member of the Halifax O.S.

We are informed by Mr. P. Adamthwaite, the sec. of the London Federation of Cage Bird Societies, that the Federation books of certificates of insurance may now be had of him, his address being 83, Hartland Road, West Kilburn, London, N.W.

I am resigning my position as hon. sec. of the Sunderland C.B.A., and Mr. J. Rischorough his as treasurer, writes Mr. W. Reid (Sunderland), the reason in both cases being simply overstress of other work, this precluding us from attending to our duties as we would like to do. The names of our successors will appear in the columns of CAGE BIRDS in due course.

I made a mistake re the date of Mr. Cowgill's lecture, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall, hon. sec. of the Northern Yorkshire C.C.; it should be Monday September 19th (not 18th). The meeting is free and open to all, and we shall be very pleased to see a large number of visitors.

We note from the report of the Sheffield C.B.S., sent us by Mr. J. Woolhouse, that, after deciding to remain affiliated to the Cage Bird Union, it was resolved that all discussion on the C.B.U. be ruled out of order for the rest of the year, as it was getting quite sickening, and it was thought members were staying away in consequence.

The attention of fanciers, especially in and around the Cowdenbeath district (Fifeshire), is drawn to the fact that the Cowdenbeath Society's show of cage birds will be held on December 3 next. The judges are Messrs. R. Lambie (Whitburn) and Hugh Moreland (Falkirk). It is hoped there will be a liberal response in the matter of entries. Schedules may be had in due course from the sec., Mr. Wm. Falconer, 43, Arthur Street, Cowdenbeath.

The Lancaster Primrose C.B.A. open show to be held on September 23 and 24, writes Mr. J. H. Nayler, the secretary, will have the patronage of the English and Welsh Border Fancy Club, which has come to hand too late to be printed in schedules. Points gained at this show will count for the club's specials. Fanciers please note that the association is honoured by both the Border Fancy Clubs' patronage, and I hope they will give us a record entry.

"The Avicultural Magazine" for September contains a coloured plate (from the brush of Mr. H. Goodchild, the well-known foreign bird artist) of the "Cock of the Rock," the painting being from the examples in the Zoological Gardens. Mr. W. Frost contributes some interesting notes on the species. Mr. Reginald Phillipps continues his narration of his experiences in the breeding of the Pied Rock-Thrush, Mr. R. B. Woosnam tells how he caught, kept, and fed an Erlanger's Scops Owl, and there are other articles and notes to complete a capital issue.

I have resigned the secretaryship of the Blackburn and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. J. W. Marsden. Mr. Jeffrey Walsh, of Pheasant Aviaries, has accepted the post. We have elected that enthusiastic fancier, Mr. J. M. Walsh, of Dukes Brow, as chairman; and under his presidency I am sure our society will flourish, which is very much needed in our district at present. We are having a special general meeting at headquarters on September 12, at 8 o'clock, to which I invite all fanciers and old members; hope we shall have a really good attendance.

We are having a lecture at the Angel Inn, Colne, writes Mr. A. Wilkinson, hon. sec., of the Colne and Dist. C.B.S., on September 18, at 7 p.m., on "Canary Management Generally," by Mr Solomon Wilkinson, of Barrowford, who, having given up keeping birds himself, has kindly consented to disclose his secrets, obtained by experience and personal expense. All fanciers and friends are cordially invited to hear the secrets he has, it is said, refused for years to divulge to the public. No doubt it will prove a most unique and interesting lecture.

The Newcastle C.B.S. show will be held under the patronage of the following specialist clubs, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall, the hon. sec: The Open Norwich P. Club, the Northern Counties Norwich and Cinnamon Club, the Yorkshire C.C., the Northern Y.C.C., the National Green Marked Y.C.C., the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C., the Border Fancy C.C., the Northern Lizard C.C., the National British Bird and M.C., the Northern British Bird M. and F.B.C. We expect to have the finest show of Yorkshires ever held outside of Yorkshire. There are eighteen classes. I am hoping to announce cheap excursions.

The London and Provincial Ornithological Society is having a lecture on "Seeds" by Mr. T. R. Trower, on Thursday evening, September 15, at 8 p.m., at their new headquarters, "Leysian Hall," City Road, opposite the Old Street Station, on the G.N. and C. and S.L. tube railways, writes Mr. C. W. Law, the hon. sec. It is to be hoped that all members will make an effort to be present, and if possible bring a friend to this our first meeting at our new premises. Let September 15 be a red letter day in the history of the L. and P.O.S. Fanciers generally are invited, and may reckon on receiving a hearty welcome. The lady members of the society are especially asked to be present. The year 1911 will be full of interest to members and intending members, as all our meetings will have some particular and special feature which is sure to attract the attention of fanciers generally.

The following gentlemen have joined the Norwich Plainhead Club, writes Mr. Jno. Hopkins, the hon. sec.:—Messrs. J. Pyke, J. Nickson, R. Winders, E. Espley, R. Moss, H. Parkinson, N. Pyke, F. Aspinall, A. Heyworth, R. Holdsworth, A. Trengove, F. Cunliff, T. Parker, J. Barton, J. Cook, J. L. Collis, R. Whittaker, R. Allen, T. Bell, J. C. Bennison, H. T. Kelsall, and A. H. Fildes. The committee have passed the following resolution which will, I think, be highly satisfactory to amateur members in particular: "Amateur members can mark entries made by them in the amateur section at cup shows for any of the champion specials, and in the event of their winning three first prizes before the cup shows are over they are at liberty (if they desire) to show in the champion section at the remaining cup shows, and to count the points gained by them in the amateur section for the champion specials. They cannot, however, win any champion specials unless they shall have shown in champion classes at some of the cup shows."

The Shows.

EAGLESFIELD (Ecclefechan, Dumfries).

The annual cage bird show, under the auspices of the Eaglesfield Horticultural Society, was held at Eaglesfield, in grounds close to the station. The cage birds were better catered for than on former occasions, and they had a tent solely to themselves, which is as it should be, because many a good bird has failed to show itself to advantage, being nervous on account of the crowing of the fowls. The weather was at its best. Borders led the way, and were exceptionally strong in numbers, and excellent in quality. That well-known Border fancier, Mr. Bob Watt, had quite a field day, winning, amongst other honours, the Border Fancy Club's medal for best bird. Cinnamon and Green Borders were quite a nice lot, and Mr. J. J. Robinson had it all his own way here. Mr. Croshie secured the plums in the Mule classes with a good team. British birds were a nice lot, though not perhaps up to the standard usually seen at this popular fixture. Mr. W. Davidson judged the Borders, with much acceptance, and no grumbling was heard; Mr. Hannay (Dumfries) placed the cards in the Norwich, Mule, and wild bird sections, and he, too, appeared to give general satisfaction. The "gate" constituted a record for this fixture, over £200 being drawn. And everything went as merrily as wedding bells.

WEST TARRING.

Annual show held Aug. 31 and Sep. 1 in connection with the local exhibition. The cage birds were staged in a marquee. The weather was all that could be desired. There was a good "gate" on both days. There were not many entries in the cage bird section, owing to the late season. Mr. H. Hopper was first, and got in with a grand Yorkie. In the Norwich class, Mr. Rumsey took first with a Varieg. Buff. The British birds were good, Mr. Corps taking first, 3 and sp with a Linnet, also sp for best in show. Mr. E. Henson is the chairman, and the show sec. is Mr. A. G. Standing, who carried out his duties well. Mr. M. Penfold judged, and appeared to give every satisfaction.

YORKS. (4): 1, sp, 3, Hopper, 1 Cl. Yell., grand length, nice col., good feather and wing, 3 nice tkd. Buff, good feather, splendid back; 2, Plummer, another Yell; vhc, Rumsey; hc, Mills. (4): 1, 3, sp, Corps, first neat and nicely pencilled Linnet, good back col. in splendid condition for time year; 2, Stubbs, second grand Bully in excellent condition, lovely cap, beautiful breast col., steady as a rock, pressed leader hard; 3, vhc, Hopper, 3, Goldfinch, good size, bead and blaze, very steady.

RUTHIN.

Show held in connection with the Horticultural and Sheep Dog Trials, in the beautiful grounds of the Ruthin Castle, on Sept. 1. The day turned out glorious, and a large crowd assembled. As usual, the show was well represented locally. The secretarial reins were held by Mr. T. Roberts, which fact goes a long way towards the success of the exhibition. No doubt the show would make rapid strides if a few more classes were provided for Canaries. It is to be hoped the committee will see their way clear to increase the classification another year. Yorkshires were well represented, and a few good birds were shown, especially youngsters. Mr. Powell (Corwen) judged.

CAN. (11): 1, O. H. Roberts, Cl. Yell. York. of nice quality; 2, W. Davies, lovely bird, of grand type, if a wee shade longer would have won, in the pink of condition; 3, vhc, J. O. Williams, grand youngster, splendid wing carriage, feather like wax; hc, James Williams; hc, c, W. Davies. (In another report which reaches us, apparently from the judge, the awards in this class are given as: 1, 3, J. O. Williams; 2, vhc, hc, c, Jas. Williams.—Editor.) MULE (3): 1, William Davis, nice Goldie Mule, Denbigh winner, very fit; 2, James Williams, another nice Mule; 3, Trevor Williams. BRIT.: 1, James Wiliams, very nice Greenfinch; 2, vhc, Hughes, good Chaffinch; 3, Davies, grand Linnet. FIRST FEATHER BIRD (5): 1, 3, J. O. Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a seporate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Hard Substance in Crop.

F. W. Ashford.—I cannot advise anything in such a case without seeing the bird or knowing very definitely the nature of the substance. How do you know the substance is in the crop, and not in the skin or surrounding tissues? If it is in the crop there may be, and probably is, some obstruction to the free passage of food from crop to stomach, to use a popular term, and its nature must be known or suspected before it is possible to suggest useful treatment. If the substance is still there, I advise you to aim at emptying the crop of its contents by withholding food and water for a few hours. Then give a little luke-warm water made slightly sweet with glycerine, and let the bird drink as freely as it likes. Catch at once, and gently work the hard substance between the tips of the thumb and fingers in order to mix the fluid with it. Repeat several times a day, keeping the water away except when you want the bird to take in a good supply previous to manipulating the crop, and give only a very little bread and milk sop in the way of food, for, say, a couple of days, when the crop should have emptied itself; or if the mass becomes soft and pappy, you may remove the greater part by gently working it upwards and out through the beak. To open up the crop and empty it by an operation is doubtless beyond your skill.

Questions of Colour.

Brownlow.—(1) How to mix colour food? is rather a vague question. I am not clear whether you mean solely the colouring agent, or the colour and egg food combined, but judging from another question, I suspect you mean the latter. This reply, however, concerns only the actual colour agent. Get 14 ozs. of best tasteless red pepper, 2 ozs. best Natal, and 4 ozs. soft sugar. Get these in a large basin, and thoroughly mix and blend together with the back of a spoon until perfectly incorporated. You may, if you like, omit the Natal and use only the tasteless red, sugar, and a large heaped teaspoonful of carbonate of iron. Put this, when mixed, in an air-tight jar, and keep ready for use. (2) When you start colour feeding, mix your egg food as usual, which you will have to give daily. To each hard-boiled egg well minced and twice its bulk of bread crumb or biscuit, add one teaspoonful of the above colour to begin, and mix the whole thoroughly. Then give each bird a small teaspoonful of this mixture. After the moult begins, gradually increase the quantity of colour, added to the egg and biscuit mixture, until you have doubled it, and towards the end of the moult, again decrease it to the original proportions to finish off with. (3) Yes, as seen from Nos. 1 and 2, you may, and, indeed should, mix your colour with egg food as required. It is not advisable to keep egg food lying by to become stale. (4) I suspect this bird is moulting in a proper way, but slowly. Keep it rather on the warm side, free from all draughts, extreme fluctuations, and chills, and let it bathe freely in fine weather. Otherwise, treat it the same as the birds you are colour feeding, and in any case add a slight dusting of Natal pepper to its "feed," twice or thrice a week.

A Peculiar Case.

Dulaisite.—Another case I cannot properly understand on the evidence given. Why the birds should show such extreme distress is not easily explained, except by supposing you do not perhaps exercise the care and gentleness in doing the necessary work that is essential, especially with delicate or highly strung nervous individuals. But this temporary excitement should not cause distress so long after. The fact that not a single hen has been in breeding condition this year, too, makes it appear obvious there is something radically wrong with your management. It is impossible to go into all details here, and you would be best advised to get either "House's Canary Manual," 1/2, or "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. from our Manager, and digest well the chapters on general management. Meanwhile, keep the cages and perches as clean as possible; strew floor with clean, gritty sand; see that red mites are kept at bay; do everything about the cages in the most methodical and quiet manner possible; see that they have plenty of fresh, pure air, but are quite free from draughts and extremes of heat and cold, and also have fresh pure water always at hand. Feed on plain canary as staple; give half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days twice each week a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with 4 drops of sherry and 2 of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it per bird, and on two other days a small pinch each of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, black rape, teazle, and millet. Give a spray of green food daily. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, and 10 each of glycerine and syrup of buckthorn, every second day for a week, and afterwards omit the buckthorn, and add 6 drops of oxymel of squills, and 2 of eucalyptus oil, and shake well together. Give this every second day for a fortnight. Shall be glad to hear result in a month, with a reference to this reply.

Brevities.

Cutting Claws (W.R.).—It is quite safe to cut the claws when they get so long as to incommode the bird's freedom of movement. Hold the bird in the left hand with its back to the palm, head toward wrist, and the second, third, and fourth fingers folded across the breast. Draw out one foot at a time, and hold the leg between thumb and forefinger of left hand. Bathe the foot for a minute or two in warm water to remove all dirt, dry, and hold between tips of thumb and finger with only one toe at a time free. Hold it up before a strong light, and you will see plainly how far the vein runs down the claw. It appears as a thin pink streak. Cut off claw just short of the end of that pink streak. Do not cut too close or the claw will bleed. Follow above instructions, treating each claw separately, and the operation will be no more painful than cutting your finger nails. A pair of nail scissors is the ideal implement.

Swelling on Neck (Amateur Girl).—The growth is probably an abscess, but it would have been more satisfactory if you had enclosed a rough sketch to show its exact position. Still, you may safely try what the following will do for it: Paint the growth lightly twice a week for a fortnight with tincture of iodine. If it forms "a head" bathe it with warm water, prick it with a clean needle, press out contents, and after washing it clean and drying it, paint with Friars Balsam for a day or two. Should it form no head, nor become absorbed, it will doubtless become a hardened nodule which can be very easily removed by one having a little skill in such matters. In addition to the canary seed give half a teaspoonful of summer rape three times a week, and twice a week a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a little green food daily, and add to the drinking water every second day for the next week six drops of dandelion juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. On the alternate days give six drops of aromatic sulphuric acid and four of tincture of gentian.

About Seeds (Ben).—The sample is a very nice one of summer rape, but is a trifle strong in flavour, probably for want of proper storage for a month or two longer; there is no reason why Canaries should reject it. At the same time if you give no other seed as a staple food—and you do not mention any other—you certainly do wrong. For a staple diet you should either mix three times its bulk of good, sound canary seed with this rape, and give it as a mixture, or give plain canary seed alone, as a staple, and half a teaspoonful of rape separately every second day, or a pinch of it each day, whichever plan is most convenient for you. Of course, it is possible to obtain a uniformly good hemp seed, but it is certainly the fact that a very great number of samples are very variable in quality and ripeness, and others uniformly bad. Small local shops, unless having some demand from a number of bird-keepers, are not likely to stock really good samples of hemp, as the wholesale price would prevent them competing with other local shops in selling. Better try another shop. You may not be able to get a sample uniform in size, but you can get one that is uniformly sound and ripe.

Canary Squeaking (Bob., Kilburn).—I cannot quite understand its nature or cause. It is certainly not, according to your description, the result of bronchial or asthmatic attacks, and the only other cause I can attribute it to is tameness—the bird is possibly squeaking his challenge to, or defiance of, someone near, or passing by, or doing something with his cage at the moment. In this case the bird would also be seen to direct its attention to the particular object in question, and would probably droop his wings, and cower across the perch, with open beak directed threateningly towards the object. Is this the case? Does the bird appear to collapse if fluttered a little? If not, please write and describe the bird's actions when it is making this squeaking noise, and also any other apparently unusual symptoms, it may show. Meantime, you might try the effect of giving 20 drops of whisky, 10 of glycerine, and a pinch of Epsom salts in its drinking water for a day or two. The seed sample is very good for occasional use, say, about twice a week, but for regular use I prefer a simple mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape.

Sleepy Juveniles (A.M.C.).—I do not think there is much seriously wrong, although your feeding is not quite correct. The listlessness of the birds is more likely due to the approaching moult. See they are kept quite free from draught, and in a comfortable, though not necessarily over-heated, temperature, and keep cages strewn with clean gritty sand. As a staple diet, give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give about a quarter teaspoonful of maw to each bird, and on the alternate days a morsel of bread sopped in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a pinch of hemp twice a week, and for green food use only seedy sprays of chickweed, and seed stalks of plantain and shepherd's purse. Give this about three times a week. The birds that are only a month old may also have a little dry crushed plain biscuit mixed with the maw seed each time it is given for a week or so. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny piece, for two days, and afterwards substitute 20 drops of whisky and 5 of tincture of gentian for a few days.

Three Together (Apprentice).—(1) It is useless trying to guess the cause of death, seeing I have absolutely no data to go upon save that the bird was noticed drooping its wings, and died soon after. If you had given me fuller particulars of your management, and the symptoms exhibited by the bird, I might have suggested some treatment. You can do no harm by giving a plain diet of canary, with a pinch of summer rape, every second day, and a morsel of bread and milk on the alternate days, and adding 6 drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts to the drinking water for a couple of days, if the other is still under suspicion, and meanwhile send us the particulars asked for, when I will help you as far as I can. Get the "Nutshell" booklet on "Ailments of Cage Birds," post free 2½d., from our manager. (2) Yes, undoubtedly; if you take proper care to procure none but strong, healthy birds bred under normal conditions of temperature, they will live and thrive in a sheltered outdoor aviary all the year round. (3) Sorry I can give no opinion beyond saying that the seed is rather small. The envelope had been treated to a liberal application of stamp ink in course of post which had penetrated the coverings and soiled the seed, so that it was useless as a sample.

We are Seven.

H. Boddy.—(1) We are not allowed to recommend any special advertiser; it is against the rules. Try any of the large seed firms using our columns. (2) A quart would be a good supply of mixed seed to prepare at any one time for use with two Goldfinches. (3) Stock seed mixture for Bullfinch: Canary three parts, teazle two parts, summer rape one part, charlock and linseed half part each. (4) For Siskins the same mixture will answer admirably. (5) For Greenfinches you could also use this mixture, but in addition allow a dessertspoonful of sunflower seed daily, and a little hemp frequently. (6) The value depends upon the particular bird; for instance, I have known £10 to be paid for more than one house-moulted Goldfinch, while 5s., of course, in many cases is sufficient. Five shillings to 7s. 6d. would cover good ordinary specimens of all the above species (house-moulted). (7) A stout-built yellow Norwich Plainhead hen is about the best mate for a Goldfinch to produce rich-coloured Mules—an almost self-green, for preference. A Crestbred hen would do, if not too loosely feathered.

The Case of a Linnet.

Greenhorn.—If the Linnet is moulting, this would serve to put it off its bath for a time. The best plan to induce a bird to bathe is to put it for a time into a goodsized cage along with another bird which is a free bather—a hen Canary is useful for the purpose or, indeed, any suitable small bird. I have myself often utilised a Wagtail with great advantage. Put the dish of water inside the cage the first time or two. Choose a bright sunny day for the experiment. Or hang the Linnet within sight of a free-bathing bird. If these means prove abortive, you will have to spray it. Turning out into a flight cage I have always found effective.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

(2) If a bird has a good and quick moult it will be "looking itself again" in about six weeks from its commencement. Many birds drag on in the moult for a couple of months and over, and then occupy another week or two recuperating. As a rule, the older birds feel it the most. (3) The Linnet-Canary Mule is a lovely song-bird—in my opinion the best of all the tribe of Mules. To obtain rich-coloured, shapely, robust Mules you cannot choose a better mate for the Linnet than a high-coloured yellow Norwich Plainhead hen—a good built hen, with a hold head; if heavily green marked so much the better.

In an Aviary.

Novice, Liverpool.—(1) The aviary is really only a large cage and you would stand a better chance of breeding results if you kept only one couple in it. This, of course, is a matter for you to decide. The arrangements of the place are nicely planned, but seeing that it is to be kept outside, a width of 3ft. (front to back) would have been a decided improvement, giving greater seclusion, a great desideratum where "youngsters" are desired. (2) The birds could be put out at once. I presume that the place is rain and windproof and will be placed in a sheltered position. (3) Goldfinches and Bullfinches will agree together, but there might be some squabbling during the breeding season. (4) The following would form a good stock mixture:—Canary and teazle three parts each, hemp, summer rape, charlock, and sunflower one part each. In winter increase the hemp to two parts; and the sunflower also in the case of the Bullfinches. I recommend you to read the "Nutshell" booklets (post free 2½d. each), dealing with the Goldie and the Bullie. These you will find very helpful. (5) There is a fair prospect of the birds breeding. The hen Bullie is practically certain to go to nest. Note bearing of answer No. 1 on this question.

Brevities.

Call Birds (Trapper).—You seem to take it for granted that I am an "authority" on catching birds, but my experience of actual catching is very limited. I will see if your letter can be published in the correspondence column, when some reader or other will doubtless oblige with the desired information.

Cage for Finches (J. Wade).—The cage I recommend is that known as the "Finch stock cage"; all up-to-date cage makers keep this pattern. Try any advertiser using our columns. An illustration of this kind of cage appears in our "Nutshell" booklets (post free 2½d.) on the Linnet, etc. The size may be anything from 14 to 18in. long, 10 or 11 high, and 8 wide, according to species of Finch to be kept in it. This cage has a very deep front-rail and the seed drawer runs from front to back of cage through a hole cut in this. There are two perches fixed on a level with the top of the front rail.

In the Moult (Avis).—Warmth is a good thing for any bird that is moulting, and the best change you could make would be to put the Goldfinch into the greenhouse while they finish casting their plumage. I assume that being a greenhouse it gets plenty of sun; that it is suitable for birds is evident by your success with the Bullies and the Canaries. It would never do to change to a cold-room; that might stop them altogether. Let them bathe freely. I hardly understand you when you say that they are "young" Goldies and have cast some "wing feathers," for young birds (i.e., of the current season) do not moult either wing or tail feathers, in the ordinary course of things, that is

A Bullfinch's Habit (M. J. N.).—In my opinion nothing you can do will break the bird of the habit you mention. Your feeding is correct enough. You could apply a tiny smear of sulphur ointment to the skin (not the feathers, of course) two or three times; also at the time you mention let him have a supply of seeding grass and a millet spray, to "play with."

Shepherd's Purse Seed (Mr. Kay).—Your question I cannot answer, for I have never had occasion to try to buy shepherd's purse seed. I do not think, in fact, that it is a commercial commodity. I never remember seeing it offered for sale. It is very easy to gather, even for "city men," as you term it. I know that on Hampstead Heath and in the adjacent lanes shepherd's purse simply swarms; as it does on many other of "London's lungs" which I have visited.

A Moulting Matter (Argyle).—Ready for the New Year shows? Rather. If the Linnet starts moulting in a week or so he will be ready for some of the November shows. Don't hang him outside. Take him into the kitchen (or other living room) and place the cage in as dull and dark a corner as it affords—if necessary, partly cover it with a dark cloth. This treatment should soon drop the bird into moult. When from the Finch the feathers freely fall (sounds like poetry, doesn't it?—the poetry of motion), then the covering of the cage can be removed, or the cage be moved to a lighter situation. Keep out of draughts.

A Linnet Mule (G. J. F.).—The usual Linnet mixture is quite a correct food for a Linnet Mule. What you want to do is to well stir half-a-teaspoonful each of unrefined honey and best glycerine into three tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Give fresh at least once daily (twice would be better), and in three or four days you will find the voice trouble at an end. Be sure to keep the bird out of all draughts when moulting.

An Ailing Goldfinch (A. Lodge).—Afraid you have delayed matters too long. A bird which sits with head amongst its feathers is usually a pretty sick bird and difficult to pull round. If the excreta seems greenish in colour, or otherwise unhealthy, give saline medicine for 24 hours (as much sulphate of soda as will cover a shilling dissolved in three tablespoonfuls of water). Follow this with a pinch of citrate of iron and quinine crystals (obtain half-an-ounce from a chemist), fresh daily, for a week or ten days. Give cracked hemp, likewise plenty of thistle seed (easily obtainable now), hardheads, niger and teazle seeds; he will eat these if he has not gone too far.

A Goldfinch's Blaze (W. J. Smith).—The blaze is always light in colour at the conclusion of the moult. The bird gradually comes up in colour as he recovers from its effects. In addition to thistle and dandelion, offer hardheads and a little niger, hemp, and teazle seeds, and greenfood, such as seeding Shepherd's purse and chickweed. A "three by six" Goldfinch is said to be always a bird of good colour and quality (silkiness) of feather; but it is not necessarily a good exhibition bird. To be the latter, a Goldfinch must have (in addition to colour and quality) a large expanse of blaze, as square-cut as possible, and be well marked.

A Starling (Puzzled).—The hen Starling has not the yellow beak during the breeding season, neither is she so rich in colour (being brownish) or metallic sheen as the male, while her "spotting" is more pronounced (larger). Starlings can certainly talk (read the account of Mr. Ferrar's remarkable bird given, with photographs, in our last Birthday number). Certain simple phrases (such as "Come on, Jack") and whistles must be constantly repeated to them. The bareness you speak of will be remedied when the bird moults, which it should do within the next few weeks. The Starling should be given some vegetable ingredients with its food (grated carrot or minced lettuce or watercress, etc.) and ripe fruit regularly. Have you been omitting these things?

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Red-Crested Cardinal.

Fancier.—This bird is also known as the Grey Cardinal, and the plumage may be described as grey on the upper surface, white below, with the crest and throat crimson-red. The sexual distinctions as to plumage are infinitesimal, and song or absence of it must be your main reliance. But if you have a number of adult birds to pick over, choose one in the grey feather at the nape or base of crest and a little mottled with white, and the other in which this portion is all grey, and you may be pretty sure of having a true pair. Yes, they breed in captivity, but the number of young fully reared is but small in comparison with the number hatched out, owing principally to the difficulty of keeping up a sufficient supply of live insects while they are feeding young. The task is easier if you can give them a moderate sized aviary to themselves, keeping them supplied with gentles, live ants' eggs, mealworms, beetles, spiders, and any other creeping things you can capture for them. Also supply soft food, and ripe fruit, as well as their usual seed mixture, with green food ad. lib., and your prospects of rearing young should be very probable.

Breeding Parrots.

Novice. The Grey Parrot has been bred in captivity, and there is no reason why you should not succeed both with Amazon and Grey Parrots if you are able to provide the accommodation. What you require is a well-lighted and weather-proof shed with a flight attached thereto. All interior woodwork must be covered with zinc or iron, or the birds will soon eat their way out to freedom. Its furnishing is very simple—logs or small bowls hung up longitudinally as nesting receptacle and branches (stout and thin) for the birds to climb about and perch on. Supply as a general diet seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuits, nuts, cuttlefish, and water for drinking and bathing must be regularly supplied. Parrots, however, mature slowly, and are several years old before breeding operations are commenced, so you may have to wait a little time for breeding operations to commence, but the birds would be very interesting in such an enclosure. An indoor room, similarly furnished, could be given up to them, but all wood (including floor) and plaster-work must be protected with sheet zinc or iron, or stout netting lined at a sufficient distance from same.

Grey Parrot Query.

Griffiths. I take it, apart from being a bit mopy, the bird is otherwise pretty fit, and is not very thin. If such be the case, there is no need to unduly force it on to a more varied diet. The taste of individuals as to fruit is very variable, though most take apple readily, especially apple core, and also grapes. Put a grape and also a piece of apple (not necessarily at the same time) on the top of the seed tin and leave them there for the day, the same with nuts—try shelled walnuts. Ultimately you will find it will take to them. As regards the seed mixture, get a small quantity of millet, canary, oats, hemp, and sunflower seed, mix together, and mix a portion of this among the Indian corn or maize this is really all you can do as regards the diet; but at no distant time he should take of the other items. Keep the bird warm, and out of reach of draught, yet where it will get light and air. For one day Dinneford's Magnesia diluted with double its bulk of water, should form the drinking water; and repeat this as may be necessary to keep the bowels moving freely, yet the voidings should not be watery loose. When not giving the magnesia, weil colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in the cage. It would be best if further unsatisfactory symptoms should develop to write again at once.

Birds for Aviary.

Elsa. Am in a little difficulty, as I do not know your county. However, I take it you have not much experience with foreign species; therefore, I am naming hardy kinds, and those requiring simple treatment you would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" very helpful (see advert.). Procure one pair each: Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, Green Singing Finches, White Java Sparrows, and Bronze Mannikins. The above would give you a pleasing variety; all are handsome, and would survive the winter out of doors. However, you must not turn birds out of doors now, unless you can purchase from some aviary where they have been outside all the summer; it is now too late for birds—either newly imported or those which have been kept indoors to get sufficiently hardened off before the rough weather would be upon them. Get four cocoanut husks and half a dozen Hartz travelling cages as nesting receptacles; you will not, of course, supply nesting material till spring. You can accommodate 24 birds such as above, but if they were all the same size as the Java Sparrows, only about half the number but for breeding I should not put in more than the five pairs.

Cage for Whydah.

"Long Tail." (1) You do not mention whether a stock or show cage is required. If the former, then a cage 30 by 18 by 24 inches high should be the minimum, and even then a fly round the room occasionally will be an advantage. If it is a show cage you require, then choose one which will enable the bird to move on the perches without fraying its plumage either against top, bottom, or sides. (2) Canary, white and spray millet, green food, a little of any ripe fruit they will eat, also a couple of mealworms per bird daily with any stray spider, small beetle, smooth caterpillar, etc., you can capture for them. (3) Some showy species of Finch, Waxbill, or Tanager, Gouldian, Crimson, Cuba, Painted, Diamond, Parrot or Aurora Finch. Waxbills: Blue-breasted, Golden-breasted, Sydney, or Violet-eared. Weavers: Orange, Grenadier, Madagascar, Black-headed, or Half-masked. Tanager: Superb, Tricolour, Blue, Palm, Maroon, or any showy species obtainable. It must be understood that condition and other things being perfect, showy and rare species are the more likely to catch the judge's eye.

Red-headed Finches and 'Keets.

A. P.—When the Red-heads are feeding young, keep them supplied with a daily portion of some good soft food mixture; also continue the mealworms, and give in addition any others you can capture, such as spiders, beetles, smooth caterpillars, and the like. But if you can obtain live ants' eggs and gentles, you can supply as many of these as they care to take. Also supply the usual seeds, and unlimited green food. I fear that Pennants and Adelaides will not agree together in the same aviary when breeding; in fact, Pennants are notoriously intolerant of the company of other Parrakeets when breeding. The sexing of Pennants is a case of comparing adults; the male is altogether brighter, though the colour areas are much the same, but the female shows less green in the tail; her beak also is noticeably stouter than that of the male, especially when viewed from above. The same applies to the Adelaide as regards the beak, but as regards plumage she is much duller in hue; in fact, in comparison, her colours have quite a sort of "washed-out appearance" to those of the male. However, I must repeat that I do not consider it safe to associate the species in the same aviary during the breeding season. Odd birds will agree together, but experience teaches that pairs will not.

Breeding Parrakeets.

G. V. M.—Mixed aviaries require strict observation during breeding operations, and quarrelsome and interfering individuals should be removed. It must be noted that birds otherwise amiable become almost ferocious during nesting operations. I have kept the Latham's and Moustache Parrakeets associated with the birds you name, but have not bred them. It would be best to procure adult birds, as many species of Parrakeets do not breed till they are several years old. You would find our booklets, "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" and "Parrots and Parrakeets" very helpful (see advt.). Reduce your Budgerigars to six pairs, and you will do better; retain those which were most prolific, but in any case only keep well coloured, well feathered and large birds. If you inform me exactly how you have treated the birds, I could possibly point out cause of failure; but the inclement season has been largely responsible for unfertile eggs and chicks dead in shell.

Napoleon Weaver, etc.

"Lover of Aliens."—(1) The Napoleon is much the same size as an Orange Bishop or Weaver; its plumage is principally shining black and yellow, a distinguishing feature being the black streak extending through the centre of abdomen almost to the vent. In winter plumage it is merely a stiated dark and light brown bird. (2) The best method of checking draught in such a position is to cover the whole of the front of aviary facing the window with a sheet of clear glass, outside the wire netting, of course; the glass can be in more than one piece, and should slide in deepish groves, for convenience in cleaning. Your suggestion as to a retiring place is excellent, but it must be in addition to the glass—all birds ought to have such a shelter, whether in cage or aviary. (3) Yes, though occasionally a quarrelsome specimen turns up, but an odd bird I should consider quite safe. (4) Very delicate when first imported; keep warm and strictly out of draught, yet where it will get light and air. (5) Very many are infected on arrival, and your isolation cage is in too close proximity to your other birds. The isolation cage, also, ought to be rather frequently scalded out and exposed to sun and air when not in use, or it may spread infection. New purchases of Cordons, Firefinches, and Lavendar require warmth and careful treatment for the first few weeks. (6) I cannot advise a Whydah in such small quarters; he would badly scare the others when on the wings, even if he did not interfere with them. The Parsdise Whydah is usually amicable, though. (7) The Editor would be very pleased to receive the photo and notes for use as opportunity offered.

Brevities.

Grey Parrut and Budgerigars (H.B.C.). Glad to note the Parrot is on the mend, and I consider you are taking the right course. I regret to hear you have lost the hen Budgerigar; it is always well in such cases to send the body for a post-mortem examination, as it is often of the first importance to know what a bird died of, for the sake of the other occupants of cage or aviary. However, from details given, I incline to the opinion that the trouble was egg binding.

Parrot Lame (H. Jackson).—I am glad to note you now definitely know the cause of the trouble. It will also be quite right to let matters take their course. The bird will be quite comfortable and active again when the union is complete. It is much the same with individuals—she was suffering too much to talk, only wanted to be in easiest position. With returning comfort she will resume her normal manner, and talk again as usual. It will be far the best plan to carry out the treatment advised by the individual who has examined the bird.

Cages for Budgerigars ("New Subscriber").—(1) You can try two pairs if you choose. Budgerigars like company, but I consider one pair would be the better. If you keep two pairs you will have to clear out the young as soon as they can fend for themselves. (2) One pair only. (3) If you can get young unrelated pairs, I should procure now, and should consider these best; but your breeding pairs must be unrelated, and, if possible, each pair procured from a different source, then from their progeny you should be able to choose unrelated pairs either for stock purposes or sale. Our booklet, "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," should prove very useful to you (see advert.).

Amazon Parrot and Whydah (H. V. R. Jugg).—Only a post-mortem could definitely reveal the cause of the Amazon's death, but from the details you supply it would appear that it died from the effects of internal hemorrhage; but how set up, I cannot say. However, to be quite safe, the cage should be thoroughly sterilised before being used for another bird. Painted with crude carbolic acid, well swilling all crevices, leave for a day in open, then first swill with boiling water, and after a thorough swilling with cold water leave out of doors for two or three days for sun and air to complete the operation. Hen Whydahs do not don the nuptial plumage of the male; they are simply striated brown birds all the year round—in fact, are very like the Corn Bunting in appearance.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. And bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

B. Johnson.—Septic fever—very advanced stage. Disinfection and isolation are important. You will understand sufficient about this wretched disease to comprehend its significance and the futility of attempting treatment.

J. A. Corteen.—Nothing infectious; bird died in fit. There was an extravasation of blood upon the brain, and the vessels of the lungs were engorged. Although there were no visible external marks of violence, yet an altercation with the other cocks might have been the exciting cause.

"Pinkie."—Neither Egbisco nor egg food of any kind can be accounted as the cause of septic fever. The young bird I examined was suffering from liver trouble. You have been giving them too stimulating a diet. Reduce the rations, and give remaining birds small quantity of Epsom Salts in their drinking water occasionally. The irritation and soreness of the feet are due to constitutional causes, and are of an eczematous nature.

A. Chope.—Pneumonia affecting both lungs caused the death of your bird. The exciting causes of this affection are referable to atmospheric influences, or anything which lowers the resistance. It more often occurs in birds as a very acute affection, producing death in a few hours. Occasionally, however, as in this case, several days elapse between the onset and termination. This probably commenced as congestion, for the lungs were oedematous and partly solidified, due to a serious exudation into the air spaces of the lung. It is a common cause of fatality among small cage birds, their respiratory mechanism being extremely delicate, and subjected to variation in density and moisture of the atmosphere.

A. M. Mann.—What you describe as sleeping sickness amongst your birds is in reality nothing less than a form of toxic poisoning brought about by the formation of toxins or poisons, and although you have not given me an outline of your methods of feeding, yet I believe the whole trouble to be of a dietetic nature. I cannot, therefore, advise you without these particulars. It is useless for me to give you an outline of treatment at the present. The dull and somnolent attitude assumed by your birds is due to the depressing influence of these toxins upon the nervous system.

T. G.—Canary died of "contagious necrotic pneumonia." Disinfect cages occupied by birds that have died, and place apart for some time. Remove also diseased birds to a separate room. Discontinue your egg food for a week or two, and give dry seed. In drinking water daily give to all your birds a little Condy's Fluid, and to sick bird treat as for pneumonia; a suitable prescription for same will be found under heading "E. D. G." I am afraid it would not be worth while my describing the nature of this particular pneumonia, as I fear you would not clearly understand. More particular, however, is medicinal treatment. It is a curable disease when early attention is given to affected birds.

E. D. G.—The post-mortem on hen Canary revealed similar characters to that of the Goldfinch, only more advanced: in this case, both lungs were consolidated and in a badly inflamed condition. I question whether she ever fully recovered from the prior attack, but that the disease had been lying latent, only to break out again. I still cannot find anything suggestive of contagion, and can only regard the two losses as a coincidence. The loss of the nestlings is not to be wondered at under the circumstances. Should you be troubled with any further illness presenting the same symptoms, try a course of the following medicine:—Aromatic spirits of ammonia 3 drachms, tincture of columba 3 drachms, tincture camphorne Co 2 drachms, syrup of prunes ½oz., and water up to 6ozs., giving one teaspoonful night and morning in drinking water, or 15 drops by the beak.

Silk.—No, nothing contagious or infectious. Inflammation of the bowels is exactly from what they are dying, most likely due to over stimulation by too free dieting. It is not so much medicine treatment they require, although as an aperient sulphate of soda occasionally will be very useful; but a slightly restricted dieting for a short time. Give your egg food in minutual proportions, and less frequently; better, perhaps, to withhold this for a time, and if soaked seed is given this must be perfectly fresh.

Lisards.—Examine carefully your seed; see if it is quite fresh and free from mould, for the bird I examined I found affected with "necrosis of the liver" and its subsequent complication, inflammation of the bowels. This is communicable from bird to bird by means of excreta soiling food; that is to say, excreta of affected birds. Cages occupied by dead birds should be disinfected and put away for several months. Isolation of sick from healthy birds is essential. Occasionally give doses of some aperient as magnesia in drinking water, and use Condy's Fluid daily in the drinking water. The cause has to be discovered, so that if you have any doubt of your food, change it at once.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

An Address (T. Robson).—Thanks for your kindness. The card did not arrive until Thursday morning, and we had then gone to press.

Corrected Names (E. Woodhead).—Your correction has been duly noted.

A Letter (A. E. Barwise).—We are much obliged to you for your kindness, and shall always be glad to hear from you.

Deaths of Birds (B. Johnson).—It looks as though you must have got some disease of an infectious character amongst your stock. We strongly advise you to send a body to our Mr. Yates for post-mortem examination. In the meantime, separate all healthy birds from the ailing stock. Advice would be useless until the nature of the trouble is known.

Bird Breeding (J. S. Campbell).—We cannot get your questions answered until you comply with the rules, which kindly peruse, and you will find that questions about Canaries, British and Foreign birds, must each be written on separate sheets of paper, as each has to be sent to a different gentleman to be answered. We are always glad to try to help readers, but they must observe the rules, or it makes it impossible for us to do so.

There were over ten shows held in this district on a recent Saturday, writes a Dumfries correspondent. Can nothing be done to put a stop to this clashing, he asks, for surely it is foolishness?

Messrs. Danysz Virus, Ltd., have added a department to their rapidly expanding business which will occupy itself with the treatment by their own staff of any area infested with mice or rats. For particulars and terms, enquiry should be made to the firm, who are prepared to make as many applications as may be necessary to destroy and keep the vermin under. The efficacy of the firm's treatment is demonstrated by the fact that they are employed by the principal catering companies of the metropolis.

I am very sorry to inform you that owing to lack of support, we are compelled to wind the Raunds and District Fanciers' Society up, writes R. Reynolds, the secretary. We have only twelve members on the books, and some of them are leaving. We are not in debt; on the other hand, we have about £10 in hand. The last show we had we lost £5. I shall still keep in the Fancy, and wish CAGE BIRDS every success. (It seems a pity nothing can be done to keep the society alive, seeing that it is financially sound.—Editor.)

Mules in the Hebrides.

Am pleased to say that I had success this breeding season, writes Mr. Jas. Macdonald (Stornoway, Lewis Island, Outer Hebrides), breeding over 30 young Canaries and 6 Goldfinch-Canary Mules. These are the first Mules ever bred in Stornoway, I think. The people do not take much interest in birds in this far-away place.

Java Sparrow Finds a Mate.

Writing to the "Clapham Observer," Mr. H. E. Green (of Albion Road, Clapham) states: My wife had until recently two Java Sparrows together in a cage. Some months back one died, and during our so-called summer she has been in the habit of hanging the remaining one in a window which is usually wide open. Last Sunday morning we were greatly surprised at finding that another Java Sparrow had flown through the open casement and had settled on our bird's cage. We fortunately caught the intruder and at once put it along with our own, and apparently it was a case of love at first sight, for they seem to agree splendidly together. Is not this an extraordinary case of bird instinct and their ability to find out those of their own species, however distant they may be from one another? Of course our visitor must have escaped from some other owner who may live near or far from here, but in either case it does not detract from the cleverness of the bird in finding out and going to another of its own kind.

The Robin and His Ways.

Although several broods of young Robins have been reared in the neighbourhood of the writer's garden, I feel certain the solitary half moulted specimen now seen daily around the house is not one of these. As the young ones grew they gradually strayed further from their home, and for a time we were without the familiar presence of perky Bob. As surely as the month of August comes round, so does the Robin return to the homestead, gardens, and out buildings, and then the inevitable battles commence, which decide the proprietorship of a certain beat for the ensuing winter.

The Robin is a fine songster, and he gives us of his best when the majority of the feathered performers are silent. All through the dark days of winter, through the spring, and early summer we hear him; but about midsummer-day he ceases to warble, and is generally silent until the harvest is being gathered and the rickyard is once more packed with the yield of the soil. Then, from the top of a rick, the barn door, or the side of an old wagon we once again hear his familiar strain. These early songsters are doubtless the young of the first brood, for frequently they are not fully moulted; nor is their song so loud and finished as that of an adult bird. The autumn song of birds is still a puzzle to us. If bird song is, as most naturalists tell us, the language of love, why should birds begin to sing in autumn when love-making is the last thing in their minds? Why should the Robin commence to sing then and continue right through the winter, while the sexes remain wide apart? And not only that, but every individual Robin that will visit the garden or farmstead during that period is given instant battle. There can be no love-making in their music at that time; it is probably a song of victory or defiance, more than one of courtship. During the winter months the supply of food for insectivorous birds is naturally limited, and so each Robin and Hedgesparrow is anxious to retain his own hunting ground to the exclusion of all others, even of his own wife and family. To us humans such conduct appears selfish and unnatural, but wild creatures have no such feelings, it seems. The first law of Nature is self-preservation, and our homely Robin acts up to it.

Hunting in Couples.

Some of the Hawks and Harriers will frequently hunt in couples, turning the hunted bird for the benefit of each other.

White's Thrush.

White's Thrush, a very rare visitor to this country, was named after the famous naturalist (of the little Hampshire village) whose writings have done so much to further the love of Nature among people of all classes.

Most Difficult Bird to See.

Of all the Warblers the Grasshopper Warbler is the most difficult to see. He forgets that he has wings, and the more you try to frighten him the closer he keeps; and he creeps about the underwood like a mouse.

A Bird that Does Not Build.

The Kestrel Hawk is no nest builder, but generally appropriates the disused nest of a Crow or other large bird. Even when it selects a hole or cleft in a cliff, it makes no attempt to construct a nest.

Bayswater Nightingales.

It is said that the Nightingale was heard to sing in the gardens near Bedford Park as recently as 1882, and that the bird was at one time fairly common at Bayswater. A specimen obtained there is now in the Natural History Museum.

The Great Bustard.

The Great Bustard which became extinct in the British Islands about 1840, still survives in unexpected places on the Continent. It is apparently more common in Spain than anywhere. In Germany it is protected and cherished as a game bird, so will probably survive.

A Bird Enemy.

The Fox is to be numbered among the enemies, of bird life. He sneaks about in the dead of night, and no doubt many a ground roosting bird is easily pounced upon. The feathers, wings, and partly eaten bodies of many birds have from time to time been found in his lair.

Birds on the Railway.

In the wilder districts of the country some of the birds get exceedingly tame, and where the trains run through the woods the birds can be seen sitting about on the rails; and they are very little disturbed by the passing trains. Recently the writer heard of a cock Pheasant being killed, and a Magpie having its long tail cut off by the engine wheels.

Ways of the Barn Owl.

The Barn Owl differs considerably from the Brown Owl in its ways of hunting. Instead of searching the woods and shrubberies, it confines itself almost exclusively to the farm buildings and rick yards, where it comes silently and swiftly round the corner and carries off a rat or mouse before its victim knows of its danger. The powerful claws of the Owl kill almost instantly.

Correspondence.

A Catching Question.

Sir,—I should be much obliged if any reader would tell me whether it is better to have a cock or a hen bird as a call bird in trap cages for catching Bullfinches, Chaffinches, Goldfinches, Linnets, Greenfinches, and Redpolls.

TRAPPER.

Various Matters of Canary Management.

Sir,—As a reader of your interesting paper, CAGE BIRDS, for many years, I shall be glad to have the opinions of several of your readers on the following questions:—(1) What is the best food to give Canaries that are much relaxed? (2) Is it considered that hemp seed is binding or relaxing? (3) Is maw seed binding or relaxing? (4) What is the cause of unfertile eggs (I have had more clear eggs than fertile eggs for several years past)? (5) I have had several hens, which seemed quite well, die after sitting seven to ten days; what is the cause?

Hybrid Breeding in North Hunts.

Sir,—On looking through CAGE BIRDS I see "Hybridiser" is sorry he cannot hear of any Mules or Hybrids being bred in North Hunts. Perhaps it will interest him to hear there are plenty of Mules bred this year in North Hunts, and by quite novices, too. I am only a novice myself, and if "Hybridiser" will kindly pay me a visit (my address is: 158, Belsize-avenue, Woodstone, North Hunts), I shall have great pleasure in showing him a trio of Hybrids, viz., a cock Goldie-Linnet, a cock Goldie-Greenie, and a cock Goldie-Redpoll, besides some Mules in nest feather. I have only been in the Fancy about 4 years, and have not shown a single bird, so I am only a mere novice. Anyone interested in this branch of the Fancy is welcome any week-end or on Sunday. I shall have the greatest pleasure in showing the birds, to "Hybridiser" especially. I may say that the parent birds are just as they were paired up.

Hints on Soldering.

Sir,—Could any of your readers who know anything of soldering, tell me how to tin a "soldering bolt"? I have had to bind my cages with wire as I could never make a decent job when I tried.

OLD READER.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Naylor, I advise him to procure a small bottle with a narrow neck, then to take a worn-out umbrella ferrule; also to purchase a pennyworth of wick (lamp round). Fill the bottle with methylated spirits, pass the wick through the ferrule, and see that it fits tight. You have then a cheap lamp. Place wires in punch bars, paste each one with soldering fluid or paste (sold at any ironmongers); light the lamp, and, holding it in the left hand, touch each wire with the stick of solder. It is very simple, and your correspondent will be surprised at the result, as no soldering iron is needed. A good sized front, including door, etc., can be made in less than a hour. I shall be pleased to hear of his success.

GEORGE WILSON.

Sir,—Mr. G. Naylor does not state whether it is the spirits, or the iron, or soldering he is in doubt about. Take spirits of salts and pour it in a jam pot (clean); then put some zinc into the pot, and you will find all the contents "boiling." Add zinc till the spirits stop "boiling," but while it is going on strike a match and set it on fire, and repeat until it will not light. The last-named process makes the spirits much stronger and it takes the solder more easily. When it is cold cork it in a stone bottle (a stone gingerbeer bottle is suitable). Label the spirits of salts "Poison," and keep it away from children. About three pennyworth will be plenty for Mr. Naylor; it can be had at the chemist's by a responsible person; state that it is wanted for soldering purposes. Now get a proper tinman's soldering stick (about ½lb.), which will be about 8d. per ½lb.; this can be had at any ironmonger's stores or at a tinman's stores. You must have pure copper for your iron, and when you are going to use it see it is clean and has no uneven marks in it. If it has, file it smooth. Then heat it in a fire (which is free from smoke), and after it is heated (not red-hot), dip it in the spirits and draw it across the solder. If this melts it, rub it on a piece of scrap tin and then you will find all the solder going over the iron. That is what they call tinning the iron. That is a very important point, for no man can use the iron before it is "tinned." See that the iron is always clean, and remember, if you should happen to get your iron red hot, that you cannot solder with it; if it so happens, just give it one or two dips into some water. Take your tin; see that it is clean and free from rust (if rusty, sandpaper it); then rub some spirits on the part you are going to solder. That will rinse all the dirt and grease away. Then take your iron from the fire, wipe it, dip it into the spirits, then across the solder, when it will pick up enough solder for you. Then work the iron on the point where you are working. After a little practice you go about all of it easily enough. To solder brass, copper, steel, or iron, clean with sand paper, then wash the part, and then "tin" that part before soldering it. To solder zinc, wash the part, take a wet towel and put at the back as you are soldering, for zinc will melt with the heat of the iron. I hope Mr. Naylor will be able to work all right in future.

J. STEER.

Sir,—Soldering seems to be a very difficult matter to a lot of bird breeders, especially to amateurs; I will therefore try and give a few hints. I only started bird breeding this season, and I have made all my own cages and fronts—about 30; some Roller song cages. I had no experience before, except from what I had seen at tin shops, and what I had seen my brother do. I make my own solder, also my own spirits for running. I have also made my own baths and a seed mill. In fact, I have made all I possibly could from tin and solder. If I had bought all I have made, it would have cost me pounds instead of shillings, so a little spare time has saved me something. Articles required: Purchase a soldering iron (for about 1s.—I find this a nice size for using), some spirits of salts, zinc nails, and some solder. To tin the iron, get a piece of solder, put it on some tin, and put some spirits on it. Get the iron red hot and then file it with a fine file to get all the dirt off it; then put it on the piece of solder and work it in until you see the solder sticking on to the iron, when it will be ready for use. Do not get the iron too hot after being turned, or else it will want tinning again. See that the article to be soldered has been cleaned well; then put some spirits on. Get your iron, and if it is right the solder will stick to it so that you can run it on to what you are soldering. To make the spirits, put 2 or 3 nails in the spirits of salts and wait until it is "killed" or has stopped "fizzing."

R. HOWARD.

Sir,—If Mr. Naylor wants to solder tin or tinned wire for cage making, he must get a soldering iron, some tinman's solder, a file, a piece of emery cloth, and an old pocket knife. Then get ½lb. spirits of salts (price 2d. or 3d.), a piece of sheet zinc 6in. by 2in. (or some scrap pieces will be cheaper). These are all he will require to solder with. To get ready for work, cut the zinc in small pieces about 1in. by ½in.; put them in a stone jar (a small jam jar will do; do not use a tin vessel); then pour about 3 tablespoonfuls of the spirits of salts in the jar and let it stand for about 15 minutes (this is what they term "killing"). It would be best to let it stand out-of-doors away from any paint work or livestock while "killing." When it has done "boiling" add not more than ¼ the amount of water to it. It is then ready for use. Get the soldering iron hot (not red hot), file the point all four ways about ½in. up, dip in the "killed" spirits, then rub the point on the solder. You will then have a white face on the iron (this is what they term "facing" the iron). Now clean the tin or tinned wire with the emery cloth or knife, rub some "killed" spirits on lightly where you are going to solder; use a brush or feather for the spirits. Heat the iron (not red hot), clean the face with a piece of rag, or dip in the "killed" spirits, then melt a little of the solder on the joint to be soldered; run it down the joint with the hot iron. If you are soldering two pieces of tin together, keep them close together. You will use less solder and have a finer joint. If you use new tin or wire it will not want cleaning. You will want a little practice before you make a clean job.

What Age Do Siskins Reach in Captivity?

Sir,—In answer to "Aberdevine" respecting the age of Siskins living in cages, I may say I have seen one next door to me which they have kept for 12 years; it is alive and well. My experience of them extends over two or three years. I have kept them in pairs and separately. As to their singing, this depends on the size of cage. I kept a Yellowhammer for 11 years, I may add.

Judges at Scottish Shows.

Sir,—Re the letter by "Surprised Scotch Fancier" in the Sept. 3 issue of CAGE BIRDS, I have heard his opinions voiced North, South and West. A perusal of your show advertisement columns seems to suggest a repetition of the same trouble this season again. I think the dealer's place is his own shop. Surely we have plenty of fanciers well qualified to do the judging without resorting to dealers? That is one opinion of not a few besides my humble self. The Fancy in Scotland is truly in "a rotten state." Just fancy! I was in a show in Forfarshire where the judge (who is a member of a very prominent club) told me with the utmost sangfroid that he had his birds that day away on loan to another noted exhibitor for the purpose of securing a few more points towards winning a club special. This is about as bad as the noted case of the Greenfinch-Bullfinch in which, by a sleight of hand trick, the bird was turned into a Canary Bullfinch. No wonder Scotsmen are turning sceptics.

TRUTH.

The Future of the Scotch Fancy Canary.

Sir,—The Scotch Fancy Canary is again to the fore. The young birds will appear at the Derby shows on the 10th, 17th, and 24th insts., We have heard a lot of argument against these early shows, and much can be said on both sides. But there is an attraction about birds coming out for the first time. Derby succeeding Derby tests their quality. If the same exhibit can win medal and cup at all the Derby shows, it is likely to win throughout the whole season. The Scotch Fancy Canary has had a struggle for existence, and it seems to me that these contests give one an opportunity of imparting new life into one's birds. Who will win? is now the question. I should like to have the opinion of your readers as to what type of Scotch Fancy should win. We have no fixed style. Each fancier thinks his own birds perfect. Fanciers differ, judges differ, and everybody differs from everybody else. Why cannot they agree as to type? A common understanding would help the Scotch Fancy Canary. I understand that a proposal will be brought forward in connection with resignations to merge the Derby associations into one society. It would save a lot of energy. I advocate a large Derby, conducted from a busy centre, preferably a commercial city, where life is active and calls for a hobby of some kind.

Raw Eggs and Colour-feeding.

An Instance of their Successful Use.

Sir,—Having kept Canaries for over 30 years—Crests and Lizards first, then Norwich, after which I made up my mind to stick to my favourite, the Yorkshire—I have had to colour-feed them, of course, for show. I have won over 20 specials. Now, to those whose time is limited, there is no necessity to hard-boil one's eggs. I get results as good, if not better, from raw eggs. Last year I tried it. This year I am doing the same. The birds are coming on fine. I had a beauty last year, but "on the small side," or I should have shown him in England. He was the hottest I ever colour-fed. To prove he was good, I showed him in Guernsey, December 1st, when he took first and special for best bird in show. I exhibited him here at Jersey on December 8th, when he took first and special for best bird in show, and also special for best Yorkshire; also Ramsden's medal for best colour-fed bird, it beating the Norwich. That's the result of raw eggs. I crack the egg in a teacup, throwing away the white. For six birds a teaspoonful of egg is enough, mixed with colour-feed and stale breadcrumbs, also a little sugar—not too much. Then I put in a teaspoonful of shepherd's purse seed one morning; the next the same quantity of maw seed, till the moult is through; then I only give it to them twice or three times a week. Don't make the food too moist; make it as dry as possible. If it is too moist the feathers of the birds do not tighten up so well. After they have moulted I give plenty of raw clean carrot, which helps to tighten them up, and a little apple (sweet) once a fortnight, which they relish much. I might state that by using raw eggs you can see if they are good. It is provoking to boil an egg to find out afterwards that it is bad and you are pressed for time. More than once I have said "Confound bad eggs."

Books for Bird Lovers.

Brief particulars of some of "Cage Birds" SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS for keepers of birds, with post free prices.

THE HYGIENE OF BIRD-KEEPING, 1/1.—By W. Geo. Creswell, M.D. Thoroughly treats of modern hygiene (the science of health) in bird-keeping.

SEPTIC FEVER OR CANARY PLAGUE, 7d.—By R. H. Clarke, M.D. The only booklet published concerning this dread disease, which Dr. Clarke has given very special study.

THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD CANARY, 1½d.—By J. H. Payne. Pronounced by all experts to be a most valuable pamphlet concerning the breeding of the variety; written by one of our leading judges.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

MEATING-OFF AND FEEDING SOFTBILLS, 6½d.—By John Frostick. No fancier of Insectivorous Birds who wishes to succeed in his hobby can afford to be without a copy. It also contains notes on Bird Trapping, Cages, etc.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.—By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy" No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and illustrations from photographs. Another charming gift book.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and 12 words of description, 250 2/-, 500 2/6, carriage paid.

Cage Bird Union Matters.

Crewe O.S. Show and the Cage Bird Union.

SIR,—Your report of the delegates' meeting of the C.B.U. reads that I stated the Crewe O.S. did not belong to the Cage Bird Union. The statement I made was that the shows which had been granted the Green Canary Association's patronage were all Union shows; but I was not quite certain in reference to Crewe O.S., and I asked Mr. Lythgoe if they did belong to the Union, to which he replied that they were members. I hope you will put this in order, as I am quite sure that the Crewe O.S. will, with every cause, feel aggrieved at the misinterpretation of my remarks.

H. A. NIMMO.

[We have pleasure in publishing Mr. Nimmo's letter. We regret the error, which inadvertently arose in condensing our reporter's shorthand notes.—ED.]

The London Federation and the Withdrawal of London Societies.

SIR,—In the account of the recent meeting of the Cage Bird Union, Mr. Warley is reported to have said that the London Federation is responsible for London societies seceding from the Union. The Wimbledon Society (the right to represent which Mr. Warley appears to have arrogated to himself) did not leave the Union on that account, nor did the London and Provincial O.S. and the London C.B.A. Mr. Warley's antagonism to the Federation is well known, and I am bound to think that he was prompted by some sordid intention in making the statement. It is now open to him to substantiate or withdraw it. Why Mr. Warley fosters such feeling of ill-will toward the Federation I am unable to say. It is not the fault of the Federation he has not been appointed to serve as a delegate at its meetings. His own members should know best about that. I am in a position to prove that the Federation, from its inception, has by its actions shown a desire to work side by side with the Cage Bird Union for the common welfare of the Fancy, without in any way trespassing on its preserves. I wonder if it would be possible to decentralise the Union and have an annual delegates' meeting to deal with questions of universal importance? If that could be done it should consolidate the whole Fancy.

R. L. CRISP,

Rule 22 and Seceding Societies.

SIR,—I thank you for the very full report given by CAGE BIRDS of the delegates' meeting held at Leicester; there are just two errors which I should be glad to have made right. In the item "that the Associates fee be reduced to 1s.," the resolution moved by Mr. Atkinson runs on to include the next item, "that the Council take steps to have Rule 22 extended, etc.," and it would appear from your report that this was carried. It was only the reduction of the fee that was carried. The latter item having been previously disposed of, was not discussed again. The other point arises in the matter of the Green C.A. patronage. It is stated that with one exception (Crewe O.S.) the G.C.A. patronage had gone to C.B.U. shows. I stated in reply to a question by Mr. Nimmo that Crewe was affiliated, and his statement was to the effect that this patronage had gone to all Union shows. It having been once more decided so emphatically that Rule 22 is for the benefit of the Union and its members, it is hoped the members will more loyally observe the rule, and do all they can to induce any shows at which they desire to exhibit to hold same under the Union rules, thus not only benefitting themselves, by having more shows at which to exhibit, but also the shows themselves, by being in a position to command the entries of C.B.U. members. Members are also urged to give their hearty support to all shows of societies which have remained loyal to the Union. Apparently the fear of the threatened extension of Rule 22 has had most weight with seceding societies (i.e., to debar shows held under the Union Rules from accepting entries from non-members of the Union), which would have curtailed their entries, especially in the British and Foreign classes; and the only other real reason advocated against the rule has been that the Y.U. shows were closed to Union members. Now that both these obstacles are removed there is no apparent reason why the seceding societies should not rejoin the Union, and I am anticipating that a large number will now do so. I would also like to ask the members to give their support to the compensation scheme, by which, on payment of 1s., compensation is given in cases where exhibitors cannot obtain redress from railway companies for any loss or injury to their birds to or from shows. The 1s. covers the show season, and there is no restriction to the number of claims. There are also 26 gold and silver medals offered for competition amongst members. Particulars of both these schemes are set out in the rules.

GEO. W. F. LYTHGOE, Secretary of the Cage Bird Union.

Information on the Growing of Dandelion.

SIR,—Further to my letter in your issue of Sept. 3, I may say, now that a drawing has been made of the seven varieties of dandelion referred to in that letter, that No. 1 and No. 2 are almost identical, No. 3 being a little more serrated. Both have a white mid-rib. These two are the best sorts for young Canaries. The leaves are in shape very much like young plants of the cos lettuce, only not so wide. No. 3 is very much serrated, has a red mid-rib, and usually grows in the vicinity of trees. This one is the earliest to sprout and flower, and grows flat on the ground. No. 4 is more serrated still, but has a white mid-rib. No. 5 is a more robust type of No. 2, but has a pink mid-rib, and bears long flower stems with thicker seed heads, and consequently much bigger seed. No. 6 is a rather curious variety, having dark blotches on the leaf; it is very much serrated, slightly hairy, very robust, and flowers late, with large thick seed-heads. No. 7 is another blotched variety, but much less serrated, and is not hairy, nor quite so robust as the foregoing. These last three varieties are the best for gathering seed-heads from. I shouldn't care to use any of the last five for nestling Canaries.

How an Asthmatic Canary was Cured.

SIR,—I beg to offer you a little of my experience in the Fancy, hoping it may benefit some of my brethren whose desire it is to relieve their pets of any suffering that may come to them. About 14 years ago, about April, a friend of mine brought me a loud singing cock Canary. It was so bad with asthma that it had to stop and gasp after every 2 or 3 notes. He asked if I would try to relieve it, if possible. I took it in hand and fed it on nothing but bread and milk, with a little plain Canary seed in its box, and for drink I gave it nothing but a strong mixture of Spanish juice in water. I am pleased to say I succeeded in really curing it in a month. I saw the bird up to two years after, and my friend told me he had never seen it gasp since and had bred with it. It had sung, too, more than ever. But he had kept it free from draughts, which had been the cause of the asthma.

The Distempering of Bird Cages.

SIR,—I have read with interest the many letters which have appeared lately on the subject of distempering cages, and should be glad if you would allow me to express my opinion, which is, that distemper, no matter how it is made or applied, is totally unsuitable for the insides of bird cages. There are two objections which to me are insurmountable. First, you cannot wash a cage unless you go to the trouble of redistempering it each time; and second, distemper is always more or less porous. I think every breeder will agree with me when I say that, cleanliness is one of the most important things we have to consider, and I fail to see how we can keep a cage clean unless it is frequently washed, and if we have to go to the trouble of washing scraping, and distempering every time a cage gets dirty, I am afraid the cages will very often remain dirty. With reference to distemper being porous, we all know that the droppings from the birds do not always fall on the floor; it often happens, especially in the breeding season, that the walls and even the roof of the cage receive a portion of the excrement; and if the walls are porous the moisture must soak in and all the cleaning in the world will not get it out again. In spite of the many opinions to the contrary, to my mind there is nothing to beat a couple of coats of good paint which, if properly applied, is quite harmless to the birds; and it allows a cage to be taken down, scrubbed, wiped and replaced in a few minutes.

Railways and Fanciers.

The London Federation Takes an Interesting Step.

Sir,—Herewith I have pleasure in sending you a copy of the petition it is proposed by the London Federation of Cage Bird Societies should be presented by the Cage Bird Union, the London Federation of Cage Bird Societies, and the Yorkshire Union, to the various railways in the United Kingdom.

P. ADAMTHWAITE, Hon. Sec., London Federation of Cage Bird Societies.

THE PETITION.

We, the undersigned, being members of various Cage Bird Societies in England, beg to bring before the notice of the railway companies in the United Kingdom the following points, and ask that our petition may be favourably considered:—(1) The heavy charge of 50 per cent. over and above the ordinary parcels rate made by the various railways for the carrying of exhibits to and from the various shows held by Cage Bird Societies in the United Kingdom, although the companies' liability in the event of loss on other than previously insured specimens is confined to 5s. per bird, but in the case of ordinary parcels an amount up to £10. (2) The fact that members of Cage Bird Societies, when wishing to travel to shows held in the United Kingdom, have hitherto been refused facilities to enable them to travel at reduced rates, as is done in the case of Piscatorial Societies, Associations, etc. (3) The fact that should an exhibitor wish to personally convey his exhibits to or from a show, the railway companies are in the habit of charging not only the full personal travelling fare, but 50 per cent. over and above the ordinary parcels rate for any exhibit he may be carrying. (4) In support of the above, we pray that facilities may be granted by the railways in the United Kingdom on the following lines, and which will encourage the greater support of shows held, both in the attendance of exhibitors at shows and the greater number of entries, alike to the mutual benefit of the railways and fanciers. (a) That exhibits may be carried at the ordinary rate of parcel carriage. (b) That members of Societies affiliated to the Cage Bird Union, the London Federation of Cage Bird Societies, and the Yorkshire Union of Cage Bird Societies may be permitted to travel to and from shows held in the United Kingdom at a single fare and a quarter on production of a certificate, similar to the enclosed specimen, personally signed by the honorary secretary of the Society to which the member may belong. (c) That where exhibitors find it convenient to personally carry their exhibits, only half the ordinary parcel rate be charged.

An Irish Show: Ought it to be a Confined One?

SIR,—I observe in your issue of August 20th that the Holywood and District C.B.S. are holding their first annual show on Nov. 4th next. I regret that same is confined to the province of Ulster. This means that the other three provinces of Ireland cannot compete. Rather hard lines, this! I, for one, intended helping on this show with some exhibits that would be on view for the first time at an Irish show, as up to the present I have not seen or heard of the same variety. I wonder what support the Norwich Plainhead and Yorkshire Canary Clubs of Ireland members will give this show? Certainly they cannot expect their patronage without opening the show to Ireland. I know the Sligo Ornithological Show is open to the kingdom, and at different times we have had entries from across the Channel—one exhibitor, Mr. Collins, of Norwich, sent us birds which travelled no less than 1,160 miles to the show and back, and our Secretary had a letter saying that they arrived "in the pink of condition." I have had experience as a show secretary, and the committee were always anxious to get the entrance money to cover the prize money; this and a good "gate" help to leave a balance in hand after the show. One thing I was glad to note, viz., that a local judge had been engaged, in the person of Mr. Isaac Reid. This gentleman has been at the top as an exhibitor in his time. I think Ireland ought to trust some of her long-experienced fanciers to judge. If the Yorkshire men want a special judge, what about some one of the members of the club being nominated, the same in respect to the Norwich Club? I often wonder why the Scotch Fancy men do not support shows outside Ulster. I think it would help to encourage the breeding and exhibiting of that particular breed, and instead of the few old names always occurring at the one or two particular shows, we should have numerous exhibitors. I hope the Holywood Society will reconsider their decision to confine their show to Ulster and will yet open it to Ireland. Our own show here in Sligo gets half its entries outside Connaught, and the same applies to the Ulster open show, Dublin, Cork, Lurgan, and Dundalk, judging by the catalogues of past shows. In conclusion, I hope the fanciers interested will take what I have said above in a fancier's spirit, that is, if only to quote the inscription on the Belfast coat-of-arms, "Pro Tanto Quid Retribuamus"—"In what return shall we give for so much." I am told this is the meaning of the words; if so, it is a good one and one that fanciers should study, especially if fanciers from one province support those of the other.

A Lecture delivered by Mr. TOM EDWARDS before the Burnley and District C.B.S. on August 30.

The Burnley and District Cage Bird Society held on August 30 one of the most successful meetings it has ever had. The committee had engaged Mr. Tom Edwards, the well-known breeder and exhibitor of Norwich Plainheads, to give them a lecture, and right well did the members and other well-known fanciers turn up to get information which Mr. Edwards was only too glad to give them. After Mr. R. Braybrook, the president, had made a few remarks as to the welfare of the Society, etc., Mr. Edwards gave his lecture, which was as follows:

If Starting Again.

My task to-night is rather a tall order, as I find it is not so easy to write a lecture as to talk about our hobby; but I will try and give you my ideas. If I were just commencing in the Fancy again I should, in the first place, put myself in the hands of a well-known fancier whom I could trust, and get him to supply me with one pair or more of birds; but one pair of real good ones rather than two or more pairs of cheaper birds would be better. Then, if my funds would allow me, I should go to another successful breeder and buy another pair. But I fancy I can hear some of our friends ask, why buy from two stocks? We must inbreed to get good results. Granted; but I think if you work on these lines you will have ample stock to get your own birds coming somewhere near the standard of perfection in the variety.

I prefer a yellow tick or variegated cock bird, with plenty of bulk; that is to say, plenty of chest, head and neck. Never mind if he is a little bit coarse, providing he is "all there" on the other points.

The Choice of Hens.

As we all know, the choice of hens is the main difficulty. My method would be to get Clear Buff hens. They must be of a good average size, with the best type and quality it is possible to lay your hands on. (Here one of the members caused some laughter by asking if Mr. Edwards could tell him where to get hold of some such hens; but he was informed he must breed them.) As you are all aware, the lecturer continued, I never was an advocate for midgets. If you are able to buy two pairs, I would get a right good large Buff cock, a clear for preference, and never mind if he has what some of our reporters call, "abundance of feather," so long as it is of the right texture. I have been amused hundreds of times while in conversation to hear such remarks as "fails in quality," when at the same time the bird in question has been teeming with the best quality of feather it is possible to breed, but there has been a little too much of it.

Now the hens to match this stock with should be Yellow, Ticked or Variegated ones, of good medium size and full of quality. Then I think you will be on a fair way to success, providing, of course, you are lucky to breed a few birds which should be good stock birds, if not exactly show specimens. (Here another well-known fancier said he had not been able to breed either sort this season, which caused some of his mates to remark: "You have got quite enough without any more," and they wished they had some of them.) The lecturer said he had found it better to breed so that those birds which were not show specimens were real good stock birds. There is always a big demand for good big stock birds, he added.

We will now take it that we have bred a few birds, and that they are just leaving the nest. Some fanciers take them away as soon as they see they are out of the nest, but I would not do that at all, as they are better left with the parents longer; they will not thrive much if you hear them scream to be fed. I always put a clean nest in for the hen and I leave the young alone until they are 23 or 24 days old; then I remove them just at dusk into a clean cage, which must be placed in a good light, with plenty of food ready for morning—place some food in a dish or saucer, inside the cage, as well as in the ordinary place they have been used to feeding from, and you will find them going all right as a rule.

Feeding Young Birds.

We will proceed next with the feeding of the young stock. No doubt you have all been bothered with some of your birds having inflammation of the bowels just when they are a month old, and commencing to crack a little seed. I have been troubled a great deal with it, and have found that the grinding hemp and summer rape seed in equal parts, and placing it in a separate dish is a grand preventative.

Your birds will soon be getting ready for moulting. They should begin to moult when they are about eight or ten weeks old; at any rate, the first nest birds, as I find early-bred birds do not commence to moult as early as those bred a little later, when the weather gets warmer, and when the birds are ready to cast the body feathers as soon as their tails get the full length.

If you are colour feeding your birds, it is advisable to get them well on the feed before they show any signs of moulting, so that you get their blood well charged with the feed. As to the practice of covering up while one's birds are moulting, some fanciers adopt one method and some another. I always prefer them to be covered up, just so that they can see to eat and drink with comfort. I have seen some of the hottest coloured birds, which had been covered up with sugar sacks from the ceiling to the floor, and they were in the best condition you could wish to see them in when uncovered.

Concerning the colour food, we are again divided in our opinions, as some very successful fanciers will not have hot pepper at all. For my own part I am sure it acts as a good tonic, and stimulant just when our birds require it. With these few remarks I will close. If any fancier wishes to ask any questions I shall be only too glad to answer him, as no doubt they will create a little discussion, which you will all enjoy better than a lot of cut and dried material.

Questions and Answers.

Hardly had the lecturer concluded when Mr. Roberts, a very successful and keen fancier, asked him if it were correct that the only way to get size was to introduce the Crestbred?—The best way to obtain size is to double-buff.—But Mr. Roberts failed to see how double-buffing could produce the bone and size some of our noted winners had to-day; he had been trying but had had no success as yet; and he could not see how the colour by double-buffing would deteriorate when once the colour was in the blood.—The lecturer explained that double-buffing had not to be done more than once, or else one would produce long feathers on the thighs of his birds.

Another question was: How much colour-food would be required for 20 birds?—About five pounds, which should be used accordingly.

What percentage of marked birds would marked birds breed?—Here Jimmy Evans said he sometimes missed breeding any at all.

How near relatives would the lecturer breed together?—No nearer than cousins, unless you know how the stock was bred.

Mr. R. Leonard: Where does Mr. Edwards consider the cream of the Norwich Plainheads are to ge got?—Within 30 miles around Burnley; and he further stated he was quite prepared to pick a team of Norwich providing the fanciers of this district would allow him, and exhibit them against any other district in England.

Another fancier asked: Does Mr. Edwards believe in pedigrees?—Yes, by all means, as I know how to match my birds better by understanding their pedigree than by just pairing them together anyway.

Another well-known fancier remarked that he had bought birds from a grand stud with pedigrees as long as a billiard table, and the same fancier from whom he bought them, on going into his room one day during the breeding season to see the three hens he had sold, asked the question: "I say, Jimmy, hast tha gone in for a few Border Fancies?" So much pedigree would not, added the speaker, do for Jimmy now.

What were the most vital points to observe when getting new stock?—Good head and chest particularly, silky feather, wings to be well carried and not to be crossed at all, and tail not too long.

Would Mr. Edwards keep a bird for stock if it were bred from two slashing-sized birds, but practically speaking a "sport" from two bad ones?—No, it would not be of any use when there were plenty of good pedigree stock birds to be had nowadays.

Mr. Roberts asked if the lecturer had ever known any success to be obtained by pairing a Crestbred to a Plainhead? Jimmy Arpden answered by telling us he once tried it, and it took him four years to get clear of the blood. The lecturer stated that we did not want to go back to the small Norwich, which were staged some 20 years ago. And Jude Hayhurst stated that he had often paired good show birds together, but they had bred nothing but dummies.

Mr. Roberts here made some remarks about his experiments in double-buffing, but he had not, he said, fathomed how our successful fanciers produced size, combined with quality. He had tried year after year, but had not had any success yet.

Here the President stated that the two best birds he bred in 1908 were double-buff bred, and he quite believed in it now. Mr. Edwards stated that he would rather go into a good breeder's room and buy a duffer, than buy a good-looking bird out of a room with a lot of duffers in it.

Would it be of any use to pair a real good sized cock to a very small but typical hen?—No time would be gained by so doing.

Did the lecturer think that our good big specimens of to-day carried their tails as well as the Norwich of olden times?—Most decidedly—better now than ever they were.

Should the head be round?—No; it should be like the chest—nice oval shape, and not too short, either; but I have often seen birds with grand shaped heads but poor bodies, and others with good shaped bodies but poor shaped heads.

Several other questions were asked, and ably answered, and some old fanciers' names were mentioned by the lecturer, who had been noted breeders, such as Sept. Earnshaw and old Ab. Hamer. Mr. Jude Hayhurst proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Edwards for his interesting lecture; Mr. Jowitt seconded, and everyone present agreed that they had enjoyed the discussion that had taken place. Mr. Hayhurst promised to give his experiences at bird-keeping on September 13, and it is hoped there will then be a right good muster to hear this successful fancier. After the lecture, a concert was held, and songs were sung by Mr. Jimmy Evans, who, though a confirmed bachelor, always sings about the girls. Messrs. Carney and J. Hayhurst also sang, as also did Mrs. J. Langard, the caretaker's wife. By the singing of "God Save the King," the first of a series of lectures came to a close.—A. E. Barwise.

ON THE TOP RUNG:

And How I Got There.

(A series of brief illustrated interviews, by Mr. Thos. Aitken, with several prominent fanciers North of the Border. Previous subjects have been Mr. A. M'Farlane (Norwich), Mr. G. G. Henderson (British), Mr. W. M'Clure (Scots Fancy), Mr. A. Chalmers (Norwich, etc.), Mr. R. B. Jarvie (Norwich), Mr. L. J. Arrighi (Foreign and British Birds and hybrids), Mr. James Winter (Norwich), and Mr. John Brown (British).—Editor.)

Mr. James Smeaton formerly resided in Preston-Pans, and only recently has made his abode in Musselburgh, the town by the side of the silver sea so beloved by a certain section of Glasgow holiday makers. It is just five years since Mr. Smeaton started with Norwich Plainheads, during which period he has made a very happy rise into prominence. The attainment of so prominent a position in Plainhead circles in Scotland in so short a space of time Mr. Smeaton attributes partly to the fact that he obtains the best birds possible for breeding purposes. As he himself puts it: "When I see a good bird that I want I don't let the price of it stand in the road."

Mr. Smeaton has eighteen pairs of Norwich, with a good number of youngsters. His birds are kept in a room in the house, the cages being stacked one above the other against the wall. The bottom row of cages is about six inches or so from the floor. He makes all his own cages, and uses both single and double compartment ones. The former measure eighteen inches in length, and the latter three feet. He fixes his seed-boxes outside, and uses sand for the bottoms of the cages. The nest-pans are the ordinary earthenware ones with perforated bottoms.

"Have you any special method of feeding your birds?"—"Oh, no! I simply feed on good plain Canary seed with a little rape, and, of course, egg-food. This latter I make up of Osborne biscuits and eggs, using two biscuits to the egg. When the hens are sitting they don't get any egg-food; just plain Canary seed."

"And you just pair up in the ordinary way?"—"Yes! a yellow to buff. I believe in putting typical birds together, but I mostly rely on the hen for the type, also for quality of feather."

"Do you separate the two birds when they have either eggs or young?"—"No; I just leave them together, and I never have any trouble with them; only in very rare instances do I come across birds that need to be separated."

"At about four weeks old all my young get bread and milk every day. I start colour-feeding at the end of July. I use one part of hot pepper to five parts of cold. This I think is a suitable strength. I moult the birds in the cages in pairs as they are, and give them the bath once a week. For green-food I used to give the birds dandelion, but now that I am unable to obtain it about here, I give lettuce instead."

"Do you manage to breed all your winners?"—"No; I don't profess to be able to breed all my winners, as some people do. I buy in birds every year. Fresh birds must be brought in to improve the stock."

"Are you troubled with red mite?"—"Well, yes; to a certain extent. Every breeder has them. When I see an affected part of any cage I brush it over with paraffin, as I think this is about the best thing for exterminating red-mite."

"Are you bothered with sweating hens?"—"No; that's a thing I have never had—a sweating hen."

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*A Crippled Canary.

My dada has had a yellow Canary a long time in a big cage, and one day my uncle gave him another with only three toes on one foot, and also a stump leg. He put it with the other bird, and they had four eggs. Now we have three baby yellow Canaries. My dada put them in another cage, and we have two more now. When poor old stumpy-leg father feeds them he sometimes slips and tumbles, but he doesn't seem to care.—Sent by Clara Herrelt (age 8), Far Lawn, Belper, Derbyshire.

*Eggs But No Birds.

My father keeps Yorkshire and Norwich Canaries. Last year he bred thirty birds; this year he has had 35 eggs, and hasn't one bird. He has a kind of conundrum to solve to know the reason for this. Having the same stock of birds as last season, and being a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS ever since its commencement, he is living in hopes of trying again next year.—Sent by Dorothy Drew (age 9), 13, Egerton Street, Higher Openshaw, off Ashton Old Road, Manchester.

A Family Affection.

On going to school one afternoon recently I was attracted by a series of sharp squeaks and chirps to an iron spout erected near a wall. I looked behind the spout and saw a young Sparrow wedged in and evidently in pain. The youngster allowed me to carry it home and put it into a large cage in the back yard, made to contain birds. I then put some food in the cage and hid myself to see if it would touch it. A sharp twittering surprised me, and on looking up I saw three Sparrows sitting on the roof. The young one answered them, and presently one flew down and fed the youngster through the mesh.—Sent by John Ryder (14), 13, Newlands Road, Middlesbrough.

My Experiences with Hartz Mountain Roller Canaries.

By JOHN THOMSON.

I should like through CAGE BIRDS to give fanciers my experiences as a breeder of Hartz Mountain Roller Canaries. I am a working man. I started breeding Canaries about six years ago; I had two pairs in my dwelling-house in town. But my success was not very great.

Better Quarters.

The following year I removed to one of the Nobel's Explosives Co. houses. These houses are situated in the country, and command a good view; there is plenty of fresh air, which I consider necessary to a breeder of Canaries. In the garden adjoining my house, with the assistance of a friend, I built a wooden breeding house, in which I bred birds the following season with fair success. But as I was using the old style of all-wire breeding cages, I found a great deal of extra labour involved in keeping them clean and in good condition; so during the winter months, with my friend's assistance, we made a number of special breeding cages of the box pattern type, i.e., three-compartment cages, with detachable fronts, metal sand trays, and sliding partitions, 5ft. long and 11 inches wide, and 16 inches high, and with outside drinkers and seed-boxes.

We also made a composition nest-pan, which is very absorbent, and appears to be a safeguard against red mite, for since using them I have never seen a red mite in any of my cages. These pans are of a design to suit the birds.

A Successful Start.

Having now a good stock of breeding cages, etc., I secured two cock birds and four hens of the best strain my means would allow of. I started away the following spring with five cock birds and eight hens. I may say that my birds had been in the breeding house all the winter in large flight cages; and all were in the best of condition.

I had a very successful season, rearing over ninety young birds; and I could have bred more, but was forced to separate pairs for want of room for my young ones. With this stock of young birds I had some difficulty in getting them caged off for training, so during the winter months I employed my spare time in erecting an open-air flight. Into this open-air flight I put all my hens, and kept them there all the winter, caging off the young cocks in my breeding room, where they were taught by a "schoolmaster." Having again added to my stock of cages, I have now a room in my dwelling-house fitted up as a training room, where I cage off the young cocks and put them under the tuition of two Schoolmasters. At present I have thirty young cock birds moulting in this room.

My method of breeding is, as far as possible, as follows:—I run my birds in pairs—two pairs in each cage—and reserve the centre compartment for caging off the cocks with the young birds after the hens have again nested, or for allowing the young to be fed through the wire partition.

When the young are able to be taken away I put them into a flight cage till they are well on to the hard seed, or are about five or six weeks old. I then transfer them to the open flight, and when the young cocks begin to show signs of breaking away into the moult, I again transfer them to the schoolroom, and cage them off separately in single cages (box pattern).

My Method of Feeding.

My method of feeding is as follows:—The yolk of hard-boiled egg for the first three days; then I introduce biscuit gradually, until the birds are about eight days old, when the mixture of biscuit and egg is five Osborne biscuits to one egg; I also supply the birds with a stock mixture of Canary and rape seeds, and plenty of green-food (chickweed preferably). I hardly ever use hemp seed.

When the young are taken away from the parents I drop almost all egg-food, and feed them on milk sop, i.e., bread and scalded milk. With this method of feeding I have not lost a single young one this year, after the birds have left the nest.

I find these methods work well, and I have been very successful, rearing about 150 young birds each year. At the present time I have over 100 young birds. I also find that, by keeping only the young cocks in a room along with the School masters, there are very few of them that pick up bad notes; and their song is very much improved.

I sell off all my stock locally at the end of each season, and as I breed birds by way of a hobby, I do not charge fancy prices for them; and, as a result, I cannot supply the demand. But what I get pays me very well for my trouble.

No. 442.

Sent by Mr. William E. Sturley, 3, York Road, Newport (Mon.).

I submit herewith an original idea I am adopting for ventilating my aviary. Its construction is both simple and cheap, as will be seen by the sketch, and fanciers will find it very effective. "A" is the joist over my aviary window. "B" is the window pane. "C" is a small piece of perforated zinc continuing from sheet of glass. "D" is a wooden shutter to act as a draught screen; it works on a pivot. And "E" shows the supports for the draught screen. In the summer, when the aviary is closed at night, the draught screen is left horizontal, thereby allowing the air to drive straight in, and in the winter the draught screen is turned up as shown, thus conducting the air upwards and stopping the cold wind driving full on to the birds. The draught board is wider than the zinc by a few inches each side to effectually prevent front draught, the air passing through the sides as shown in sketch. The holes 1, 2, and 3 are: No. 1 to pass wire through to act as pivot; No. 2 to insert pin to hold draught screen up; and No. 3 to insert pin to hold draught screen horizontal when required. If there is no joist over the window, this arrangement could be bracketed from the roof or side of the shed, and, of course, if the ventilator is wanted where there is no window, a space can easily be cut out for it. The size would be regulated according to the size of the aviary.—WM. E. STURLEY.

No. 443.
Combined Mite-trap and Perch-holder.

Sent by Mr. George Peters. "Sandgate," Coundon Road, Coventry.

I enclose an illustration of a combined mite-trap and perch-holder. I have had the idea in use for many years, and have never found any form of perch-holder or trap so effective and convenient. The illustration will, I think, show how simply the construction is fixed in the wire front. It remains in the position placed, but can be moved up or down to any height or position on the cage; neither does it require any support other than that shown. This is a decided advantage, as the perch does not touch the back of the cage; therefore the mites on leaving the birds can only creep into the perch holder. The perch can then be removed and the mites shaken out and destroyed. "A" is a perch-holder, made of tin. The part fitting the wires measures 1¾ins. by 1¾ins. The part to hold the perch is 1in. long by ¼in. "B" is the holder and perch in the wire front. Any tinsmith will make them for 9d. or 10d. per dozen.—GEO. PETERS.

TREHARRIS F.S.

The committee met on September 1st. The classification and list of special prizes for show on October 27th next were adopted. Mr. E. A. Lovell was selected to judge. The following gentlemen were added to the committee: Messrs. J. Jones, W. H. Warren, and G. Cooper. Mr. W. H. Aplin was elected vice-chairman. Mr. Aplin is also their representative on the Cage Bird Union.—W. J. PURVES, Hon. Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual fortnightly meeting held Sept. 3 in the Fawcett Street Cafe, Mr. J. Farrar presiding over a splendid attendance. The secretary read a letter from Mr. Wm. Vart (Kendal), acknowledging receipt of the gold watch which he won in our recent competition. Other important business was then discussed, and after being satisfactorily settled, a general discussion took place. The secretary and treasurer intimated their intention of resigning their respective positions, and asked that their successors be appointed at the next meeting.—WM. REID, Hon. Sec.

HAMILTON (Cadzow Oaks) O.S.

Monthly meeting held on 3rd September, in Lesser Town Hall, vice-president (Mr. J. Braidwood) in the chair. Messrs. E. Cleland and W. Shearer were appointed collectors. The patronage of the Yorkshire C.C. of Scotland has been secured, and we are endeavouring to obtain the patronage of the Scottish N.P.C. and the Border Fancy C.C. Our list of judges is now completed, with the exception of the British bird judge, whom we hope to appoint shortly. Mr. Braidwood tabled a motion re classification of Norwich. This being all the business, the meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman. —A. CANT, Hon. Sec.

MIDLAND ROLLER C.C.

Usual monthly meeting held August 25th at headquarters, the Swan and Peacock Hotel, Wolverhampton. A splendid muster of nearly thirty members turned up. In connection with our open contest, to be held November 3rd and 4th next, we have decided to have five classes, as last year, viz., champion young birds, novice young birds, open class, £2 limit, and a members' class. We are hoping to have a bigger entry than at our show of last year, which was most successful, with 165 entries, and we have engaged three judges, so that each exhibit shall have plenty of time given to it. Messrs. F. A. Lester, J. Netherwood, and J. B. Hesling are the gentlemen appointed to judge, and we shall endeavour to make our schedule even better than last year's. We trust the Roller exhibitors will back up our efforts by giving us a bumping entry.—J. H. WILLOWS, Hon. Sec.

MID-RHONDDA C.B.A.

General meeting held at Danix Temperance Bar, Tonypandy, September 3rd, when we had a very fair attendance. Mr. E. Hughes kindly consented to take the office of assistant secretary. On the advisability of adding a class for novice members who had never won a prize, it was agreed that we add this class to our schedule. Our first members' and radius show will be held at Tonypandy on November 10th; the radius will be from Pontypridd to Ferndale, and to Treherbert, including Gilfach Doch. Mr. Arthur Legg was asked to see the Vicar of Tonypandy (our president) with regard to having the parish hall for our show; it is an excellent place. The two following gentlemen were admitted members: Messrs. Patric Morrissey (Clydach Vale), and E. Hughes (Pennygraig), and we had a promise of two or three more for our next meeting, to be held September 10th. I shall be glad to see every member at this meeting.—A. H. C. LEGG, chairman.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held September 1st, at Wentworth Cafe, Mr. Bradshaw (president) in the chair. The schedule for open show, as proposed by committee was adopted. The classes are the same as last year's, with the exception that there will be two unflighted Yorkshire classes (unflighted Yellow and unflighted Buff), instead of Yellow and Buff together; also a Yellow Yorkshire hen and Buff Yorkshire hen classes, instead of only one; two more additions are: Novice Yorkshire hen and novice Norwich hen classes. Novice Crests and A.V. Canary classes are cancelled. The two selling classes are made 30s. and 15s., instead of 40s. and 20s. There will be an extra stock class this year, entry fee, 3d. per cage, pairs or single. Also an A.V. novice unflighted Yorkshire and A.V. novice unflighted Norwich for Novice members only. Several important proposals of alterations to rules were made, which will be brought up at the December meeting. It was decided we accept Mr. Colton's colour food specials, given according to his stipulations, and the secretary was instructed to thank him for same. Mr. Kelly gave us a report of the Cage Bird Union meeting held at Leicester, and it was decided that we continue to belong to the Union. It was also proposed that all discussion on the C.B.U. be ruled out of order for the rest of the year, as it is getting "quite sickening," and it was thought members were staying away in consequence. The next meeting is a judging competition, and we hope to have Mr. J. C. Barnes to give us a lecture on the Norwich Plainheads. Kindly let us have a good muster for that occasion. Mr. Falding was elected a new member.—J. WOOLHOUSE.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Monthly meeting held Aug. 25 at Oldham Hall, Liverpool, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe in the chair. Messrs. Brunskill and Rodinson were elected members, and the following were nominated for membership: Messrs. Ambler, Withington, Murray, Thomas, Bloor, Capper, Lea, Richards, Wright, Hancocks, and Wagstaffe. Re Patronage: The Garston Society wrote asking leave to withdraw their application, owing to their proposal re carrying out an open show, not being confirmed by the general body. The date, Dec. 3, is therefore vacant for the Yorkshires and Norwich; we are, however, hopeful of obtaining the required classification elsewhere. Due notice will be given in the event of our being able to fill the date. It was decided that Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, 68, Brunswick Road, Liverpool, obtain a supply of paint for the inside of Norwich show cages, and same is now obtainable; it is put up in 1lb. tins and sold at 6d. each. Will fanciers please note? The following is the syllabus for 1910-11: Sept., lecture, "Preparing birds for exhibition," by W. Hales, Esq.; Oct. table show, Yorks., Greens (7 classes); Nov., Nor. Greens (7 classes); Dec., Green Borders (7 classes); Jan., Yorks., Nor. and Bord. (Clears, 7 classes, A.O.V. 1 class); Feb., Brit. (7 classes); March, general meeting; April, Mendelism: Its relations to Green and Cinnamon Canaries," J. S. Clinch, Esq.; May, judge and schedule for young show; June, evening drive; July, allotting patronage; August, syllabus, 1911-12. For the table shows, the entry fee is fixed at 6d. per bird, all paid out, points to count upwards decided, to offer 2 gold medals, for most points throughout the year, 1 each champion and novice; and Messrs. McAuliffe and Hughes kindly promised a gold centre medal each for second most points, champion and novice respectively. Syllabus cards, rules, and specials cards, will be out towards the end of month; in the meantime, members who have not paid their annual subscriptions are requested to do so. Our membership now stands at 150. Shall be pleased to hear from any fanciers who are thinking of joining. Next meeting Sept. 22, when nominations will be brought up. GEO. GILLS, Sec., 36, Lord Nelson Street, Liverpool.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE & DIS. C.B.S.

At monthly meeting held September 3rd, there was a fair turn out of members. After the usual business the secretary read letters from the secretaries of the N.C.C. and N.Y.C.C. intimating that the Blaydon Society had been selected as one of the shows for their respective patronages. The special prizes are again coming in for our annual show. We have also secured some new patrons, who are subscribing very liberally to our annual exhibition funds.—GEO. HAYVER, Sec.

SCOTTISH BRITISH BIRD & M.C

Meeting held at 142, High street, Edinburgh, Mr. A. Cochrane (president) in the chair. There was a fairly good attendance, and after much discussion and voting the following clubs were successful in getting the patronage:—Trophy and medals: Hawick, Bathgate, Scottish National, and Glasgow and Dist. Medals only: Kilsyth and Broxburn. Secretaries of the above clubs are requested to send particulars of any bird disqualified at same to me as soon as possible afterwards.—JOHN ALLEN, Sec.

CROYDON AND DISTRICT F.A.

At the general meeting held at the "Sunflower," George-street, Croydon, on August 29th (Mr. J. N. Sutton in the chair), it was decided to hold the first annual show during the third week of November, and to make it a "members' Show." Full particulars with reference thereto will shortly be announced. At the close of the business a most instructive lecture was given by Mr. P. H. Bayliss, on "Preparing Birds for Exhibition." His remarks were listened to closely, the members greatly benefiting thereby in view of the forthcoming show. A vote of thanks to the chairman, and also to the lecturer, brought the proceedings to a close.—A. HEWENS, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF SCOTLAND.

Meeting held Aug. 23 in Duncan's Rooms, 71, London Street, Glasgow, for granting the Club's patronage at this season's shows. The President, Mr. R. B. Gibb, occupied the chair. Nine shows applied for patronage, the following six being successful:—Ayr and Dis., Oct. 29 (6 classes); Hamilton C.A., Nov. 12 (4 classes) Kilmarnock, Nov. 19 (5 classes); Uddingston, Nov. 26 (5 classes); Paisley, Jan. 1 and 2 (4 classes); and Glasgow and Dis. C.B.A., Jan 20 and 21 (5 classes). The unsuccessful clubs were: City of Glasgow, Aberdeen, and Scottish National, these three failing to comply with the conditions. The prizes having been distributed to the successful winners at first feather show, the meeting terminated with a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman. I will thank all intending members to send on their 2s. 6d. subscription as soon as possible, to insure their names being inserted in this year's list of members.—FRED BOWMAN, Hon. Sec.

HULL C.B.S.

There was a good attendance at the September meeting, when a "wild seed and berry competition" was down for decision, with Mr. Geo. W. Oliver as judge. There were, unfortunately, only two competitors—Messrs. F. F. Potter and B. Stones—for the silver medal offered by the judge for the best selection on view. Mr. Oliver had a very hard task, both competitors' lots being grand selections. After going carefully over same, Mr. Oliver awarded the medal to Mr. Stones, and at the same time remarked that Mr. Potter's collection was so good that he would award him a monetary prize for second place. At the October meeting a washing competition will be held (open to all novice members who are competing for the novice points cup), for a gold centre medal, given by Mr. F. F. Howe; this was on view. Judges, Messrs. Harland and Calam. Previous to this competition, Mr. D. Longhorn will give a washing exhibition, when it is hoped a good muster of champion and novice members, accompanied by their friends, will turn up.—ERNEST R. RIDLEY, Hon. Sec.

SCOTTISH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

Committee meeting, held in Good Templars' Hall, 122, Ingram Street, Glasgow, on September 3rd, Mr. J. Smeaton (president) in the chair. Others present: Messrs. R. B. Jarvie, J. Ferguson, J. Young, and secretary. Letters were read from two members protesting against the policy of club medals being granted to 10-mile radius shows, but as the members attending the annual general meeting had decided on this course, with the object of spreading the interest in the Norwich Plainhead, and at the same time strengthening the club, the Chairman pointed out that the committee could not do otherwise than carry out their instructions, so far as funds would permit. Applications for club patronage were forwarded from thirteen societies holding open shows and from three members' shows; after due consideration it was decided to grant same to the following: Broughty Ferry, October 8th (Mr. J. Smeaton, judge); Brechin, November 5th (Mr. J. Smeaton); Kilmarnock, November 19th (Mr. J. Smeaton); Hawick, December 3rd (Mr. J. McLay); Aberdeen, December 10th and 17th (Mr. W. B. Mackie); Scottish National, December 31st and January 1st (Messrs J. Ferguson and J. Holmes); Glasgow and Dis., January 20th and 21st (Mr. A. Chalmers); Musselburgh and Falkirk Club Shows were also granted the patronage. It was decided to hold the club show at Kilmarnock this year on November 19th, as it had been held in the other divisions for the past two years; and that the club's silver medal be offered for competition amongst novice members at this event. The following were admitted to membership: Messrs. F. H. Stanford (Inverness), Miller and Eadie (Grangemouth); J. Yeats, jun. (Fraserburgh), J. Taylor (Brechin), Miller and Alcorn (Leith), S. Wilson (Banchory), R. Wilson and J. Mackie (Edinburgh), T. Morrison (Burnbank), J. Barr (Prestonpans), T. Simpson (Grahamston), R. Boag (Coatbridge), and W. Blacklock (Airdrie). Will those members who have not renewed their subscriptions kindly note that they should be clear before the opening of the show season, which is very near at hand now? I also desire to remind all members of the existence of the Special Prize Fund, and trust they will not overlook it, so that the prize list for the club show may do credit to the club. Any information will be gladly given by the secretary.—J. BROWN, Sec., 599, Duke Street, Glasgow.

WHAT OTHER MAN

in the trade would make such an offer as I have made for years past, viz., have any of my appliances on approval, test them side by side with similar articles from elsewhere, and if mine or not better value at lower price, smash them up and I will refund the whole of your money. For several years this offer has been made, but never yet has one article been broken up, nor have I ever been told that anything of mine came out of the test second best. This fact alone should prove to you who is the man to supply you with tip-top value at rock-bottom price. Clap nets made from ½-inch mesh, genuine thread netting specially knitted for bird netting, 3 yards long, 5½ feet deep, 4 feet fly, 4/- pair; ditto, 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. Please note, these clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, each net guaranteed full measurement as stated, and are fitted up with staves, poles, pegs, hemp lines, and everything complete ready for immediate use; sparrow nets, fitted complete on 15 feet bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto, on 17 feet poles, 6/-; ditto on 19 feet poles, 6/6; Lark nets, 15 yards by 10 feet, 12/-; 18 yards, 15/-; 20 yards, 17/-; 25 yards, 21/-; 30 yards, 24/-; lined and geared ready for use. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, free from snarl or stretch, and strong as boat lines, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free. Loose netting, same as used in above clap nets, ½-inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard, post free. This netting must not be confused with the thick American cotton netting, which is often sold for bird netting; mine is made from 60s. 3-ply thread, is very fine but strong, and does not show on the ground. Lark netting, 1½-inch mesh, 10 feet deep, 4d. yard, post free. The original Japanese birdlime, guaranteed strongest lime made, will hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, does not run in sun, will hold even in the rain, and leaves the feathers clean in all cases, ½-lb., 6d., ½-lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample 3d., all post free. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/-; ditto, 18 inches long, 9d. each. These net traps are by far the largest and most effective traps on the market. They can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time, call bird can be used inside them if desired, and will catch and hold uninjured any bird from Wren to Rook. Cannot get out of order, and so simple that any child can set them. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Round or square-topped call cages, all wire tops and wood bottoms, close wired, colonred green, and made by cage-makers, not navvies, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. Store cages and everything reqnired by catchers always in stock. Send stamp for printed price list and hints on net making. All nets thoroughly tested before sent out, and sent on approval on the distinct understanding that you get all your money back if not perfectly satisfactory in every way. All goods are of same sterling quality as before, as I have not sacrificed quality for price. Remember that a useless pair of nets are dear at any price, but a good pair will catch their cost in an hour or so. See following letters and then judge for yourself:—"20, Williamstreet, Witham Green, Boston, September 6th.—Sir,—Please send pair nets as follows. Two year ago I had a pair from ———, which were supposed to be rot-proof, but now they are completely rotten.—Yours, H. French." "Press Wood, nr. Whitechurch, September 5th.—Sir,—Please send following. I was very pleased with your netting; it has made a good pair nets.—Yours, S. Gibbons." "2, Luke-street, Burslem.—Sir,—I am highly satisfied with clap nets and drinkers, so now please send following.—Yours, J. Dean." "53, Liverpool-road, South Birkdale.—Sir,—Please send lb. lime. That I had from you last year was best I ever had. I have some from ———, but it is no use; I have missed over 70 in four days with it.—Yours, R. Makinson." "Mount Pleasant, Newburgh, Fife.—Sir,—I am again sending for bird-lime from you. I have got it the last three years, and it is best I ever had; no bother taking the birds off the twigs.—Yours, J. Panton." "56a, Napierston-terrace, Jamestown.—Sir,—Please send following goods. I had three net traps some time ago from elsewhere, but they are useless.—Yours, E. Bridgman." "Jessop-street, Codnor.—Sir,—Please send following. The last nets I had from you worked a treat, and come over like a flash of lightning. Just the thing for shnrp birds.—Yours, P. Watson." Send your orders to the man who knows what is required for successful catching, and you will not be disappointed. I supply the leading professional catchers throughout the world. These are men who get their living by catching, and must have best appliances; so surely if I can satisfy them I can satisfy you. Remember, all on approval, cash or "Cage Birds" deposit system. See British Bird column for further advertisement.

DOG & PUPPY CAKES?

Wholesale of

R. Hyde & Co., Ltd., Camberwell

that has proved "tip-top" for rearing Canaries and Hybrids, is one of the finest things you can add instead of eggs, to three times its bulk of biscuit meal or cage-bird food, as a base for colour feeding. It not only improves the feather, but insures getting the full amount of colour out of a good pepper. Sold by all Corn and Bird Shops, in 3d., 6d. and 1/- tins. Have you seen or tried as a soft diet for Canaries and other birds? It strengthens and give stamina, and for growing stock and when colour feeding, saves any amount of trouble, in 3d., 6d. and 1/- tins, and in 7 lb. bags, 3/3.

Bear these things in mind NOW.

TROWER'S COLOUR FOOD

is a good one, and only requires damping for use; made with Finest Tasteless Pepper; requires no additions, and gives excellent results. Of all Corn and Bird Shops, in 3d., 6d. and 1/- tins, or direct from us.

EVERYONE

is welcome to call and inspect my stock of British birds; no one barred. I defy any other dealer in Cheshire to supply you with the real Cheshire birds, also for size, colour, and markings they outstand all other Linnets for show or contest singing, 1/6, 2/6, 3/6; a few used for catching, sure steppers, 2/6; real Cheshire Peartree Goldfinches, not foreign rubbish, fit for any show bench, 2/6, 3/6, 4/6; large giant Greenfinches and Redpolls, for show, 1/-, 1/6; Chaffinches and Yellowhammers, lnrge giants, for show, like oil paintings, 1/-, 2/-, 3/-; Thrushes and Blackbirds, on full song, 2/-, 3/-; Larks, on full wild song, 1/6, 2/6; hand-reared Larks, eat from fluger, 3/-, 4/-; new polish cages for Linnets, etc., 1/-. I am the largest dealer in the world for Cheshire birds; they are not bought out of other counties and sold as Cheshire, neither are they picked out of a common dozen. So don't be gulled by so-called bird specialists, etc. All birds from me are caged off a month before sent out; not fresh-caught rubbish. So if you want honest dealing and good birds, place your orders with me. Hundreds in stock; not a common dozen. All birds sent out on seven days 'approval, cash or "Cage Birds" deposit, at my own risk: J. Kelly, Cheshire Aviaries, Upper Brook-st., Waterloo, Stockport, Cheshire.

struck you that by dealing with me you run no risk whatever of not getting exactly what you want? You see, I guarantee everything I sell to be exactly as represented, and in order to prove this to you I send all on approval, entirely at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or on "Cage Birds" deposit system, and if birds do not realise your every expectation you only have to return them, and back comes the whole of your money promptly and cheerfully. I was first advertiser to send all wild birds on approval, and during the whole 19 years I have been trading have never done business on any other terms. I have an exceptionally large stock of warranted genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, twelve 12/-; specially selected larger cocks, to moult for exhibition or muling, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 17/-; few extra special clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, fit for keenest competition, 3/-, 4/-, and 5/- each; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/-, twelve 7/-; splendid lot cock Bullfinches, 1/6, 2/-, and 2/6 each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- and 1/6 each; grand lot cock brown Linnets, all guaranteed clean moulted and full colour, with nut brown backs and rose red breasts, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for muling and contest singing, and guaranteed now in song, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 7/-; few exquisitely pencilled large show specimens, 1/6, 2/-, and 2/6 each; cock Greenfinches, 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6; yellow exhibition specimens, 1/- each; cock Chaffinches, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; exhibition specimens, 1/- each; Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/6, six 2/-, twelve 3/-; exhibition specimens, 1/ each; splendid lot big, bold, clean moulted cock Skylarks, in perfect feather, 6d. each, three 1/3, six 2/-, twelve 3/6; specially selected cocks, very steady for show or singing, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-; few genuine finger tame, hand-reared 1910 cock Larks, in free song, 3/-, 4/-, and 5/- each; young Canaries, 2/6 couple, 12/- dozen; Goldfinch, Linnet, and Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; Lark runner cages, 6d. and 8d. each, 4/- and 6/- dozen; penny tin drinkers, 6d. dozen, three dozen 1/3, gross 4/-; zinc ditto, everlasting wear, 9d. dozen, three dozen 2/-, 6/- gross. Dealers please send stamp for wholesale cage list; prices and sizes will astonish you. Kindly note, I claim to have more birds through my hands than any other six men in the Midlands, and challenge denial; so persons on the look-out for exhibition specimens cannot do better than place their order with me, and there is one thing they may rely upon, and that is, if I cannot give them a good bird for their money I will not send inferior specimens. Although I do not make a song about it, I supply most of the leading exhibitors of to-day, and have supplied birds that have won at Crystal Palace and every other cage of note. Visitors to Birmingham are requested to call and inspect stock of the various advertisers. They will then see who really holds the birds. As the wording of my advertisements are being copied week by week, I beg to say I have no connection whatever with any other person in the trade, and that my only name and address is—

"Best Bird in Show."

Read following testimonial from—42, Church Road, Holywood, Ireland, September, 1910.—The pair of Yorkshires you sent me last season have bred me some grand show birds. I showed three at our show, and won 1st and special for best in show, also 2nd and 3rd prizes. They have reared 12 fine youngsters, and I am sure your birds cannot be beaten for the price I paid for them. T. Dunwoody to J. Taylor. My Yorkshires are now through the moult, and ready to dispatch at once. Fine racy Yorkshire cocks at 6/6, 7/-, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each. Grand smart hens at 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/6 each. In clears, ticked, marked, and variegated, colour-fed and natural colour. Pairs carefully matched to breed winners, at 6/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- per pair. Exhibition cocks and hens, that can win in keen competition, at very reasonable prices. State wants. Illustrated Price List post free. Easy payment, system: Fanciers who are not in a position to pay cash, should send for full particulars of my "Original" easy payment system, post free. Birds sent off at once on receiving first payment. All on 7 days' approval, at my risk. Only and old address. Travelling cages, 3d. extra.

J. TAYLOR,
36, Airevi'le Road,
Frizinghall, Bradford.

Now Ready.

Long, slim, high-class, clean-moulted Yorkshires, which, for price with quality combined, cannot be equalled elsewhere; have on approval and test the fact. Beware of the so-called Yorkshire cocks offered at 3/6, etc. I say they are not Yorkshire cocks, and challenge denial. My prices for the genuine article—with sex guarantee—is: Pairs, 7/6, 8/6, 10/0 upwards; cocks, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 upwards; hens, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6, 6/- upwards; travelling cages, 3d. extra.

"THE Stock Book," our invaluable "Breeding Room Register," by G. E. Weston. A well-known fancier has said of it:—"It makes bird breeding easy." It simplifies the operations in the bird-room, and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred; it contains both pedigree, breeding, young bird and show registers of simple and unique character, post free, 7d. from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

"HOUSE'S Canary Manual," by C. A. House, includes, among other interesting features, a chapter on the Roller Canary, and is entirely up-to-date. It contains information on feeding, rearing, diseases, etc., and a chapter with a model illustration is devoted to every known variety of Canary. Illustrated by Mr. H. Norman. Every bird depicted is a veritable model, and shows the breeder what to aim for; post free, 1/2; cloth bound, 2/2: From CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Guaranteed Best Value IN CANARIES in England to-day.

1910 NORWICH COCKS.—Singing, and will make champions, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; now, to prove this, I offer to give six months' approval with these birds—i.e., to refund money in full or exchange same for a cock on full song. All other birds usual approval terms, as follows: 4/6, and 5/6 upwards. Hens, 2/-, 2/6, and 3/6 each. Pairs, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 6/6, all bearing my stamp as a guarantee of sex, and any bird proving not to be a cock bearing such stamp is exchanged, the lapse of time being no object. Hence, here is a security never offered by anyone else, and a safeguard against the now well-known "hen trick"—i.e., the tempting priced, so-called singing cocks, whether named Norwich, Hartz Rollers, or Yorkshires, it is all the same.

YORKSHIRES.—Cocks, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Pairs, 7/6, 6/6, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6. Hens, 2/6, 3/6, 4/6. Travelling Cages, 3d. extra.

For Crests, Crest-breds, Lizards, Cinnamons, Border Fancies, Scotch Fancies, Light Mules, Hybrids, etc., send for free list.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lend and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

Twitterings.

Kindly note my new address, which is 14 Hamilton Road, Stoke, Coventry, writes Mr. W. H. Bray, hon. sec. of the Coventry Godiva C.B.S.

Councillor T. C. Wild is giving a handsome china tea set for best bird in show at Longton, write Messrs. Hallam and Lovatt, hon. secs. of the Longton and Dist. C.B.S.

In my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS of September 10, under "Appliances," writes Mr. W. A. Gore (Birmingham), a printer's error occurs; "18-yard nets for 4s. per pair" should read "3-yard nets."

The tenth annual show of the Dublin C.B., etc., Association will be held on October 27 and 28, when Mr. R. Halliday will judge the cage birds, writes Mr. J. Gibson, the sec. There will be 47 classes for cage birds and many specials.

"Straight 'Un" writes:—The shows are close upon us. In another fortnight Bradford City open the list of Yorkshire Union fixtures. Then we go through fifteen shows, finishing up at Skelmanthorpe on January 21st. As far as can at present be ascertained, the show season promises well. The birds are well advanced in the moult, and a good number should be ready in time for the first show, though, of course, many say that no birds are really ready until the end of October. But to show some before that time will do them no harm, providing they are not put through the wash too early.

Yorkshire C.C. of Ireland.

Allow me to inform the members of the Y.C.C. of Ireland that a special general meeting will be held on September 22, at 5, South Anne Street, at 8 o'clock. All members are requested to attend, as the business to be transacted is most important. I cannot find time to notify each individual member, so I hope every member will see this notice and attend.—J. R. HYLAND, hon. sec.

We are joining the Cage Bird Union, writes Mr. H. W. Jones, hon. sec. of the Eccles and Dis. C.B.S. show, to be held Nov. 11th and 12th.

The season here has finished up well, all the breeders having had a good share of success, writes Mr. J. W. Bruce (Coldstream, N.B.).

Entries for our show close on Tuesday, Sept. 27th (or Wednesday morning's post), writes Mr. R. Towler, Sec. of the Burnley C.B.S. We shall be sending schedules out this next week.

I have removed from Church Street, Godley, Hyde, to 100, Back Lane, Hyde, writes Mr. W. Wrigley. Will secretaries and friends please note?

We have engaged Messrs. W. Vardy and J. H. Roo to judge at our annual show on Nov. 18th and 19th, writes Mr. R. Taylor, Hon. Sec. of the Preston O.S.

The Lancaster Primrose C.B.A. entries for show on September 23rd and 24th finally close first post September 20th, writes Mr. J. H. Nayler, the hon. sec.

We have elected Messrs. W. Mundell and W. Vardy to judge our show on December 10th, writes Mr. C. H. Naylor, Hon. Sec. of the Chesterfield and Dis. C.B.S.

The members of the Ashton-under-Lyne and Dis. O.S. will have an outing to Sale on Sunday, September 18th, when the party will probably be conducted by Mr. J. Irlam, of Sale. The car leaves Chester Square at two o'clock.—H. Foden, Hon. Sec.

Owing to the death of my son, and as I am shortly removing, I am compelled to part with my stud of Borders, including some winners at last season's shows, birds fit for keenest competition, writes Mr. F. Moore (Clapham Junction, London, S.W.).

The judges appointed for our show on Dec. 17th, writes Mr. Wm. Dodds, Hon. Sec. of the Bowhill O.S., are: Messrs. D. Law (Dundee) for the Scotch Fancies; W. Hamilton (Brechin) for the Border Fancies and Norwich; and Jas. Mackie (Markinch) for the British birds.

I have resigned the position of secretary to the Nelson and Dis. C.B.S., as I am going abroad, writes Mr. R. Riley. All further communications intended for the Society must be made to Mr. J. Gregson, 20, Leonard Street, Nelson, who has been elected secretary in my place.

Launceston cage bird show is to be held on November 29th under Cage Bird Union rules, writes Mr. N. H. Reed, the Hon. Sec. No doubt every exhibitor at the last show will increase his entries at this. There is every accommodation at the Grand Hall, which is free from draughts. Prizes will be paid out within seven days.

Kindly announce my resignation as secretary of the Wibsey and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. E. W. Johnson. The new secretary is Mr. H. C. Crossley, 215, High Street, Wibsey, who is a very enthusiastic fancier. I hope all the members of the Society will rally round him, and make the Society as successful in the future as it has been in the past.

We have been granted the patronage of the Norwich P.C., the Green C.A., the English and Welsh B.F.C.C., the Midland Counties Yorkshire C.C., and the Cinnamon C.C., write Messrs Hancocks and Heaton, secs. of the Crewe O.S.; and we only want the support of fanciers to make ours one of the best in the country. We are giving 22s. per class prize money.

The Kent County C.B.A. are patronising the following societies' shows during the forthcoming show season, writes Mr. Geo. Sanderson, the Hon. Sec., viz., Folkestone, Dover Fur and Feather, Canterbury, and Plumstead. In order to prevent any misunderstanding, may I mention that the Rochester schedule announces that their show is being held under our patronage, which is an error.

At our next meeting on September 19th, writes Mr. J. Lewis, Hon. Sec. of the Spen Valley C.B.S., we are having a table show of A.V. Yellow and Buff Yorkshires. Mr. F. Allen (Cleckheaton) is to officiate as judge. Messrs. Wharton and B. Wood will give a special for first and second most points. Afterwards, there is to be a discussion on the merits of the birds. Birds to be staged at 8 o'clock.

To commemorate the Coronation of H.M. King George V., which takes place next year, Messrs. Spratt's Patent, Ltd., the well-known manufacturers of foods for cage birds, dogs, poultry, and other domestic pets, have decided to offer three gold cups, valued 100, 50, and 25 guineas respectively, and three silver-gilt cups, valued 15, 10, and 5 guineas respectively, for the six best puppies regularly fed on Spratt's foods. Full particulars of this interesting competition can be obtained on application to Spratt's Show Dept., 24-25, Fenchurch Street, London, E.C.

Scottish Crest Club Matters.

The Scottish Crest C.C. having decided to hold their annual club show in conjunction with ours at Broxburn, writes Mr. W. McLaren, of the Broxburn and Dist. C.B.S., we have appointed another judge, in the person of Mr. H. Moreland.

A New Thrush.

A new kind of Song Thrush made its appearance in England recently, said Mr. W. Bickerton, F.Z.S., in a lecture at the Royal Photographic Society's exhibition in Pall Mall. It has been introduced successfully from the United States, where it is known as the American Robin. Its song, which has frequently been heard in Surrey this summer, has been interpreted as "Kill or cure them, give them physic." It makes the seventh species of Thrush known in this country and the fifth which nests here.

Amongst the Spangle Backs.

We are holding a meeting in the Weavers' Association Rooms, Glossop, on Sunday, Sept. 18th, writes Mr. J. Rukin, Hon. Sec. of the Lancashire and Lizard F.A. We have to discuss the important part the seceding of one or two of the large societies from the Cage Bird Union will have in regard to granting our patronage this coming season, and it is hoped there will be a large attendance.

A Novice's Result.

I started with a Norwich cock bird and two hens, and I have now 14 young birds, all on seed and moulting nicely. I had 16 birds, but two died; they seemed to sleep all day, and then in about a week died. This is the first time I have bred any birds; and all I know about them I have received from Cage Birds and your "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which I found very handy.—Mr. Harrison (Manchester).

The Yorkshire Canary Club.

The 1910-11 handbook of the Yorkshire Canary Club has just been issued. It contains the rules, bye-laws of the Club, a list of the 1910-11 competitions and specials for same, an illustration of the Club's standard Yorkshire, the scale of points for judging, the 1909-10 balance-sheet (showing a small balance in hand, notwithstanding a deficiency on the previous year's accounts of £3 9s. 3d.), and a list of the members' names and addresses. The sec. is Mr. John Greaves, 279, Hollings Road, Bradford, who will be pleased to forward any information respecting the Club to would-be members.

A BIRDY FREAK.

MANTELL'S APTERYX, OR ROA.

The Mantell's Apteryx, or Roa, is one of four species found principally in New Zealand. It is a shy and solitary bird, and lives primarily upon earthworms, snails, etc. It sleeps during the day-time, and is active at night, although its powers of sight are not great. It can be kept in captivity; it will thrive thus on flesh suitably minced. It has small, functionless wings, but is swift of foot.

[The illustration is from a specimen set up by Mr. Alfred Thomas, the well-known taxidermist, of Gloucester.]

Edinburgh S.M. Show.

In my list of judges for show on Sept. 24th, published in Cage Birds September 3rd, by mistake I put in the name of Mr. J. F. Dewar, of Edinburgh, as Belgian judge, writes Mr. J. R. Meikle, Hon. Sec. of the Scottish Metropolitan Open Derby O.A. The name of the judge is Mr. J. Kean, of Edinburgh. Entry forms have now been sent out; will any member not having received his please communicate with me? Judging begins punctually at 10 a.m.—an extension of one hour from the usual time, made to meet a difficulty some of the members have. Closing date for making entries has been extended from September 15th to 19th. Mr. C. Berwick (St. Andrew's) has kindly presented a fine silver medal with gold face and a neat model of a Scotch Fancy Canary thereon, to be won by the runner-up.

Shocking Slaughter of Birds.

At the National Conservation Congress, at St. Paul, Minnesota, says a daily contemporary, Mr. Frank Chapman, the curator of birds in the American Museum of Natural History, declared that women who insist on wearing birds and plumage on their hats cause enormous destruction to the forests annually. Insects cost the Forestry Department a loss of £20,000,000 every year, and yet birds worked tremendous havoc amongst the insects. A Tanager, he said, is credited with eating moth caterpillars at the rate of 2,100 an hour. A Maryland Yellowthroat was responsible for the disappearance of 3,500 plant lice in forty minutes. Mr. Chapman denounced the fashionable craze that robs the forests of their protectors. When feathers became fashionable, he said, 2,000,000 birds were killed in America in four years, one shipment containing ten tons of wings. Twenty thousand Birds of Paradise are shipped annually, and Herons have almost vanished from American marshes. Venezuela exported 1,538,000 Heron plumes in one year, and these figures did not take into account birds killed but not found, and possibly double the number of young Herons starved in their nests for lack of parental care.

My Budgerigars and Cockatiels.

By KATHERINE WEBB (Cambridge).

Two years ago we were obliged to leave my old country home, and come to live in Cambridge. As I wanted to take up some hobby, I was advised to try birds. The house we took would not allow of a bird room, so I had an outdoor aviary built, and started with two pairs of Green Budgerigars (which are also known as Australian Grass Parrakeets) and a pair of Cockatiels. I was told that they were very hardy specimens, and would stand the winter outside.

Beautiful Little Birds.

The former are very beautiful little birds, their general colouring being bright grass green; the top of the head is primrose yellow; the upper surface of the bird is thickly barred (greyish black), the spaces between the bars being yellow. The female is distinguished from the male by the cere, her's being brown, and the male's blue.

The Cockatiels are not nearly such gaily coloured birds, a sober French grey predominating. The male has a white band commencing at the shoulders and going over the greater coverts. His face and crest are primrose yellow, with two brick red patches on the cheeks. The feet and legs are grey.

The female is even more soberly attired; she has not the yellow cheeks, and the brick red patches are not nearly so bright. The under surface of her tail is barred with white, yellow and black.

The aviary is covered with half-inch wire netting. At one end is a small shelter; at the other and halfway along one side, I put up some old window frames that originally belonged to a greenhouse. The roof is of wire netting, with a wooden cover hinged on so that it can be let up and down.

The Budgerigars gave me no trouble at all. They are very sensible little birds, and soon become exceedingly tame. One of mine will let me do anything with it, even pick it up, and I have had as many as six of them feeding out of my hand at the same time.

The Budgerigars prefer the outside husks of cocoanuts as nesting places, and as they are particular little birds, it is a good thing to let each pair have two nests to choose from, in order to prevent quarrels. They lay from three to seven eggs, but generally five. These are white, like the Cockatiel's, only smaller. The hen only sits, but her mate always feeds her when she is on the nest, and off it too, for the matter of that, during the nesting season.

About three weeks after the eggs were laid I noticed great excitement in the cocoanut husk; the father was very busy sitting on the edge and feeding all the family, the wife as well. He certainly had his work cut out to do it, for, to my joy, there were seven baby beaks to fill. At five weeks old the birds were able to fend for themselves.

There is just one thing I must say Some people say that Budgerigars never drink water, which is a great mistake, as mine, at any rate do, and sometimes they indulge in a bath. It is a very pretty sight to see them running round the edge of the glass dish that I put in the aviary, ducking their little heads in and flicking the water over their backs; in fact, they seem to enjoy it almost as much as the Cockatiels.

All my birds eat millet and canary seed, with a little addition of oats for the Cockatiels, and rice for the Javas (some of which I also keep). They must also be provided with cuttle fish, grit, and green food for the good of their digestion.

A Popular Britisher, The Siskin.

The Siskin is a small bird, about five inches long. The cock has a short bill, rather sharp, tipped, and of an orange brown shade. The poll is black. In good specimens the cock has under each eye a yellow streak or stripe. The sides of the head are yellowish green, the neck and wings olive green, occasionally streaked with black. The tail should be forked a little and of a dusky black colour. The bib under the chin is a good black. The throat and breast are green, or, in some cases, a yellow green. The legs and toes are of a brownish colour.

The hen bird in most cases has not the black poll and chin, and is not of such a green plumage as the cock, being of a more sombre and dusky colour.

A Justly Popular Bird.

The Siskin is a justly popular bird among British bird fanciers. His charming ways, his tameness, which comes so soon after his capture, and last, but not least, his pretty green garb, all tend to win him a place in the heart of every fancier. I think it is safe to say that a healthy specimen is never still for a moment, except when feeding. Siskins are the very life of the bird-room, in most cases; that is, when they are properly fed.

A good cock Siskin is much valued by Mule breeders, being easily crossed with a hen Canary, and there are now many Siskin-Canary Mules on the show bench. Although I have never tried it, I should say that the cross is not hard to obtain, the Siskin being a bird of a most friendly disposition, readily "palling up" with most birds.

The Siskin, in my own estimation, is not much of a songster, a sort of chattering song being his principal one. With this he seems highly delighted. But some people regard his song as a melodious one, which it is a treat to hear.

I find that a Siskin does very well on most mixtures sold in packets put up for British Finches. He is especially fond, as are most birds, of hemp and teazle.

Sociable and Tame.

Siskins in a wild state are not very hard to trap. They are sometimes found flying with Redpolls, which, I think, again points to the sociable disposition of the bird. I caught one last year, which was as yellow as a Canary. My trap cage was hanging on the side of the house, and was sprung. I saw the bird come down, and heard my Siskin going nearly mad with excitement. I went out and set the trap, and the bird flew away. It was not long, however, before he was back. He flew on to the house, and then down into the trap cage. No sooner had I put him in a box cage than he turned round and commenced feeding. I think he must have been caught before owing to his extreme tameness.

The Siskin is a very good bird for an amateur, as it is not a very expensive one to buy (unless you are going in for a show specimen); and when bought, if it is a good one, it gives you plenty of value for the money spent. The best cage to keep a Siskin in is a roomy box cage, with plenty of light. The perches should be fairly far apart, as there is nothing the little chap likes so much as hopping from perch to perch.

A Tip.

One tip I will give—take care that the seed holes are not too large, because whilst you are filling or cleaning out the glasses, the bird may take the first opportunity to slip out. The Siskin caged is usually a mischievous fellow. One that I had hung in an all-wire cage for a few days turned his attention to pulling to pieces the sheet of newspaper I had hung on the wall behind the cage. As far as he could reach it he tore it away, and scattered it over the floor. After this he was consigned to a box cage, where he could not display his talents in this way.

With regard to giving fruit to Siskins, although some people advise it, I am myself rather averse to the use of it. A Siskin, I may add, likes most of what are termed "fancy seeds," such as niger, teazle, gold of pleasure, and sunflower; in fact, I think the old adage applies in regard to this most charming of our winter visitors:—"Everything's grist that comes to his mill."

Unfertile Canary Eggs: How to Avoid Them.

C. A. HOUSE.

During the past season many fanciers have had reason to complain of the non-fertility of the eggs which their Canaries have laid, also of many young dead in shell, and eggs addled. So bad, indeed, have the results been in some bird-rooms, that there is not a single youngster to show for the whole season's breeding.

This may by some be considered a question for the breeding season, and in great measure it is, but from long experience we know that the autumn and winter treatment of the stock has much to do with success or failure in the following breeding season.

The Curse of Late Breeding.

One very fruitful cause of non-fertility, addled eggs, and young dead in shell is late breeding. Fanciers instead of stopping breeding operations in July allow their birds to go on nesting into August, and sometimes late September. A little quiet thought will convince the most inexperienced fancier that this is wrong. It is against Nature and it is against common sense. It is burning the candle at both ends, and failure, sooner or later, must result. Late hatched birds never moult properly, owing to the fact that the cold damp days of autumn and winter are not conducive to the growing of the coat. Then the same remarks apply to the old birds. They have been breeding late and their moulting is delayed, consequently the drain on their system is more than they can support. They become enfeebled, moult slowly, and when the next breeding season comes round are quite unfit for its work. The late bred youngsters, in addition to moulting badly, are not matured enough by the early months of spring to fulfil their part in the reproduction of their race; thus, when they are paired up disappointment is the result.

When to Select Stock for Breeding.

Now is the time when fanciers who wish to have good breeding results next season should either purchase the birds they intend breeding with, or, if they already have a stud should select from the early rounds. No bird should be placed in the breeding cage until it is nine months old, and this fact should ever be borne in mind. Thus birds which are to be paired up at the beginning of next March should not have been hatched later than the month of June in this year.

Winter Treatment.

During the winter all birds intended for breeding should be fed sparingly. By this we don't mean they should be half starved, but that their diet should be hard and plain, so that their bodies may put on flesh and not fat. Birds fed generously upon egg food and other dainties during the winter become full of fat, their generative organs are enfeebled, and when the time comes for them to reproduce their kind, they are unable to do so.

To secure the best results in the breeding room the stock through the winter should be fed on canary seed as a staple article of diet; occasionally a little hemp or inga may be given if the weather is very cold, but not more often than once a week, and then only about half-a-teaspoonful for each bird; green food of some kind should be given them two or three times a week, but be careful that it is not frosty. For winter green food, a bit of cabbage is as good as anything, and can be easily obtained from the usual household supply. Exercise is most essential to birds which are to be bred with. Exercise strengthens the lungs, develops the muscles, clears the blood, tones the nervous system, and keeps birds in the pink of health and condition. The great and all-important necessities of breeding stock during the winter are: plain food, exercise, fresh air, pure fresh water for drinking and bathing, plenty of grit, and a little green food.

Two good pairs of Belgian Canaries of a pure strain, unrelated, large, and of the proper qualities, would, in the hands of a keen fancier, form an excellent foundation, and favoured by success, he should find them a profitable investment. It is not every one who has the time and the opportunity, but to one who has, it would really be worth his while to build up and establish weight of top, and depth throughout the chest; and he would confer a lasting benefit on the Scotch Fancy generally by it.

Essential Properties.

Both the properties mentioned are essential, and to be maintained have to be bred into the birds every second year or so.

A modern Scotch Fancy Canary must have prominent shoulders, and possess good depth of chest. These qualities can only come from the Belgian Canary. It is well known that the decline in the Belgian Canary Fancy has seriously affected the breeding of typical Scotch Fancy Canaries; in fact, this is responsible for the decline in the interest taken in the "King" of cage birds.

Many breeders, in consequence of the difficulty of buying the right stamp of Belgian, have abandoned the Scotch Fancy Canary and have taken to the Border Fancy Canary chiefly because that bird is cheap, and as a rule can be easily reared. But experience has revealed the fact that while the Border Fancy Canary breeds freely, and the yield at the end of the season is numerically strong, for the average bird very little money can be got. In one instance the Border Fancy Canaries only fetched 3s. per pair, or just about what can be got for a common feeding hen Canary at the commencement of the breeding season. A really first-class Belgian Canary, on the other hand, will fetch ten pounds and upwards; and a winning Scotch Fancy Canary will easily command twelve or fifteen pounds. There is thus a wide difference in the respective values of Scotch Fancy and Belgian Canaries and Border Fancy Canaries. I am not seeking to undervalue the Border Fancy Canary, but merely put on record the relative prices of the varieties.

A lot of small birds take up, say, an hour or an hour and a half of one's time every morning, which is a severe tax upon a fancier who has to face a strenuous day's work. But a few pairs of class Canaries are not such a severe strain. Where time and labour are concerned, it is apparent that it is a great advantage for the average breeder to confine his attentions to the breeding of the valuable bird, namely, the Scotch Fancy Canary, or the Belgian Canary.

The financial return is worthy of consideration, too, and should never be lost sight of.

But there are few pleasures to be compared with the satisfaction of breeding a few really first-class Scotch Fancy Canaries, which is the chief consideration. Genuine breeders will travel a long distance to see a fine collection; and few sights are more inspiring than a group of keen fanciers handling and admiring Scotch Fancy Canaries in a comfortable bird-room, each as eager and as enthusiastic as the other.

Visitors and Their Value.

The fancier who has good quality in his Scotch Fancies and Belgians, need not trouble himself about handling young birds in order to train them for the show bench. He gets that done for him by the visitors. And it not only saves him the trouble, but it is a more effective way of preparing the birds for the exhibiting they are to go through. Birds that are used to strangers putting them "through their facings" do not start and flutter when they are at a show.

One of the finest Scotch Fancy Canaries that ever stood on a perch did not obtain a mention on the first occasion he was exhibited—simply because he would not settle down and show himself in the same way as his fellow competitors that had probably been trained unawares by visitors to their aviaries.

A breeder who has the reputation of breeding winning birds is rarely without visitors. They come uninvited. They are often on the look-out for stock. Those who wish for stock out of a good aviary have to "speak early," and even then it is sometimes impossible for them to succeed in purchasing what they want.

Getting a Reliable Strain.

It is an advantage to get hold of a reliable strain, and the breeder who would be successful, should visit rooms where he is likely to get something that will help him during the breeding season. He should keep his eyes open, and watch the progress of the birds through the various stages; and then speak for the bird (or birds) that has the appearance of meeting his requirements.

When is the best time to purchase, is a matter that has to be left to the wisdom of the buyer, as opportunity offers. The best of the Scotch Fancies are generally secured or spoken for by the month of October.

The Belgian Canaries used to be gathered together by dealers, who visited Antwerp, etc., but of late it has been found impossible to get the class of bird that will please Scotch breeders. They are difficult to please in the choice of Belgians. But put the proper type before them, and they will not hesitate to give a handsome sum for it. In other words, when the occasion arises, Scotch breeders will do almost anything to effect the required improvement in their stock, especially in the direction of the Belgian, cost being a secondary consideration.

True, some breeders give up keeping both Belgian and Scotch Fancy Canaries, mainly because of want of success, and others, by reason of prices, are slow to enter the arena; but anyone taking up the Fancy will have much satisfaction in the breeding of Belgian and Scotch Fancy Canaries. For gracefulness of movement these birds are unsurpassed among cage birds.

The Show Season Starts.

An Avalanche of Fixtures. Prospects for the Shows are Bright.

An exceedingly busy year lies before the cage bird Fancy. The number of open shows to be held this season promises to exceed all previous totals, notwithstanding the fact that a number of English bird shows previously open to the general public are to be confined to the exhibits of members.

A glance at our "Show Dates Fixed" columns, page 164, will disclose a very hopeful state of affairs, the number of Scotch open shows being practically double that of the previous year. There is also an increase in the number of Irish open shows, which is significant.

The season may be said to open with the show of the Lancaster Primrose C.B.A., on September 23rd and September 24th. Then follows a rush of fixtures, north, south, east and west.

This improvement in the exhibition horizon follows naturally upon the growth of the cage bird Fancy generally. Since the issue of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1910 in February last no fewer than twenty-two new societies have been inaugurated, the following being a list of same:—Ashley and Dis. C.B.S., Barrington and Choppington C.B.S., Bangor and Dis. C.B.S., Bromsgrove and Dis. C.B.S., Chesterfield and Dis. C.B.S., Cumnock and Dis. C.B.S., Eccles and Dis. C.B.S., Glasgow West End C.B.C., Glasgow and Dis. C.B.A., Halstead and Dis. C.B.S., Heptonstall and Dis. C.B.S., Harwich and Dis. C.B.S., Holmfirth and Dis. C.B.S., Mid-Rhondda and Dis. C.B.S., Northern Counties Norwich and Cinnamon Plainhead Club, Oxford and Dis. C.B.S., Old Cumnock and Dis. C.B.S., Polmont and Dis. C.B.S., Purley and Dis. C.B.S., Pentre and Dis. C.B.S., Parkgate and Dis. C.B.S., and Portsmouth C.B.S.

The 1910 breeding season has, on the whole, despite the inclemency and unseasonableness of the weather, been a very good one. Reports from all quarters are encouraging, and the "tussle for honours" bids fair to be exciting.

The various specialist clubs have been very busy, and for the most part their patronages have been granted. And we note that the number of influential, public-spirited men in all parts of the United Kingdom and Ireland who are giving their support (financial as well as personal) to cage bird exhibitions, is greatly augmented this year.

Many of the larger societies, such as the Manchester and Northern Counties O.S., the Norwich Alliance, and others, have written to us expressing great hopefulness in regard to the coming show season, and their own shows in particular. The Galashiels O.S. are in the proud position of being able to announce their fiftieth annual show (November 19th, 1910); and the "Braw Lads o' Gala Water" are making every effort to ensure an unparalleled success.

The Great Crystal Palace Show will be held as usual on February 3, 4, 6, and 7—not under C.B.U. rules, an innovation that will be watched with intense interest by all concerned in the cage bird fancy.

Altogether, the 1910-11 exhibition season seems likely to eclipse all past ones, and it will undoubtedly mark a great stride in the development and improvement of the cage bird Fancy.

Mr. W. H. Thomas (Llanelly) writes to say that he has been successful in rearing three Redpoll-Goldfinch Hybrids, eight weeks old on September 12th.

The Way to Succeed.

I have had an excellent breeding season, having finished up with 30 Goldfinch Mules, 2 Greenfinch-Canary (1 Cinnamon) Mules, and 45 Canaries—not so bad for my second season. I take in CAGE BIRDS and CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS regularly. I have gained a lot of information by studiously reading the different articles published on Canary and Mule breeding, also by closely following the replies so ably given by your specialists to those who are in trouble and in doubt.—B. J. HARRIS (Cardiff).

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES.

Birds in Outdoor Aviary.

Aspull.—Am not sure whether I have translated signature correctly. There are several important details you have omitted. For instance: Are the birds flying loose or in cages; and have they been bred in this or another outside aviary, or been in this one for any length of time? What size is the aviary, and how many birds are kept in it? The aviary is faultless, and the birds if of a suitably hardy type should thrive well in it, without any heat, which, again, is a point you omit to enlighten me upon. If it is not heated you can only expect birds bred under normal conditions of temperature to succeed in it, and if the birds are flying loose then your dietary may with advantage be more generous. The real cause of the deaths I should suspect was due to the wretchedly unfavourable weather of late, which would also lead one to suppose the stock was not of a sufficiently acclimatised type. Try the effect of giving Canary and rape in separate vessels ad. lib. as staple dict, and three times a week a small quantity of a mixture of one part each hemp, crushed groats, teazle, and millet, and a half part each of linseed, inga, and maw, and on three other days in rotation a little egg-food, crushed sponge or plain biscuit, and bread and milk. Give a little seedy green-food every second day. In the drinking water give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of dilute sulphuric acid in each two tablespoonfuls every second day for a week. See that mice are not robbing the seed-boxes, and starving the birds.

In the Mumps.

J. M.—Your feeding is decidedly faulty, but as a first step towards treatment you should look well into the purity and cleanliness of all your seeds, foods, and all the vessels employed. See the seeds are sound and sweet, especially any hemp, and that the rape is free from minute insects. Keep cage and perches as clean as possible, and the floor of cage well strewn with clean gritty sand. Give no green-food until the looseness is stopped. For staple diet give a mixture of three parts Canary to one of summer rape. In addition, give separately every second day for a fortnight a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, scalded with milk, drained, 2 drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and dusted with soft sugar. On the alternate days give twice each week a pinch of hemp, and twice a week a quarter teaspoonful of maw. Three times a week give a morsel of ripe banana. In the drinking water give 6 drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts for two consecutive days as will cover a sixpence. After this give 4 drops each tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. You do not say how old the bird probably is, only that you have had it a long time, and it is not unlikely its age may be telling upon it in the strain of the approaching moult. If this is not so, the above treatment should make a considerable improvement.

A Troublesome Hen.

Johnson (Cricklewood). Do you wish to colour-feed? If you do, cage her separately. In any case I would advise you to do this until the end of the moult, and keep her in a box cage with a light cover over three parts of the wire front, and keep it in a fairly warm place, out of all draughts and great fluctuations. You should then succeed in getting the bird through a full and complete moult as quickly as possible, once it commences. Allow her in fair weather to bathe freely, provided she does not appear to suffer from chill afterwards. Keep red mites at bay, and strew the cage floor with clean gritty sand through the winter. If you are colour-feeding her, give a staple seed diet of plain Canary during the moult, a half-teaspoonful of summer rape twice a week, and a quarter teaspoonful of maw on each of the remaining days. Towards end of moult give a few grains of linseed or a few broken sunflower seeds three times a week, and a morsel of raw carrot occasionally. If you are not colour-feeding, give a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Every second day give the maw as above, and on the alternate days once a week one of the following extras in the order given: 1, a morsel of bread and milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar; 2, half a teaspoonful of equal parts hemp, millet, teazle, and linseed; 3, similar quality of crushed stale sponge cake, or plain dry biscuit. A little green food three times a week. Towards end of moult add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water four times a week, and continue for two months. When moulting is quite over place her in the aviary and feed on plain canary as staple. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet, once a week a similar quantity of one or other of the above soft foods, and twice a week a little sweet apple, banana, or boiled or raw carrot. If necessary, to keep bowels free, add a pinch of sulphate of soda to drinking water occasionally.

Young Dying Off.

G. A. Green.—I cannot gather when or how or in what numbers the young die off, nor anything that is of much use regarding your general management. Therefore, I can only advise you on general lines; if, after trying the treatment suggested, there is not a good improvement, you must write again, give full particulars about the birds, and state where and how they are kept, fed, and treated. If they are still dying off in succession, you cannot do better than send a body to our post mortem examiner to ascertain the real cause, and, meantime, isolate all healthy birds and thoroughly disinfect all cages and appliances. Get the nutshell booklet on "Disinfection," post free, 2½d., from our manager, to see how to do this efficiently. Keep cages and perches thoroughly clean, and well supplied with clean, gritty sand. See all foods, seeds, and also vessels, are thoroughly fresh, clean, and sweet, and that no red mite are about. Keep the birds quite free from draughts, but allow plenty of fresh pure air. Feed on a staple of two parts Canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, linseed, millet, and teazle, twice a week. Every day for a week give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and a pinch of maw seed. Give a few seed stalks of plantain and shepherd's purse three times a week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and in the following week three drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of columba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day.

Birds Dying in Aviary.

G.W.—You omit to say whether your breeding stock consists of birds you bred last year, and are related. If so, it is probable they are of a rather delicate constitution, and unable to withstand the late climatic changes in combination with the strain of the approaching moult. See the sleeping quarters of aviary are well ventilated, and do not get close and stuffy during the night; there must be no cold draughts. Give canary and summer rape in separate vessels ad lib. Every second day for a week give the equivalent of half a teaspoonful of bread and milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion in it for each bird, and dust the bulk over with soft sugar. On the alternate days allow a quarter teaspoonful of maw per bird. Twice a week give a little mixture of equal parts hemp, black rape, teazle, linseed, and millet, and on two other days a few half ripe plantain stalks, seed heads of shepherd's purse, or seedy chickweed. Do not give succulent green stuff liberally, especially in cold wet weather. After the first week stop the bread and milk and substitute a small teaspoonful of egg food, crushed plain biscuit, or sponge cake, twice a week, but continue the other part of above dietary. In each tablespoonful of water for drinking mix 6 drops syrup of buckthorn and as much Epsom salts for one day as will cover a threepenny-piece, and afterwards 3 drops tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, ever second day for a week. Concerning red mites, see reply to "Inquirer."

Brevities.

A Weed (A "Cage Birds" Reader).—The specimen is, I believe, a seed stalk of nipple-wart, though to identify anything of this kind with certainty requires a much better specimen than you sent, including foliage, and, whenever possible, blossom as well as seed heads. So far as my experience goes, it is of no use for feeding birds. Some British seedeaters may pick it over, but I never troubled to offer it them, as the seed always appears to me too much husk and too little kernel. You should get "Seed, Foods, and Wild Plants for Cage Birds," 1/2 post free, from our Manager, to help you to discover the useful wild seeds to gather.

A Husky Voice (Anxious).—I do not think you have anything at all to worry about. Even with the finest singers it is quite the usual thing for the voice to sound very husky and choppy when first starting to renew the song after moulting. Take proper care the bird is not exposed to any cold draught, or impure air, or extreme variations of temperature—the two latter are almost as destructive to the voice of high-class songsters as actual draughts. If the voice does not soon clear up, stick a small scrap of fat boiled bacon in the wires for a few days, for it to peck at, and in two tablespoonfuls of its drinking water dissolve half a chlorate of potash lozenge, and add 10 drops each of glycerine and lemon juice.

Points About Colour Feeding (A.B.C., Leicester).—The chances are greatly in favour of the plumage of the head coming out hotter, if, as you say, you gradually bring the birds on to full strength of colour food, and keep them on full strength until fine in plumage again. To prevent this, keep a watch on the birds, and when you see the upper part of neck and head getting very bare, begin to reduce the strength of the colour gradually, until, by the time the new quills on the head show well through, you have them on colour food of about one-half the full strength, and finish off on this. Of course, all birds will not arrive at this stage at the same time, so you cannot reduce the colour simultaneously for all and can only keep your eye on them and act accordingly at the proper time. When some of the birds get to the stage when the strength of colour should be reduced, make up the usual colour food in full strength, but rather smaller quantity each day; supply all that are on full strength; then add an equal bulk of crushed biscuit to what is left, mix up well, and give this to those that are on half-strength, or nearly so. You will not need to dilute the overplus quite one-half the first few days, but this will give you the idea how to simplify matters, and serve all correctly with the least amount of trouble.

Seed Samples ("Seeds," Barrow-in-Furness).—No. 1 Canary, is very variable in size, and mostly rather small, but is fairly plump, and of very nice quality. No. 2 Canary, is small and rather thin, and none too well ripened. It is quite sweet and sound, and therefore good enough for use. The husk of No. 1 seems a little damaged, and if the bulk presents the same appearance, I should suspect mice were paying it attention. If the latter is not the case, I should prefer No. 1 sample for use. As to its nationality, I never presume to judge of this by merely looking at the seed. Providing the seed is good, sweet, and sound, it does not matter a jot where it is grown. Much of the so-called Spanish canary was never on Spanish soil. The sample of rape is an excellent all-round sample of summer rape, in prime condition for use.

How Long (M.H.).—Probably not less than eight weeks, under favourable conditions, and in ordinary cases 10 to 12 weeks from the beginning to end of the moult. Individual feathers will be found to require not less than a month to reach their full length, and are about another fortnight before the feathers can be called dry and mature in quill. Therefore, to be quite on the safe side, the bird should continue to be treated as a moulting bird, particularly when colour food is supplied, for at least a month after it has ceased to drop feathers. In the latter case, to drop the colour food soon after the birds cease dropping feathers, under the impression that it has finished moulting, is simply courting failure, in the ultimate appearance of patchy or washed-out-looking birds.

Finishing Moulting ("Ben Hur").—There is nothing to be gained one of a rusty old nail in the bird's water if, as you ought to do, you change its water daily. This old "bogey" ought to be now quite exploded. When you want to give iron, as good a form as any, and better than most, is to add a dusting of saccharated carbonate of iron to the soft food three times a week, and add a sprinkling of maw seed, as many birds do not eat the food so freely thus prepared. If you still find they do not take this form readily when maw seed is added, dissolve a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a split pea in the drinking water three times a week. This may possibly cause a little constipation, in which case give a little extra green food, and add 10 drops of glycerine to the water when the iron is given. To tone up the system generally after moulting give 20 drops of chemical food in the water four times a week for a month or so.

Growth on Beak (Devonport).—First alter the bird's diet. Reserve the mixed packet seed as a luxury, of which give a small teaspoonful only twice a week. As a staple food give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and a free supply of green food every second day. Do not, however, give rank succulent greenstuff, but such things as half ripe plantain stalks, seed heads of shepherd's purse, seedy sprays of chickweed, and heads of young groundsel. Allow bird to bathe freely, and give in the drinking water 6 drops of dandelion juice and as much Epsom salts, every second day for a week, as will cover a sixpence. If the growth feels soft and pappy, bathe it for a minute or two with fairly warm water, by holding a pledget of cotton wool saturated with the water on it, and dipping wool in water from time to time to keep it warm. Then prick growth with a clean needle, and gently press out contents. Bathe it again, and dry; then paint it with Friar's Balsam, and renew the painting each day for several days. If the substance is hard and more solid, paint it three times a week for a fortnight with tincture of iodine.

Red-Mites in Outdoor Aviary ("Inquirer").—It is possible for red-mites, if in any considerable numbers, to affect birds by sapping their strength, and rendering them susceptible to disease, or unhealthy influences. In your case you would most likely discover them about the ends of perches, any roughened surface of the woodwork, cracks, or crevices, and in and behind the nest-boxes, or any other things hanging on the walls. By the way, all nests and nest-boxes should have been removed and destroyed before now. To thoroughly eradicate the mites, remove birds for a short time; then well wash over the walls with a strong lot of soap suds, in which you have well mixed half a pint of paraffin, and two tablespoonfuls of carbolic fluid to each gallon. Apply with a distemper brush, and keep solution well stirred whilst using. Two days later repeat the application, and the following day re-distemper, if necessary. Well scrub the perches with the above solution in double strength, and wash in pure water before putting them in use again. Whilst the above operations are in progress, keep windows, ventilators, and doors open permanently to thoroughly air and dry, and clear out the damp and odour of the wash. As soon as the place is quite dry, and fairly free from odour, the birds may be returned.

Prudent Foresight ("Harrison," Manchester).—It is wise to endeavour to be prepared with a suitable remedy. But you have, unfortunately, omitted practically all details which would have helped me to form some opinion of the former losses. I do not even know whether they died soon after leaving the parents, or just recently. In these circumstances, arm yourself with our Nutshell booklets on "The Canary" and "Ailing Cage Birds," post free 2½d. each, from our Manager. Meantime if the other birds are still keeping well, you have no need to worry. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day during the moult give a quarter teaspoonful of maw, and on the alternate days a half-teaspoonful of egg food per bird, or as a variant, an equivalent quantity of bread and milk, or crushed sponge cake if you are not colour feeding (some kind of soft food must, of course, be given daily if you are colour feeding); and twice a week give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, teazle, and linseed. A little green food may be given three times a week. If any show signs of drooping, give a pinch of sulphate of soda in the water for one day, and follow this with 20 drops of chemical food for a few days.

An Albino's Tail.

Collier Lad.—You will have to extract the broken tail feathers of the Albino Blackbird if it is a young (1910) bird as, of course, wing flights and tail are not moulted until the second season. You need have no fear of their coming dark instead of, as at present, snowy white. In the case of a real Albino, such as is your Blackbird (i.e., with pink eyes), the plumage once white is always white. There are pink-eyed birds with cinnamon-coloured plumage, and some have grizzled (greyish) feathers; the latter generally get whiter and whiter at each succeeding moult. Thanks for your kind remarks concerning these answers. I hope you will have good fortune with the bird.

In An Aviary.

J. A. A.—As you do not state the size of the aviary, I cannot, of course, gauge its holding capacity. There are several handsome species of Foreign birds which will live and thrive with British seed-eaters and Canaries, and I think a few of them add immeasely to the interest and beauty of small aviaries, either indoors or out. Address a query to Mr. W. T. Page, who looks after the Foreign bird department, and he will give you the names of cheap and suitable kinds. Two or three Goldies and Linnets will agree well with the two Canaries, and you can add Siskins, Redpolls, and Twites, all of which are sprightly birds and free singers, though their music is not particularly high-class. One Chaffinch and Bramblefinch will give colour to the collection (the former sings nicely, too) and the handsome Bullfinch is a fine aviary bird. Some of the Buntings, too, are very pretty and uncommon. The Snow, Cirl, Reed, Yellow, Black-headed, and Ortolan Buntings would make a charming group. None of these is at all expensive, except the Black-headed and, in a lesser degree, the Cirl.

Thrush Going Blind.

H. Oram.—You say that "light-coloured discs have formed in the ball of each eye." These spell blindness, and there is no cure. I have never heard of one, at least. This trouble is not uncommon amongst Crested Canaries and is said to be inherent (i.e., birds bred from blind parents or stock addicted to blindness are peculiarly apt to fall blind themselves). Cataract—the light film over the ball of the eye—is a symptom frequently found. Blindness which is due, broadly speaking, to some change in the substance or structure of the eye itself, cannot be cured, and the cause of it cannot be determined, unless examination after death, by someone skilled in such matters, revealed it. If there was any "running" at the eye, or sticky matter thereabouts, then bathing with boracic eye lotion (obtainable at any chemist), used warm, would be the likely thing to cure. Birds must not be hung in draughts; open windows are very bad places in most circumstances. I consider your method of feeding could be improved (read the "Nutshell" booklet on the Song Thrush, post free 2½d.), and the idea of giving water once daily only, I think, is really reprehensible, very little short of cruelty; in fact, birds should always have water; and Thrushes should be allowed to bathe on every suitable day.

Two Matters.

L.Z.—It often happens that the beak of a Bullfinch gets overgrown—the upper mandible "hooks" too far over the lower one. The remedy is to cut it down to normal size with a sharp pair of nail clippers or nail scissors, afterwards smoothing the edge with the file portion of these implements. The filing is easily accomplished when the beak is allowed to rest against the ball of the thumb or first finger. The operation is not painful to a bird, providing, of course, that only the overgrowth is removed, and not the beak substance proper cut into. Birds will often peck at a piece of old mortar, or rock salt, in preference to cuttlefish. The Robin I fancy has got a little too fat; I have found them apt to do so in captivity. Give for one day a good teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, and repeat the dose after a day's interval on plain water. The food you mention is excellent; I have used it myself with success. But give some grated carrot amongst it, and offer a few ripe berries (elderberries are much appreciated) and ripe soft fruit.

Losses in an Aviary.

Puzzled.—The fact that the Canary has survived proves that the seed supplied is not responsible for the losses you have sustained; I can see nothing wrong with the sample sent. In the first place, I think your aviary is badly designed; a width of but eighteen inches (front to back) is not nearly sufficient, and puts me in mind of a tunnel. Couldn't you make it three feet, at least, and thus afford shelter and a little privacy? In the second place, I expect you have been turning into it fresh-caught birds, that is, birds not used to eating ordinary seeds. Judging from your description, it would almost look as though they had failed to find either the seed or the water. These should be placed in a very prominent position, preferably near to, or actually upon, the ground. In addition to the seed mixture, there should be a dish of cracked hemp; if some cracked sunflower is put amongst it, so much the better. You should also give, very liberally, shepherd's-purse, groundsel, thistles, etc., now readily obtainable. You would find a great deal of very useful information in our "Nutshell" handbooks (only 2½d. each, post free), dealing with the Goldfinch, Linnet, and Bullfinch, which would help you to feed the birds properly. It is in this respect that you fail, and you will continue to lose birds unless you treat them differently. You say that the birds become "very tame, seeming almost stupified"; this is because they are then very nearly dead. You must read some books upon bird-keeping.

Brevities.

A Funny Little Bird (J.W.W.).—I expect your tiny bird with a crest is a Hartz (Roller) Canary; many of these have little "top-knots." It is, of course, a hen. It is the wrong time of the year for birds to be sitting on eggs and rearing young. The bird ought to be moulting. If the eggs are fertile, young will be hatched, of course, and they may quite likely get reared. It is not a good plan, though, by any means to let birds nest so late in the year.

An Aviary Matter (T. Jones). Kindly note rules, which state that British and Foreign bird queries must be written on separate sheets of paper. The reply I give to "J.A.A." this week practically answers the question you put to me. Any of the birds therein mentioned would be suitable for your place. What do you mean by "glass" aviary? Is it a kind of greenhouse? If with a glass roof, then you will be well advised to cover it with half inch wire netting, in case of accidental breakage. And if it gets the sun practically all the day, it should be heavily covered with whitewash or similar preparation in the summer.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Diet for Grey Parrot.

T.H.S. (Blackburn).—Some Greys have decided notions as to what seeds they will eat. The following is a wholesale mixture: 1 quart each Canary and millet and half pint each of oats, paddy rice, hemp, Indian corn, dari, and sunflower seeds. Of course if the bird persistently refuses any one kind of the above items, you can omit it from the mixture, but the bird should not be permitted to feed entirely on sunflower seed. Also supply plain biscuit, ripe fruit, nuts—a small piece of any plain cake may be given occasionally as a tit-bit. Feather plucking is often a vice, and almost impossible to entirely erradicate. Do not give slops and messes. Give Dinneford's Magnesia and Chemical Food as advised to another correspondent, "Bob." Spray with quassia solution twice weekly, and as soon as the bird is dry anoint all bare places with Spratt's "Pennakura." The process of curiug feather pulling is often lengthy, and you must persevere with above treatment.

Grey Parrot Not Talking.

L. E. T.—It is a case of training the bird, though some individuals will pick up a lot of words from ordinary conversation. But the most of a Parrot's vocabulary is picked up from short sentences which are addressed to it; for instance, give the bird a name, and regularly address it by this; and again when giving it a tit-bit, regularly offer it with some such expression as "Something nice for Polly," and the bird will soon pick up some of these things. Also mimic laughter and crying, etc. It is best to do your training principally when the bird is in a quiet and restful mood. The bird should soon begin to say a word or two now; there is no given period. Keep it where it will get plenty of company, hear plenty of conversation, without getting scared, and sooner or later it will commence talking, and then go on increasing its vocabulary.

Noisy Amazon.

Screaming Amazon.—So far as I can gather, your bird is thoroughly fit in every way. I also gather it is fairly tame and used to you, and not scared by your movements. Thus it appears it is mere exuberance of spirits, and will be difficult of treatment. If it is tame and will permit itself to be handled, then I suggest letting it out of the cage at convenient intervals, but when you must keep it caged I should certainly persevere with the covering-up method (this must be done gently and quietly), and not uncover till it is quiet again. So long as the bowels do not become unduly loose, give as drinking water every fourth day Dinneford's magnesia and water—one part of the former to two of the latter—for about a month, but if the voidings become unduly loose, you must lengthen the interval between the doses. I can only further suggest that you talk to it and play about with it as much as possible, and so try and break up the screaming periods. On genial days it could go outside in any sheltered position.

What Parrot? & Feather Pulling.

B.T.—Diet this bird exactly as advised to another correspondent, "J.H.S., Blackburn." Also give Dinneford's Magnesia and chemical food as advised to "Bob." Spray the bird every third day with quassia solution, and when dry anoint all bare places with Spratt's "Pennakura." Also well scald out your cage, pour boiling water into all crevices, scald perches and food vessels, so as to get rid of any parasites that may be lurking therein. It is the Roseate Cockatoo, a hardy species. It can be put out of doors in suitable weather—indoors it simply needs some light and airy, yet not draughty, position. Do not give tea, coffee or milk slops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food. You must persevere with the treatment, as feather pulling is often more a vice than a disease, and very difficult to cure. Not a reputable talking species, but will talk at any rate a little if you keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation. Talk to it, pet it, and teach it by constant repetition of such short sentences or words you wish it to repeat. When it is quiet and restful is the best time to do this.

Budgerigars and Diarrhœa.

A. R.—Your diet is about right, but you might add to it a little plain biscuit crushed to about the size of white millet, also keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in the cage. So long as you can get it free from frost, supply as much seeding grass as they care to eat. For one day put a pinch of Epsom salts in the drinking water, and follow this by lightly colouring the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, and continue this for some time. This is a good tonic and has a slightly constipating effect. If they will eat dry crusts of stale household bread, one may be given daily, and a few drops of the chemical food may with advantage be put on same. In cases of severe diarrhœa, give immediately 2 drops of laudanum dissolved in about a tablespoonful of water, which is to take the place of the drinking water; and you had better put a special query through with full details at once. Our booklet, "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," should prove helpful to you in treating your birds.—See advert.

Nonpariel Matters.

F. H. W.—It is very difficult to advise in such a case. It is necessary to see the bird, and I really advise you to let a vet. see it, or else have it destroyed. I have carefully examined your sketch, but cannot tell whether the lower mandible is merely overgrown, or whether it is the watery substance which enlarges it. If the former it should be pared away. Hard growths, not containing pus, can be touched with tincture of iodine, but you must not get it in the bird's eye. If the growths contain matter, then you must keep them cleansed with warm water, and when they come to a head, prick them with a needle, exude the pus by gentle pressure, well cleanse with warm water, and apply a little healing ointment. The growths should be well cleansed with warm water before applying the iodine. Keep the bowels moving freely by occasional doses of Dinneford's magnesia—1 part magnesia to 2 parts water—and at other times well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Use a camel hair brush both for the warm water and the iodine, a separate brush for the latter; both should be well cleansed after use. Try it with a little warm milk-sop, in addition to the usual dict; this will be beneficial if it will eat it. The bird should be at once isolated from your other stock. I again repeat, let a vet. see it; he should be able at sight to tell you whether you can hope to effect a cure or whether the more human course will be to destroy it.

Brevities.

Bare of Feathers (Bob).—I can only suggest palliative measures, as you give me no particulars whatever. But I strongly suspect the bird is plucking itself. For one day supply as drinking water, equal parts of water and Dinneford's Magnesia, and repeat this as may be necessary to keep the bowels moving freely, but the voidings must not be allowed to remain watery loose. When not giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Spray twice weekly with quassia solution. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in the cage. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food. Repeat query, giving me full details as to your diet and treatment, and I may be able to further assist you.

Macaws and Parrakeets (A.M.). (1) The Blue and Yellow Macaw has quite an extensive range—Panama, Bollvia, Guiana, and throughout the Amazon Valley. I should say about 60/- or 70/-. The Blue and Yellow is the most uncommon, but there is but little difference in values, as sometimes one is on the market and then the other. (2) Undoubtedly the Parrakeet you describe is the Quaker (Monk) Parrakeet, also a South American species, very handsome in appearance, but rather noisy.

Grey Parrot Unduly Loose (F.S.).—As the bird's condition has improved, continue the treatment advised in our former reply, and the bowels should in due course become normal. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sop, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food. After being in a chronic state of looseness for so long, it will take some time for the trouble to right itself. Of course, if any adverse symptoms should develop, then you must write again at once, with fullest details, as I do not keep past queries by me.

King Parrot and Conure (M.D.R.).—(1) I do not care to give a definite opinion, as Parrakeets mature so slowly; and I advise you to await the result of another moult, when, if the crimson areas do not increase, it is undoubtedly a female, and I rather incline to this opinion. (2) I rather hesitate to advise a Conure as a room pet; they are very noisy as a rule, and their calls very shrill and piercing; but much depends on their training, and if you get hold of a young quiet bird, you should be able to keep it so, by making a pet of it and seeing that it comes in contact with nothing of a scaring nature.

Birds for Box Cage ("Avadavat.").—You could add a pair of Avadavats to your present number, and that is all the cage will accommodate. It is not a question of quarrelling, but accommodation. Rightly chosen, many more would agree together, but would soon go wrong from overcrowding. Your cage would accommodate at the outside four birds (odd males) the size of a Norwich Canary, and, say, half a dozen small Finches or Waxbills. The cage must be cleaned daily, and the water changed twice daily. Small tufts of seeding grass will be very beneficial, or even bunches of grass flowers fastened together for the birds to pick over, and many a stray insect will come their way thus, but such must not be given when tainted with frost or sodden with wet.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. And bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

E. Fulwood.—Thrush died from inflammation of the intestines, probably caused by irritants in the food. The diet you mention is not suitable for all birds alike; it contains a varying amount of spice, and is quite sufficient to set up irritation, particularly in birds, as I find it does even in the large domestic animals. You will know by this to what part of the diet I refer. Such a food would tend also to produce fits and the other troubles. Discontinue this part of your diet, and I do not think you will be troubled with the same disease again. If you have others similarly affected, proceed at once to give an aperient saline in the drinking water to eliminate it from the system.

H. F. Butler.—Your birds are suffering from ptomaine trouble. The absorption of the ptomaine or poisons caused the sleepiness acting as they do by depressing the nervous system. You do not describe your method of feeding. Examine well your seeds; see if free from mould; and if giving egg food reduce this to minimum proportions for a time, administering in the drinking water sufficient Condys Fluid to colour it, and an occasional aperient as Epsom Salts in the drinking water. You must seek for the cause of trouble in the diet, for I have no doubt that in this lies its origin.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Queck Organ (J.B.).—Your best plan would be to put a small "wanted" advertisement in the "Roller" column of CAGE BIRDS.

Address Wanted ("Waltonian").—It is against our rules to give the addresses of contributors. If you will send your letter enclosed in a sealed and stamped envelope, we shall be pleased to forward it.

A Photograph (J.L.).—Many thanks for your interesting photograph. We regret we cannot reproduce it in our columns, as the fast rate at which our journal is printed would only spoil the effect.

Insurance against Fire (S.F.R.).—If you write to Mr. H. W. Mathias, "Lucerne," Stubbington, Fareham, Hants., and mention CAGE BIRDS, we think he will be able to give you some information on the point of insurance for birds.

Queries (D.W.).—If you will send your queries on separate slips of paper, according to our rules (see page 144 of last week's issue), we shall be pleased to forward them to our specialists, who will give you the required information.

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet F.A. usual quality singing contest held at King's Head, Shannon-street, September 11th, when 25 birds sang. 1st and 2nd, Bland; 3rd, Stead; 4th, Butler. Judges, Messrs. C. Cooper, T. Summers, and W. Naylor.—WM. SISSONS, Hon. Sec.

DEPTFORD.

The opening of the new club room on Aug. 31, at the Brewery Tap, Trundley Road, proved a great success. Sixty-four sat down to supper, after which a first-rate concert was given. Linnet and Chaffinch singing will take place weekly, and prizes will be given by Mr. Rab (late of the Bee Hive, Pentonville Road), for many years a generous supporter of singing contests. The new club room has a seating capacity for 200, and is in every way adapted for singing contests. For further particulars see CAGE BIRDS.—W. RANCE, Secretary.

Club Reports.

BLACKBURN AND DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting Sept. 12, Meloria Restaurant. Six new members proposed. Open show Dec. 16 and 17, Mr. J. H. Roe will judge; 41 classes. Next meeting Oct. 31. Anyone wishing to join apply to me—J. WALSH, Hon. Sec., Pheasant Aviaries, Blackburn.

SELSTON AND DISTRICT F.S.

Meeting held September 3rd, also table show in the Schoolroom. Chief winners: 1, spl, 3, Bakewell; 2, Bacon. Also decided to have classes for birds at members' show November 19th. Mr. A. J. Gladwin will judge all sections.—F. MALTBY, Hon. Sec.

PRESTON O.S.

Meeting held Sept. 8, Tokio Cafe; good muster turned up. It was decided for the annual open show to add four classes for greens, also to give three more classes for foreign birds, making six in all. Messrs. S. Watson and J. M. Walsh have each promised to guaranotee one. Messrs. W. Vardy and J. H. Roe were elected judges.—R. TAYLOR, Sec.

CUMNOCK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Sept. 10, Town Hall, the President, H. Kinner in chair. Proposed, that we provide a class for Redpolls. We made 5 new members. Final meeting before show in Cumnock Town Hall on Oct. 8. Intending members invited. Subscriptions due will be thankfully received. Vote of thanks to the chairman closed meeting.—F. YOUNG, Sec.

BRISTOL C.B.S.

Meeting held City Hotel, Sept. 7, Mr. T. Kregen (chair). Following new members elected: Mrs. Norman (Taunton), Messrs. Houghton (Gloucester), Pool (Bristol), Fletcher (Bristol). For annual show (Nov. 12) Mr. A. Carter was elected secretary. Hearty invitation is extended to fanciers to join at once.—A. R. A. CARTER, 11, Queens Road, Ashley Down Road, Bristol.

BARNSLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting Aug. 27, Clarence Hotel, Mr. J. Eyre presiding over a splendid attendance. Schedule for open show, as proposed by committee, was adopted. We are hoping to have a bigger entry this year. We have secured the Wesley Street School Rooms—an ideal place. The show will be held under the Open Norwich P.C. patronage.—We trust that exhibitors will keep our show on November 12th in mind.—F. C. Sims, Hon. Sec.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Monthly meeting held September 6th at Nag's Head Cocoa House. Mr. Cave presided. Mr. Hadwin (Liverpool) gave us a lecture on preparing and staging for exhibition. The subject was dealt with in a very able manner, many points of interest both to the novice and the old hands being made clear. Doubtless the advice given will be beneficial during the forthcoming show season. A vote of thanks to Mr. Hadwin, proposed by Mr. Parker, and seconded by Mr. Jones, concluded the meeting. Two new members were elected.—J. SWINDLEY, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE C.A.

September meeting held at Old Boar's Head, Manchester. Mr. J. Hampshire elected to the chair. Decided, to grant Manchester and Nottingham our patronage; this makes four societies against six last year, including Rochdale O.C. and Rochdale Good Intent. Resolved, "that all subs. be paid on or before the 1st of October, or members will not be able to compete for our specials, which will he worth competing for." Next meeting at Duke of Edinburgh, Oldham, October 15th.—C. WHITEHEAD, Sec.

LEYTON AND DIS. C.B.A.

Meeting held Sept. 5, Constitutional Club, High Road, Mr. F. Williamson in chair. Good attendance. Questions of general interest were written on slips and placed in a hat, each member drawing one in turn, and afterwards answering same. The result was a splendid discussion, much information on Canary management being elicited. Washing competition next monthly meeting. Intending competitors should send in their names in good time. Mr. J. S. Clarke will judge. Silver medal for winner in each section.—FORSE AND SON, Hon. Secs.

NOTTINGHAM (Permanent) O.S.

General meeting, Sept. 10, Grapes Inn, to choose judge, and fix schedule for coming open show on Oct. 15 under Cage Bird Union rules. A class is being provided for Yorkshires, as an experiment. This variety does not seem to "catch on" in Nottingham, and we hope to receive some support. We enrolled two new members. Our society is open to a 20-mile radius of Nottingham; will any fancier requiring a schedule, or wishing to join, kindly communicate with me? Mr. J. Richards was nominated as judge. Next meeting, Sept. 24.—J. WALMSLEY, Sec.

WEST STANLEY & DIS. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held Sept. 10, headquarters, Mr. W. Butler chairman. Very large number of members attended. Election by ballot of judge for first of four Table Shows to be held in Com. Hotel, Oct. 8, Nov. 5, Dec. 3, and Dec. 31. Mr. Atkinson was elected. There are to be three classes, Nor. Yell., Buff Yorks, and A.V. Brit. up to Lark in size. Also arranged, to hold a judging competition (one penny per class), the one nearest judge's to receive the lot, per class. All birds to be on show bench at 5.30 prompt. Open to public at 6.30 till 9 p.m. Monthly meeting at 6 p.m. to elect judge for next show, and arrange classes.—W. ELLIOTT, Sec.

GLASGOW WEST END C.B.C.

Usual monthly meeting Clarendon Hall, September 9th, Mr. A. Miller presiding. The following were appointed visiting committee: Messrs. A. E. Bebby, A. Symington, W. T. Seath, and A. Miller. Decided, that the 30th September be final date for receiving papers from members declaring how many young birds they have bred, with the markings, etc., of same. Will all members please note? Two new members were enrolled, Messrs. Alex. and R. Kego. The membership is still growing; the total is 45, which is very encouraging, as it is only seven months since the society was formed. Mr. J. G. Adams was appointed on committee. The members were treated to a splendid lecture hy Mr. Geo. G. Henderson, one of "Scotland's best-known British bird fanciers." In his introductory remarks Mr. Henderson gave his experiences with British birds from his boyhood—how he used to be fond of roaming about for the express purpose of viewing and studying birds in their native haunts; and even now he said not a week passed but what he had a walk into the country to gather wild seeds and green food for his Britishers. He advised all to take long walks on the highways and bye-ways to study the birds, and also the different wild seeds on which they feed at the different seasons, so that they could give theirs a diet similar, or as near to it as possible. By doing this they would add greatly to the happiness and comfort of British birds in captivity. Mr. Henderson also gave a list of the various seeds which, in his opinion, were very suitable for the different species of Hardbills, also the best green foods suitable, groundsel being his favourite, especially for the Goldfinch. The lecturer next dealt with the general management of wild birds in captivity, the steadying down, etc., of same; take care, he said, to be more gentle with the wilder (nervous) ones. The lecture proved to be most interesting and instructive, and was very much enjoyed by all. A long list of questions was asked of Mr. Henderson, which he answered very ably and satisfactorily. Mr. Miller proposed a very hearty vote of thanks, which was accorded with great enthusiasm; and a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman brought a pleasant and enjoyable evening to a close.—WILLIAM PROUDFOOT, Sec. and Treas.

WEST OF SCOTLAND O.S.

Extraordinary general meeting held in Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Ingram-street, September 3rd, Mr. P. Thom presided. Considerable pressure was brought to bear on Mr. Smart to continue in office as secretary and treasurer, but he declined to do so. Wm. Hutchison agreed to act as secretary until end of year. Messrs. C. B. Whitelaw and R. Thomson were elected new members. It was agreed to finally close admission to membership at October meeting, when all subscriptions of old and new members must be paid. A table show of young Mules was held, and resulted as follows:—1, H. P. Hutchison; 2, 3, 4, Webb. Mr. H. P. Hutchison was successful winner of medal with 28 points; Messrs. Rennie and Sandison 24 each. Intending new members can have all information from me.—WM. HUTCHISON, Sec., 326, Crown-street, Glasgow.

READING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting, Palmer Hall, Sept. 7. Six new members admitted, viz., Miss Bate, Messrs. W. H. Fisher, Chesterman, A. Cunningham, E. Buckett, and Baylis. The chairman read a letter received from a late member whose subscription had been declined by the committee. It was decided not to alter the decision. Letters were read from Mr. H. D. Astley, F.Z.S., Mrs. W. R. Temple (Datchet), and Dr. Maurice Amsler, F.Z.S. (Eton), consenting to become patrons of the society; the last-named gentleman and the Right Hon. G. W. Palmer had kindly offered to send some rare specimens for exhibition at the Nov. show. Will any member who has not allotted his special, please let me know on or before next meeting, when scheduie will be completed. All subscriptions now due.—W. H. PYKE, Hon. Sec.

Correspondence.

The Distempering of Bird Cages.

SIR,—I have read with pleasure the remarks of Mr. Stephens, in CAGE BIRDS of September 10th. I quite agree with him in his opinion of distemper, as from experience I have found it to be unsuitable for cages. There is one other suggestion that I wish to add to the advice given by Mr. Stephens re two coats of good paint, properly applied, and that is a single coat of enamel on top of paint. By so doing one gets a finer surface, which is more easily washed than by finishing with ordinary paint.

"STRATHMORE."

Rare Feathered Bird on the Banks of the Stour.

SIR,—Taking a walk with my wife on the banks of the river Stour, just before The Ferry at Marshall's Tea Gardens, on a recent Saturday, we observed a pure white bird of the Swallow tribe skimming over the meadows. It appeared to be rather nervous, as upon our approach it disappeared. But having passed the spot it returned, and could be seen for some distance with interesting and pleasing effect. It was a lovely afternoon, and the sun shining brilliantly upon the plumage, it had the appearance of a silver bird in flight.

W. O. BROOKE.

The Late Entry Nuisance.

A Timely Appeal.

SIR,—Now that the show season is at hand, can anything be done re the late entry nuisance? The radical cure is to refuse late entries, but few if any societies are in a position to do so. There are the young fanciers who may not know or think it necessary to enter early, but there are also the old fanciers, the backbone of the Fancy. Not all, but a good many wait till they get the usual whip-up card with the wail, "Entries only one per class, do please send us some." These cards usually cost the societies from 10s. to 20s. Then there is the rush to CAGE BIRDS—entries extended, etc., and the over worked secretary is glad to get these late entries, although it means him sitting up all night getting the catalogue, etc., ready for the printer. These are a few facts of everyday occurence during the show season, which can easily be avoided if fanciers would all join hands and send their entries at least one clear week before the shows.

GEO. GRANT.

Hints on Soldering.

SIR,—Your correspondent, I think, will find all the information he requires in a penny handbook, issued by Messrs. Cassell and Co., London, entitled: "Work Booklet, No. 5.—Solders and Soldering," by Paul N. Hasluck, price 1d. This book, though only 1d., tells how to make and use solders of all descriptions, and would be of use to all your readers who do any soldering.

A. SMITH.

SIR,—If your correspondent, Mr. Naylor, would get one of the Tinol outfits, sold by Hobbies, Ltd., he will not find the least trouble in making wire fronts. The outfit consists of a spirit blow lamp and a tin of Tinol solder, which is a paste. The way I make my fronts is to cut the bars the length required, then cut the wires to height of front, fix the two end wires in the punch bars and solder them. I then stand the frame upright and put the other wires in; then with a match stick I put a little of the solder round each of the wires and run the blow lamp along the top, letting the flame rest on each wire till the solder runs. Next I turn the front upside down and solder the bottom likewise. The sliding doors are easily made by cutting the bars two holes longer than the width of the door required—in order to let the wires pass through to slide the door up. The two end wires in the door should be about ⅜ of an inch through the top of the door. These can next be clasped round the wires above in order to keep the front in position. The best of using the Tinol solder is that it requires no flux; it is a solder and flux combined. Any further information I will willingly supply if Mr. Naylor will write to me, care of the Editor of CAGE BIRDS.

BULLFINCH.

SIR,—My way of soldering is to get first a soldering iron and a piece of solder. Then I get a pennyworth of spirits of salts and put some in a gallipot; I then put it in the open air. Then I get some pieces of zinc and put in it, when it will "boil." When it has finished "boiling" it will be "killed," and is then ready for use. Put the soldering iron in the fire, but be sure it does not get red hot. Dip it in spirits and put a little solder on it and it will then be "tinned." But if not, get a piece of emery cloth and rub it on and try again. Next see that the article to be soldered is clean and put a little spirits on it. Put the soldering iron to it and the solder will run on it. If it does not, you will know that it is not clean enough. I trust this will help your correspondent. F. CHARLES.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. G. Naylor, he should get from the chemist two-pennyworth of spirits of salts and put it into a basin; then drop a piece of zinc into it and allow it to boil until it dies; and then bottle same for use. Put your soldering iron into the fire and allow it to get as hot as will be sufficient to just melt the solder; then file it until it is bright. Dip it in the spirits and rub it with solder; this will tin the iron. Now, as to soldering, drop a small portion of the spirits on the article to be soldered; then get iron which you have nicely hot (not red, mind you), place on the end of your solder, and you will find it will pick up a piece of it (but you must clean your tinning first). Place on to where you want to solder and allow it to "sweat" in. So much for soldering. Now as to making solder. Solder is difficult to use unless it is made properly. Melt together two parts tin to one part lead in a small zetland. Then run into strips ready for use. You can do this by melting one pound of tin to half a pound of lead, which will serve your purpose for years. If Mr. Naylor tries this he will, I think, be satisfied.

C. ROBSON.

A Blackbird's Bald Head.

SIR,—I should be glad if any readers of CAGE BIRDS can tell me what to do to make feathers grow on a Blackbird's head? I got him out of a nest and hand-reared him, but when he moulted he went bald on the head and neck. I feed him on a well-known packet food and mealworms; this food keeps a Thrush in splendid condition, so I don't think that is the cause. He has been like this nearly twelve months. He whistles well, and seems in good health, but looks an "object." CONSTANT READER.

The Cage Bird Union and the Sheffield C.B.S.

SIR,—Allow me to state that the report of the Sheffield C.B.S. meeting was, that we remain members of the Cage Bird Union for the rest of this year. It must be decided at some future meeting whether or not we shall be members next year. When we decided to join at the commencement of this year it was hoped rule 22 would have been altered by now, so that our members could show where they like.

J. WOOLHOUSE.

The Cage Bird Union and the London Shows.

SIR,—I have been waiting anxiously during the last week to see whether the great London societies intend doing anything about the attitude of the Cage Bird Union towards them. As matters stand at present I am prevented, as a member of the Union, from exhibiting at either of those great classic events, and I hear it is the C.B. Union's intention to keep to their rules. This will be a change if they do! Is it right?

EXHIBITOR.

Mr. Warley replies to Mr. R. L. Crisp.

SIR,—In your issue of September 10th, you publish a letter from Mr. R. L. Crisp, accusing me of sordid intentions re the Federation. I would ask Mr. Crisp to mind his own business, and let Wimbledon Society settle with me if necessary. It is best known to the three societies he mentions why they left the C.B.U., and I would further point out that the matter does not concern me. With reference to the Federation, I know nothing of their transactions. Mr. Crisp seems to know more about me than I do myself. I should like to state that I have not been prompted by any one, and I have nothing to withdraw. I claim, as a right, to speak for the C.B.U., as well as Mr. Crisp to speak for the London Federation. G. J. WARLEY.

Forty-eight Young from Four Hens and Two Cocks.

SIR,—Reading the "breeding results of the 1910 season" in CAGE BIRDS. I see that Mr. John Pyatt (Tamworth) thinks his performance a record for an amateur, breeding 38 young with 4 hens and 2 cocks. Now, my performance is much better, and this, too, is my first year. I have 4 hens and 2 cocks and have bred 48 youngsters. So I think this a much better result. Two of the hens brought up 15 young each, and one of the cocks is father to no less than 35 youngsters. I never had one egg off him that was not fertile. I wish every success to CAGE BIRDS.

J. F. CURRY.

The Scottish Plainhead Club and Its Patronage.

SIR,—When reading the report of above-named club's committee meeting, I saw that patronage is only granted where one of this select committee is to act as judge; or one of the clubs of which they are members is to receive same. The secretary in his report says the members at the general meeting decided on giving patronage to clubs with a ten-mile radius. Now this is only half a truth. If my memory serves me right, the general meeting decided to grant patronage to all societies who have eight or more members of the S.P.C. as members of their society, as it would strengthen the club, and add to the membership by giving more patronage. I hope the members of the S.P.C. will let this body know that they were elected to further the interests of the club.

A DISGUSTED MEMBER.

Judges at Scottish Shows.

SIR,—It is with regret that I open my CAGE BIRDS and read another letter under the above heading, deprecating the appointment of dealers as judges at our Scottish fixtures. Now, Sir, my opinion of "Surprised Scotch Fancier," likewise of "Truth," is that they are either disappointed exhibitors, unsuccessful breeders, or disturbers of the peace. I may safely say that I am acquainted with three of our Scottish judges, who are dealers in our Scottish capital, judges whose initials frequently appear against some Scottish fixtures under CAGE BIRDS "Show Dates Fixed" for the coming show season, and I can safely "plump" for them all as being gentlemen who are held in high esteem by the Fancy in Scotland. Furthermore, they have a reputation, worthy of all praise, as judges. Whether dealers or otherwise, if they are qualified for the duties they undertake, I see no harm in a dealer being a judge at any show. I would just like to add that where a little jealousy exists trouble increases, and if we are going to have a successful hobby, we must have harmony and sportsmanship at the heart; then we shall get to the top. I close by advising your two correspondents to live and let live, and not be selfish; if societies are made up of such fanciers, we may close the book, and leave it on the shelf. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

ALEXR. BRYDEN.

An Irish Show: Ought it to be a Confined One?

SIR,—In answer to "Sligo," in your issue of Sept. 10th, re Holywood and District C.B.S. Show, it was a great pleasure for me to read his letter. Would that there were more in the Fancy of the same spirit—courtesy and affability. The reason we confined our show to Ulster was that, we being a young society and it being our first show, we thought it advisable not to take too much responsibility by throwing it open to all Ireland, but to give every care to what exhibits may come from Ulster, remembering that first impressions last longest. Next year, if all goes well, we shall have had the knowledge gained from experience. Then, no doubt, it will be a pleasure for us to open our show to Ireland, or to the United Kingdom. As to the patronage that we may get from the Norwich Plainhead and Yorkshire Canary Clubs of Ireland, I do not know; but they know that their clubs were not built in one year, and they had to depend more or less on outsiders for support. Surely they (especially Irishmen) will not be so narrow as to retard the progress of a young society simply because it does not care to take too great a responsibility, and to make promises it probably could not keep, such promises about which, if my memory serves me right, letters in CAGE BIRDS were very drastic some short time ago. Our motto is: Pro Tanto Quid Retribuamus. For "Sligo's" information I may say that, through unforeseen circumstances, we were reluctantly compelled to change our show date, from the 4th of Nov. to Nov. 5th. If "Sligo" will be good enough to send me his name and address, I shall be pleased to send him one of our schedules, and to acquaint him of our progress from time to time.

Information on the Growing of Dandelion.

SIR,—Allow me to thank Messrs. "Straight 'Un" and T. Johnson for their instructive and interesting letters on this subject. It rather amused me when I noticed that "Straight 'Un" agrees with me, that seed sown in the spring will "refuse to come up," while Mr. Johnson says, "hold the seed back until the spring and then plant." Which is right? I say, probably both are, up to a certain point, where you have to leave it to the seed. But my maxim is: Get it in the early new year, after it has its head above ground. The life is there, and, what is more, I do not think it gets any too strong, for you cut it and it grows again; you cut again, and so the game goes on, all through the season. Of course, when the wild dandelion in the fields is tender, we gather it to supplement our own, and when doing this we always get a nice bit of the root with each specimen; and don't forget to give this to the birds with the leaves. Some of my birds go for the root first, and I notice that they invariably prove to be my best breeders and feeders. My most successful hen has reared more youngsters in two seasons than any other hen we ever possessed. She had eight fertile eggs in one nest this season. She always goes for the root of the dandelion first, and is always "in the pink." "The Different Families of Dandelion," illustrated in CAGE BIRDS, September 10th issue, are excellent. Each fancier must, of course, decide as to what leaves and kinds are suitable for bird food. Many fanciers condemn the red-stemmed dandelion, and for a long time I was chary of using it, seeing so many were against it; but ultimately we decided to give it a good trial, and watch carefully the result. But we could never find anything against it. So now we use it freely. You will also notice that after a time, if you are gathering from your own roots, the redness will gradually die away, and become milky looking, like the rest; and this kind I like best. The deeply-serrated leaves gradually become less serrated and better looking, after being cut a time or two. But I do not care for them, if better stuff is to hand. Dandelion in the bird-room, I may say, I swear by.

*A Tame Pet.

Last year my father bought a hen Bullfinch. She was very wild at first, but after a little while became quite tame. She is very fond of apple pips and sunflower seeds, which she will take from our hands. When I go quite close to her cage to speak to her she will very often pull my hair. She usually goes to bed before the other birds, and if they make any noise she scolds them.—Willie Bennett (age 12), Rose Acre, Bearsted, near Maidstone, Kent.

*An Intelligent Skylark.

My father once owned a Skylark which was reared by a Canary. It turned out to be a splendid singer, and was very tame. It would even perch on the garden rails or on father's finger, and sing. It would sometimes rise from the floor quivering slowly to the ceiling, singing all the time. Although offered a good price for it, father refused to sell it, even when a gentleman stopped his carriage at our door and asked to buy it.—Sophie Rundle (age 13), 44, Kent Road, Ford, Devonport.

Polly's Seed.

We have an Indian Green Parrot, and her seed we place on a set of drawers. On examining the seed, dad found there were many empty ones, and, of course, said he would go to another shop for it. But as he and mother were having supper they heard a noise. It was a mouse, and it ran towards a book. Dad pressed the volume, and to his surprise found two mice dead inside it. Our Polly will get better seed now.—Harry Sutton (age 9), 132, Pleek Road, Walsall.

OUR £5 ESSAY COMPETITION.

"IS IT CRUEL TO KEEP BIRDS IN CAGES?"

Mr. H. J. Fulljames, the Winner.

We had not the slightest idea when formulating the above competition that such a wide and deep interest would be shown in it. Readers from every direction have set themselves the task of answering the question of whether any cruelty was involved in the cage-bird hobby; and the work of the adjudicator has been consequently of a most onerous and difficult character. Nearly three hundred essays were sent in, many of them of remarkable excellence. After a lengthy and careful examination it has been decided to award the prize to

c/o J. Defries and Sons,
146 and 147, Houndsditch, London, E.C.

We announce this award with the more pleasure inasmuch as this gentleman has the honour to be associated as an occasional contributor with a contemporary journal, and his work in connection therewith and as an official of the National British Bird and Mule Club has brought him into agreeable prominence in the cage bird Fancy. We hope to print Mr. Fulljames' masterly summary of the whole bird-keeping question in a future issue, and subsequently to circulate it in pamphlet form for the benefit of the bird-keeping cult, our sole object being to set off in some measure the ludicrous but pernicious attempt of the Editor of the "Animals' Friend" and similar cranks to discredit our hobby in the eye of the general public.

The result of the Holiday Competition will be announced next week

Wild-Bird Life.

Wandering Southwards.

The month of September is a most interesting one to all who are in any way concerned with the doings of the feathered tribe. The summer is practically gone, and the chilly nights of fruitful autumn awaken the migratory instinct of the majority of wild birds. The melodious and graceful Warblers which yearly visit us have fulfilled their tasks of rearing young, and many are already on their way to more congenial winter quarters. The movement to our sea coast appears to be one of easy travelling. Small birds strange to the district may be seen flitting along the hedgerows bordering country roads and foot-paths, as if seeking food and amusement on their journey. Sometimes the same birds may be seen for several succeeding days. During this journey the smaller Warblers are fond of visiting quiet gardens on the outskirts of towns and villages, where among the rose trees and wall fruit, they find abundance of insects. Whitethroats and brightly-coloured Willow Wrens have come to the writer's garden, staying several days to rest and refresh themselves, in spite of the evident jealousy of our half-moulted cock Robin, who considers any species of insect-eating bird a raider upon his chosen haunt.

The other morning a crowd of Song Thrushes were feeding upon the lawn and the adjoining meadow. By carefully examining them through powerful glasses we could see that many of them were hardly yet through the moult, being very rough and untidy about the heads and necks, but some of them were most charming specimens—fine, bold, shapely birds, with the most perfect markings, and a richness of colouring that could only be obtained where the air was soft; others were exceptionally pale and "washy looking," and were possibly bred on the chalky hills or other high ground. At intervals during the day the young birds could be heard recording their song in the branches of the old elm trees. Very soft and sweet it sounded in the still autumn air, and when several of them sang together, the effect was most charming and novel. A chorus of Thrush music is not to be lightly passed by in the month of September.

Tits Hiding Their Eggs.

The Greater Titmouse will often cover up her clutch of eggs when leaving them. One may frequently peep into a nest and think there is nothing in there, when, in fact, the eggs are covered by the lining of the nest. It is difficult to say if this is done intentionally by the sitting bird, or if the eggs work in among the lining; this could only be settled by very careful observation.

Large Clutch of Robin's Eggs

A reader of CAGE BIRDS in the south says that he found a Robin's nest in a bank containing nine eggs. This is an unusual number, although as a rule this bird lays a large clutch—anything from five to eight.

Where Swifts are Found.

Swifts are in advance of all other birds in their powers of flight. They are found throughout the world excepting in the extreme north and south. In some of the Pacific Islands there is a small Swift which haunts the caves by the seashore and constructs a nest that is highly prized by the Chinese and others for the manufacture of bird's nest soup. The best for the purpose come from Borneo, some of which are almost pure white.

Unsolicited Testimony From Advertisers in "Cage Birds."

I must compliment you on CAGE BIRDS' circulation, as I have been successful each time I have advertised.—ARTHUR YOUNG (Coventry).

Please thank all who replied to my advert. in CAGE BIRDS. Your paper must have a wide circulation, as I had replies from England, Scotland, and Wales, and could not possibly reply to them all. I am pleased to say I disposed of what I had for sale. I had 6 letters the first post on the Saturday morning of the date of issue.—H. P. STAIG (Alnwick).

I wish to thank you for displaying my advertisement in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. The advertisement shows the great circulation of CAGE BIRDS. I sold nearly 50 birds by one advertisement, and I have received testimonials from nearly all (and they include purchasers in Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and about 23 towns in England). Thanks to CAGE BIRDS.—N. BENNETT (Stourbridge).

Kindly thank, through the medium of CAGE BIRDS, all enquirers re my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, of birds and cages. I have replied to all who enclosed a stamp; the others are too numerous for me to reply to.—GEO. WARN (Mansfield).

Will you thank all who replied to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, re Budgerigars? as they are too many for me to write to singly.—E. E. SAW (Epping).

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1910 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

As a reader of CAGE BIRDS for several years, I would like to give you the result of my bird breeding this season. I started with 12 pairs of Yorkshires and Norwich. I have finished up with 46 young ones, and some of them look very promising, and I hope to put some on the show bench this season. I was very fortunate last season for an amateur; I showed 10 birds at one show and had eight cards. I do not think this bad, as I have only been in the Fancy for four years. I must say that CAGE BIRDS is very instructive to all fanciers.—W. H. PHIPPS (Isleworth).

Uddingston O.S.

The breeding season just closed has, taking it all over, been not so very bad. With some it has been very poor, and with others good. The most successful was our worthy President, Mr. Thos. Prentice, who bred about 50 Norwich and two Siskin-Greenfinch Hybrids, which are a pair of beauties, much admired by all who have seen them. Mr. J. Shepherd comes next in numbers, with over 30 Borders, Crests, and Crest-breds. James has some really nice Borders and one topping Crest, which he has great hopes of turning out well. Messrs. Taylor and Nesbit had a poor start, losing a great many young at the beginning of the season, but I think they should yet total up over a score. Some very nice Norwich are among them. Mr. H. Donnon has had poor luck, yet he is still plodding on, and has young in the nest. He should finish up with 25 or thereabouts, mostly Norwich. Messrs. Wilson and Bowman, of Bothwell Park, have done very well, especially with Borders. The winner at the young bird show was a real beauty, and much admired; it was an outstanding bird in a class of 25, which is something to be proud of. Mr. W. Young (Bothwell) has done fairly well with his Scotch Fancies, being 1st and 3rd at our F.F. show, with two fine strong birds. Mr. Jno. Junor has bred two nice Yorkshires of the right stamp, which will hold their own anywhere. Mr. T. Hope has bred a few nice Plainheads, but expects to do better next year. It is fine to hear a man talk of what he intends doing next year; you can put him down as a thorough fancier. I have a great many of our members to hear from yet, but they have all done fairly well. I am in the "also rans" myself, having totalled five all told, but I am living in hopes of doing better next season.—JNO. KILPATRICK.

IMPORTANT TO SHOW SECRETARIES AND OTHERS.

Kindly Give This Your Attention.

We shall shortly be publishing, in accordance with our usual practice, a list of the open shows which are to be held in England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland during the approaching season. In order that this list may be as complete and as useful as possible, we require the assistance of secretaries and others in supplying us with the following particulars: (a) the name and date of show; (b) the names of the judges officiating at same; (c) the approximate number of classes provided; (d) the name and address of the secretary (or show-manager); and (e) whether held under Cage Bird Union rules.

We already have a fairly full list of fixtures. These will be found printed below. Will secretaries of societies holding open shows kindly look over this list, and if theirs is not included, notify us of same, giving us the above particulars? And if any of the shows in the list are not open, but confined to members, we shall be glad to know.

Kindly note: A POSTCARD WILL DO, BUT POST IT AT ONCE.

Fanciers will assist us greatly by drawing the attention of the friends and officials of the society (or societies) to which they belong to the above, so that no open shows may be overlooked.

Here are the names of the fixtures we have already on our list:—

Aberdeen, Asbford (Kent), Ayr C.B.C., Airdrie and Coatbridge, Alnwick, Avoubridge, Ardwick, Annandale, Altrincham, Broughty Ferry, Bolton, Buckbaven, Battersea, Bradford West, Burton-on-Trent, Border City (Carlisle), Bristol F.A., Bideford, Berwick-on-Tweed, Blaydon-on-Tyne, Belfast (City of), Bo'ness, Blantyre, Brechin, Barnstaple, Brighton, Banbridge, Barnsley, Bournemouth, Birmingham, Brighouse, Birkenhead, Bangor, Bowbill, Broxburn, Bradford East, Bedale, Bodmin, Belfast N.C. and M.B.S., Bootle, Chopwell, Clapham, Crewe, Coventry Godiva, Cheltenham, Cumnock, Cleator Moor, Choppington Old, Consett, Crook Original, Codnor Park, Coventry O.S., Cambridge, Cardiff, Cupar, Cowdenbeatb, Chesterfield, Cambridge O.S., Canterbury, Denton, Darlington C. and B.B.F.A., Dublin, Derwent Valley, Dysart, Dover, Darvel, Darlington C.B.S., Dundee (City of), Doncaster, Dunfermline, Eccles, Eccleshill, Edinburgh N.C. and M.B.S., Ebbw Vale, Edinburgh Open, Elgin, Eastbourne, Exeter and Devon, Frome F.A., Forfar, Falmouth, Frome C.B.S., Forres, Falkirk "Good Intent," Ferryhill, Glasgow (City of), Grimsby, Grangemoutb, Galashiels, Great Horton O.S., Garston, Gateshead, Glasgow and W.C.O.S., Guisborough, Great National (Crystal Palace), Glasgow and Dis., Great Horton "Good Intent," Hanley, Harrington, Hucknall Torkard, Hartlepools, Huddersfield Hastings, Holywood, Hamilton (Cadzow Oaks), Hull, Hayle, Hawick, Harrogate, Halifax, Ilkeston, Jarrow, Jersey, King's Lynn, Kelty and Blairadam, Kirkcaldy, Kilmarnock O.C.B.S., Kilsyth, Kendal, Lancaster Primrose, Liskeard, Loanhead, Lochgelly, Leeds, Laisterdyke, Leamington Spa, Leith O.S., Larkhall, London and P. No. 444.
Sand Tray that Does Not Twist.

Sent by Mr. A. R. Holden, Bankfield House, Chevin, Belper, near Derby.

When making sand trays for cages I always find the following to answer very well: Get a piece of three ply wood or any thin wood the size required. Next get a few strips of wood ¼in. x ¼in.; place these on the three ply as at A, B, C, and D in sketch; and you will find that this tray will stand any amount of wet without twisting. You can also finish off with a facing at D about 1in. x ¼in.—A. R. HOLDEN.

No. 445.
Scraper for Sand Trays.

Sent by Mr. T. J. McMillan, 6, Norwood Street, Belfast.

Enclosed is a sketch of a steel scraper, the probable cost of which would be 4d. To make, obtain from a hardware merchant a steel scraper blade, such as is used by cabinet makers; also a bradawl handle. File the ferrule of bradawl down as shown in Fig. 1. Punch a hole in the centre of blade (see Fig. 2) and attach same with screw nail to handle, as shown in Fig. 3. This is a very efficient scraper for sand trays.—T. J. MCMILLAN.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

The Shows.

HANLEY CASTLE.

Annual bird, etc., show for children, held Sept. 8, in the Vicarage Grounds. The weather was fine and the exhibition a great success. There was a good attendance, and much interest wns taken in the exhibits. There was only one class for Canaries, but the entries were of good quality. The Misses Isaac carried out the arrangements of the show admirably.

CAN., A.V.: 1, Lilian Allen; 2, Arthur Allen.

TOWYN.

Annual fixture held September 9th in connection with the Agricultural Show. The weather was all that could be desired, and the show was well attended. Mr. Roberts, the genial secretary, as usual worked well with a good staff of stewards. Only two classes for cage birds were provided. The quality of the birds staged, however, was equal to that of former years in the Norwich and Yorkshire sections. Very few Britishers put in an appearance, the moulting season probably accounting for this. Mr. R. Anthony made the awards.

CAN.: 1, spl for best bird in show, Master O. R. Jones, cl. buff Nor., Immense size, good col. and type, Arduduy winner; 2, J. E. Jones, bouncing variegated buff Nor.; 3, c, J. O. Williams, pair of typical youngsters, grand length; r, Parry, variegated yell. Yorks., good length and quality; vhc, R. Roberts, Nor., cl. buff; hc, R. O. Jones. BRFT.: 1, 2, 3, Pritchard, good Bullie, rare size and substance, dense black cap, very nice col.; 2nd and 3rd, two Goldies, good ground col., very distinct in markings, rare tanning.

GLASGOW (Derby.)

Glasgow and Dist. Scotch Fancy Derby held their annual show of young birds on September 10th, in the Grand National Halls, Main Street, Gorbals. It proved a thorough success from all points of view. The entries were in excess of those of the former year, while the quality of the birds left nothing to be desired. Mr. D. Black (Govan) repeated his success of 1909 by again carrying off the blue riband with a typical buff cock possessing grand size and good depth through. Not for a long time has such enthusiasm prevailed, fanciers from all parts being present. Amongst others we noticed Mr. D. Low (Dundee), looking as youthful as ever, and Mr. McLennan, jun. (Edinburgh). We missed the face of the genial Bob McQuillan (Glasgow). We also noticed Messrs. Jardine, late president City of Glasgow, Nairn, Ward, Muir, Black, Anderson, McIlwain, Lang, J. Y. Miller, Hunt, McMillan, Baillie, J. A. Stewart, McLaughlan, A. Renfrew, Fulton, Buchanan, and many others too numerous to mention. Mr. Arch. Buchanan (better known as "Baldie"), president of the society, scored first with a very nice yellow green hen. Mr. E. B. Bullions makes an efficient secretary, and everything was in apple-pie order. As soon as the judging was over, Mr. Bullions had the awards up, so that the public had the list of winners as the show opened. Judging was got through in good time. Judges: Messrs. A. Allardice and D. Kennedy. The show was well patronised during the afternoon, and the "gate" drawings considerably augmented last year'a.

YELL. CK., CL., ETC. DUNDALK.

Annual show of the Dundalk A. and I.S.A., held Sept. 6th and 7th, in the Old Secretary's Offices, in the show grounds, which provided most suitable accommodation for the vast number of exhibits. The classes were confined to residents in County Louth. The entries were all that could be desired, and although yet early in the season, when nearly all cage birds are deep in moult, the fanciers hereabouts benched many taking exhibits, looking well and fit in their new feathers. Yorkshires lead the way, and many expressed their opinion that some of the birds would be able to hold their own in open competition. The weather was excellent, and a large number of visitors and exhibitors attended the show. The cards were placed by Mr. W. H. Sheridan (Dublin), and his awards gave entire satisfaction.

Kindly note that I have removed from Bedford to Fernville, Fortis Green Road, East Finchley.—E. GALLOWAY.

Mr. H. Norman is appointed as one of the judges at Battersea show, on October 19 and 20, which makes four judges, writes Mr. F. Easterling, the sec.

I have removed from Hartington Street to 42, Carlton Street, Ayres Road, Old Trafford, Manchester, writes Mr. A. G. Smith, one of the committee of the Manchester and N.C.O.S.

I was very pleased when I got my CAGE BIRDS of September 10 to find the drawing of my Black-headed Bunting on the front page. I thank you for this. I may say he is a very interesting bird and one I very much value. He is the winner of numerous prizes including many firsts. It is a nice drawing and very life-like.—T. ERSKINE (Glasgow).

I have been asked by several cage bird societies to officiate as judge at their coming shows, writes Mr. J. Bertio (Mapperley, Notts), but since the loss of my wife I am unable to leave my business. Consequently I have to refuse all, for the present at any rate. I am sorry, as it gives me the greatest of pleasure to place the tickets at shows.

I have undertaken the duties of secretary to the Mid Rhondda C.B.A., for this year, and the members wish me to act as chairman also, writes Mr. A. H. C. Legg, 7, Primrose Terrace, Llwycelyn, Porth, Glam. Will members kindly note that an error of my own inadvertently occurred in our "club notice" of last week; the date should be September 17 and not September 10.

I have again taken over the duties of secretary for our open show on December 3, which I hope will meet with the same success as when I had the duties in the past, writes Mr. Thos. Duncan, of the Whitburn (N.B.) C.B.S. I have no doubt the success which we attained was through the system of guaranteeing our show in CAGE BIRDS. Our judges are Messrs. J. Smellie and A. Malcolmson. My address is: 9, West Main Street, Whitburn, N.B.

We have secured another judge in Mr. R. Lambie (Whitburn) who will judge the Border classes at our show, writes Mr. W. Whitcford, hon. sec., Lochgelly C.B.S. We have received the patronage of the Border Fancy C.C., and that of the Fife and Kinross Norwich P.C. We have 61 classes, and there are 3 challenge trophies and over 60 specials. We are looking forward to a successful show. Schedules will be sent out this week. Any fanciers who have been overlooked kindly let me know.

Our society is affiliated to the Cage Bird Union, writes Mr. B. Peake, hon. sec. of the Hanley and Dist. C.B.S. The committee have given a good classification for the open show on October 20. Mr. W. Mundell will judge. The society will give two 10s. 6d. specials, one for Norwich and one for Yorkshire open classes. Our schedule will be put in printer's hands after the next meeting on September 21, when members must bring in or send all specials gathered.

Peterborough Show.

The attention of exhibitors is drawn to the fact that, at the Peterborough show, to be held on October 5, there will be 34 classes. Schedules may be had of the secretary, Mr. S. L. Cocks, Coru Exchange, Peterborough.

The L. and P.O.S. Autumn Show.

I have received several enquiries, writes Mr. A. W. Law, sec. of the London and Provincial O.S., as to where the autumn show is to be held; may I therefore state that it is to be the same place as last year's—Lambeth Baths. Full particulars will be advertised in CAGE BIRDS shortly.

Breeding Results in Barnstaple.

I notice in CAGE BIRDS, in the breeding results of 1910, in some cases fanciers have had poor results. Barnstaple is no exception. While some have done well, others have done badly. Mr. Piper, of Crest fame, has, I hear, had bad luck in rearing; also he lost his grand Crest hen. Mr. Piper at the commencement of the season, was taken ill, and had to leave home for a change. Am glad to say he has returned again, and is much better. Mr. Bale informs me he has had very fair results, and has a nice one or two; with a good moult he anticipates showing a couple of "stormers." Mr. Lemon, who goes in for Norwich Plainheads, has reared 37, and among them are some very fine birds. Mr. Turner, another Norwich Plainhead breeder, has met with poor results; the 1st and 2nd rounds failed in feeding; he has about 8 from the last round. These look very promising. Mr. Burt put up 9 pairs of Belgians; 1st round 39 eggs, hatched 36 young ones; 2nd round hatched 25 young; 3rd round about 15. Up to the present only reared 7. Very disappointing, this. He had many die after the old ones had left them. Still, he has some nice young ones, and I should say they will give a good account of themselves later on. Mr. Horrill has reared about 26 Belgians, and Mr. Hunt about 13 Belgians. I have not seen their stock, but I guess friends Horrill and Hunt have a good bird or two. The other Belgian breeders I have not heard from. The writer put up two pairs of Belgians. I lost one hen before she went to nest, and lost the other after she laid her 3rd egg. So I have only reared 3 young Belgians, and I lost a yellow cock bird recently, so am left now with four cock birds.—GEO. DIX (Barnstaple).

In the Courts.

A Prosecution at Westminster.

At the Westminster Police Court on September 14, before Mr. Hopkins, Charles Tachell, of 24, Richmond Road, Kennington Road, was summoned at the instance of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, for exposing for sale in Horseferry Road, Westminster, nine Goldfinches and three Larks, contrary to one of the sections of the Wild Birds' Protection Act. The defendant pleaded ignorance. He was fined 20s. and 2s. costs.

Canary Breeding for Beginners

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.
Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, etc.

All the details of bird-breeding explained, while it shows the way out of all difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

ARE YOU BLINDFOLD?

An exhibitor who attempts to achieve success without a standard work to guide him, is like a man who walks on a cliff with a bandage over his eyes.

The Show Season is now commencing and to achieve success you must purchase the two great standard works now being published in Monthly Parts :—

A Superb Standard Work.

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House) and is being published in 8 monthly parts, at 6d. each. Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, Mr. H. Norman.

PART 6 is now ready, price 6d. from your newsagent or direct from us packed flat in card 7d. post free. The two magnificent coloured plates depict

Plate 1.—Goldfinch-Linnet Hybrid and Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrid.
,, 2.—Siskin-Greenfinch Hybrid.

Price 6d.

The reading matter is of intense value to all Hybrid breeders and exhibitors at this time, as it deals with the STANDARD POINTS OF EXHIBITION HYBRIDS, AND THE SCALES OF POINTS USED WHEN JUDGING.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates to be issued with this work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present-day type and general characteristics of a modern hybrid.

TO SAVE MONEY.

Parts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 can now be supplied for 3/4 post paid; or for 4/6 prepaid, we will take orders to supply the complete work—in parts as published. Send your order at once, direct to us, with remittance.

My Self-Acting Net Traps

catch birds of every description without attention, price 1/6, larger size 2/-, carriage paid. I have received hundreds of testimonials stating they are A1 for catchers. Read two, and beware of imitations that are not worth the carriage.—"Sir,—Net trap to hand; it is honestly worth dozens of some nets advertised. I tried it this afternoon and caught more birds in two hours than I caught in other traps in two months."—George Matthews, 2, Lucas Street, Stockport. "Sir,—Trap arrived; it is far superior to all others. I have to-day caught fifteen Linnets, six Redpolls, four Chaffinches, three Greenfinches."—J. Scragg, Old Brewery, Armitage Road, Rugeley. Entirely self-acting and self setting trap cages, warranted to catch birds and reset without attention, 1s. 6d.; loose netting, strongest and finest obtainable, ½in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 5d. yard; ¾ mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d.; 10ft. deep, 4d. yard, post free; clap nets, ¾ or ½in. mesh netting, geared all round and sent complete for catching; write for prices before buying elsewhere: Morris, 112, Cape Hill, Birmingham.

THE NEATEST CAGE FRONTS.

12 by 12 3d., 2/6 dozen; 14 by 12 3½d., 3/- dozen; 16 by 12, 4d., 3/4 dozen; 18 by 12 4½d., 3/9 dozen; 20 by 12 5d., 4/2 dozen; 24 by 14 6d., 5/- dozen; tinned wire, 7 lbs. 1/6, 14 lbs. 2/10; pierced bars, ½, 5-16th, ⅜, ¾, 40 in. long, 7d dozen; seed boxes, glass fronts, 1/6 dozen; egg pans for sliding doors, 1.10; sanitary baths, 8d., 10d., 1/- each; sprays, 4d.; finger tins, 6d. dozen; suspension chains for fancy cages, 4d. each, 2/6 dozen; every description of cage made to order, and prompt dispatch; list free: W. Pimm, Icknield Port-rd., Birmingham.

in the trade would make such an offer as I have made for years past, viz., have any of my appliances on approval, test them side by side with similar articles from elsewhere, and if mine or not better value at lower price, smash them up and I will refund the whole of your money. For several years this offer has been made, but never yet has one article been broken up, nor have I ever been told that anything of mine came out of the test second best. This fact alone should prove to you who is the man to supply you with tip-top value at rock-bottom price. Clap nets made from ¾-inch mesh, genuine thread netting specially knitted for bird netting, 3 yards long, 5½ feet deep, 4 feet fly, 4/- pair; ditto, 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. Please note, these clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, each net guaranteed full measurement as stated, and are fitted up with staves, poles, pegs, hemp lines, and everything complete ready for immediate use; sparrow nets, fitted complete on 15 feet bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto, on 17 feet poles, 6/-; ditto on 19 feet poles, 6/6; Lark nets, 15 yards by 10 feet, 12/-; 18 yards, 15/-; 20 yards, 17/-; 25 yards, 21/-; 30 yards, 24/-; lined and geared ready for use. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, free from snarl or stretch, and strong as boat lines, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free. Loose netting, same as used in above clap nets, ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard, post free. This netting must not be confused with the thick American cotton netting, which is often sold for bird netting; mine is made from 60s. 3-ply thread, is very fine but strong, and does not show on the ground. Lark netting, 1½-inch mesh, 10 feet deep, 4d. yard, post free. The original Japanese bird-lime, guaranteed strongest lime made, will hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, does not run in sun, will hold even in the rain, and leaves the feathers clean in all cases, ¼-lb. 6d., ½-lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample 3d., all post free. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/-; ditto, 18 inches long, 9d. each. These net traps are by far the largest and most effective traps on the market. They can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time, call bird can be used inside them if desired, and will catch and hold uninjured any bird from Wren to Rook. Cannot get out of order, and so simple that any child can set them. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Round or square-topped call cages, all wire tops and wood bottoms, close wired, coloured green, and made by cage-makers, not navvies, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. Store cages and everything required by catchers always in stock. Send stamp for printed price list and hints on net making. All nets thoroughly tested before sent out, and sent on approval on the distinct understanding that you get all your money back if not perfectly satisfactory in every way. All goods are of same sterling quality as before, as I have not sacrificed quality for price. Remember that a useless pair of nets are dear at any price, but a good pair will catch their cost in an hour or so. See following letters and then judge for yourself:—"20, William-street, Witham Green, Boston, September 6th.—Sir,—Please send pair nets as follows. Two year ago I had a pair from ———, which were supposed to be rot-proof, but now they are completely rotten.—Yours, H. French." "Press Wood, nr. Whitchurch, September 5th.—Sir,—Please send following. I was very pleased with your netting; it has made a good pair nets.—Yours, S. Gibbons." "2, Luke-street, Burslem.—Sir,—I am highly satisfied with clap nets and drinkers, so now please send following.—Yours, J. Dean." "53, Liverpool-road, South Birkdale.—Sir,—Please send lb. lime. That I had from you last year was best I ever had. I have some from ———, but it is no use; I have missed over 70 in four days with it.—Yours, R. Makinson." "Mount Pleasant, Newburgh, Fife.—Sir,—I am again sending for bird-lime from you. I have got it the last three years, and it is best I ever had; no hother taking the birds off the twigs.—Yours, J. Panton." "56a, Napierston-terrace, Jamestown.—Sir,—Please send following goods. I had three net traps some time ago from elsewhere, but they are useless.—Yours, E. Bridgman." "Jessop-street, Codnor.—Sir,—Please send following. The last nets I had from you worked a treat, and come over like a flash of lightning. Just the thing for sharp birds.—Yours, P. Watson." Send your orders to the man who knows what is required for successful catching, and you will not be disappointed. I supply the leading professional catchers throughout the world. These are men who get their living by catching, and must have best appliances; so surely if I can satisfy them I can satisfy you. Remember, all on approval, cash or "Cage Birds" deposit system. See British Bird column for further advertisement.

struck you that by dealing with me you run no risk whatever of not getting exactly what you want? You see, I guarantee everything I sell to be exactly as represented, and in order to prove this to you I send all on approval, entirely at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or on "Cage Birds" deposit system, and if birds do not realise your every expectation you only have to return them, and back comes the whole of your money promptly and cheerfully. I was first advertiser to send all wild birds on approval, and during the whole 19 years I have been trading have never done business on any other terms. I have an exceptionally large stock of warranted genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, twelve 12/-; specially selected larger cocks, to moult for exhibition or muling, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 17/-; few extra special clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, fit for keenest competition, 3/-, 4/-, and 5/- each; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/-, twelve 7/-; splendid lot cock Bullfinches, 1/6, 2/-, and 2/6 each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- and 1/6 each; grand lot cock brown Linnets, all guaranteed clean moulted and full colour, with nut brown backs and rose red breasts, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for muling and contest singing, and guaranteed now in song, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 7/-; few exquisitely pencilled large show specimens, 1/6, 2/-, and 2/6 each; cock Greenfinches, 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6; yellow exhibition specimens, 1/- each; cock Chaffinches, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; exhibition specimens, 1/- each; Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/6, six 2/-, twelve 3/-; exhibition specimens, 1/ each; splendid lot big, bold, clean moulted cock Skylarks, in perfect feather, 6d. each, three 1/3, six 2/-, twelve 3/6; specially selected cocks, very steady for show or singing, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-; f. genuine finger tame, hand-reared 1910 cock Larks, in free song, 3/-, 4/-, and 5/- each; young Canaries, 2/6 couple, 12/- dozen; Goldfinch, Linnet, and Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; Lark runner cages, 6d. and 8d. each, 4/- and 6/- dozen; penny tin drinkers, 6d. dozen, three dozen 1/3, gross 4/-; zinc ditto, everlasting wear, 9d. dozen, three dozen 2/-, 6/- gross. Dealers please send stamp for wholesale cage list; prices and sizes will astonish you. Kindly note, I claim to have more birds through my hands than any other six men in the Midlands, and challenge denial; so persons on the look-out for exhibition specimens cannot do better than place their order with me, and there is one thing they may rely upon, and that is, if I cannot give them a good bird for their money I will not send inferior specimens. Although I do not make a song about it, I supply most of the leading exhibitors of to-day, and have supplied birds that have won at Crystal Palace and every other cage of note. Visitors to Birmingham are requested to call and inspect stock of the various advertisers. They will then see who really holds the birds. As the wording of my advertisements are being copied week by week, I beg to say I have no connection whatever with any other person in the trade, and that my only name and address is—

FANCIERS! FANCIERS! FANCIERS!

Send on all your surplus stock to me for disposal. I sell any quantity of Foreign Birds, and British, not fresh caught, must be well on seed; toy dogs, cavies, rabbits, squirrels, small animals on commission. My terms are most liberal, namely:—3d. in each 1/- on amount I realise. You pay carriage; advise all consignments by post. You have not any trouble with selling, I do this, and the prices I realise I am certain will give every satisfaction. This is a testimonial:—Mr. ——, Liquorpond Street, Boston, writes: I received cheque this morning, and am quite satisfied. I sent some birds to a dealer in London the same time; your cheque was nearly twice the amount; his were better birds.

The Show Season

is now here, and if you want to win, or stock birds to breed your own winners, you cannot do better than pay me a visit. Having had a successful breeding season, I have for disposal some real beauties, through moult and feathered like wax. Read this testimonial, received here September 18th, 1910: Gore-hill, North Sydney, New South Wales.—To Mr. L. Dykes—Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in writing to tell you I received the birds quite safe, and in the best of health. I am very pleased with them, and I think they are very cheap, as I have seen a good many birds that have been imported, and cost a lot more money, and I don't think they were any better, if they were as good. You sent me just what I wanted, for I feel sure when I introduce them into my strain I shall have plenty of length. The Buff hen is a real gem, and it will take more to buy her than I gave for the lot; and if I or any of my friends require any birds at any time in the future, I shall advise them to simply write to you for the birds, and leave it to your own judgment as to what you will send them, as I am sure when they receive the birds they will be quite satisfied. Again thanking you, and wishing you every success, I remain, yours respectfully, H. W. Terry. Long, stylish Yorkshire cocks at 5/6, 7/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each; fine racy hens at 3/6, 4/6, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each: clears, ticked, green-marked, cinnamon-marked, and clear pink-eyed, properly matched pairs at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-. Exhibition cocks or hens, that can win in keenest competition, at moderate prices. State wants; or, better still, come and see for yourself. Largest stock of high-class Yorkshires in Bradford. Place your orders with the old reliable breeder and exhibitor, who breeds his own winners, and can therefore give you the best satisfaction; and remember that I won over 500 cash prizes, cups, medals, etc., last season at all leading shows. All on seven days' approval at my risk. Travelling cages, with proper food for journey, 3d. extra.

NOW READY!

Clean Moulted,

A Splendid Lot of Norwich & Yorkshires.

The Price is Right, but the Quality is Better.

Have on approval and test the fact. Note Prices, NORWICH or YORKSHIRE:—

My prices for the genuine article—with sex guarantee is: Pairs, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 upwards; cocks, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 8/5, 10/6 upwards; hens, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6, 5/- upwards; travelling cages, 3d. extra.

1910 NORWICH OR YORKSHIRE COCKS.—Singing, and will make champions, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; now, to prove this, I offer to give six months' approval with these birds—i.e., to refund money in full or exchange same for a cock on full song. All other birds usual approval terms, all bearing my stamp as a guarantee of sex, and any bird proving not to be a cock bearing such stamp is exchanged, the lapse of time being no object. Hence, here is a security never offered by anyone else, and a safeguard against the now well-known "hen trick"—i.e., the tempting priced, so-called singing cocks, whether named Norwich, Hartz Rollers or Yorkshires, it is all the same. Why purchase these German hens when I offer you genuine Norwich hens? Three for 5/-, and all in second feather. Beware of the poor late-hatched examples sold, only to die by having to moult in winter.

Read just one out of hundreds received for this season's birds. It means real cheapness, because you get a good bird at a moderate price—not the impossible low price, which spells

143, Thoresby-street, Princes-avenue, Hull, September 18th, 1910.—I received the birds this morning. I am very pleased with the same. I should have had to pay double for the same birds in Hull. I know this, as I have priced them before.—H. J. Taylor to W. Rudd.

Travelling Cages, 3d. extra in all cases.

I should be glad to receive schedules of shows from secretaries, writes Mr. E. G. Roberts, Parkwood Head, Roche, Cornwall.

I have given up the fancy, writes Mr. Alfred Grey (Morpeth), and secretaries will oblige by not sending me any schedules.

Kindly note that I have removed from Barton Street to 59, James Street, Macclesfield, writes Mr. Fred Broadhurst.

We hear that Mr. W. Mundell, of Bradford, has been elected to judge at Harrogate on December 3.

Kindly note my new address, which is 7, Jubilee Terrace, Lochgelly, writes Mr. T. W. Peel, sec. of the Lochore and Glencraig F.A.

We have engaged Messrs. J. Dixon and J. H. Adam to judge at our open show on December 10, writes Mr. J. Campbell, hon. sec. of the Annandale C.B.F.A.

Kindly note my change of address which is: Back Lane, Westwood, Jacksdale, Notts, writes Mr. F. Maltby, hon. sec. of the Selston and Dis. F.S.

The Earlston Cage Bird, etc., show has been fixed for November 30, instead of December 17, so as not to clash with Selkirk, writes Mr. John Brockie, the sec. of the Earlston Society.

"Novice" (Blackburn) writes suggesting that secretaries of shows should include among other particulars in their show advertisements the name of the place where the show is being held.

I have been appointed hon. sec. of the Sunderland C.B.A. in succession to Mr. W. Reid, writes Mr. J. Jeffrey. All communications should be addressed to me at 3, Glenthorne Road, Roker, Sunderland.

I am proud to inform you that our membership now totals 60, which is, I think, very good, considering our society is only five months old, write Messrs. King and Joiner, secs. of the Portsmouth C.B.S.

Our show is being held on November 5 at the Masonic Hall, writes Mr. T. Cameron, sec. of the Boness and Dis. F.A. Messrs. D. Buchan, G. Hislop, J. Goodfellow, and R. Kay will judge. We are hoping to have a big entry.

I must state that I am pleased with "Cage Bird Hybrids," and think it is a very good book for the price. I have learnt from it a lot of valuable information which I never knew before.—A. GOODALL (Rotherhithe).

We have fixed November 19 for our 2nd annual show. We have been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. J. Winter (Edinburgh) to place the cards, writes Mr. R. Irvine, assistant sec. of the Blairgowrie Society.

I trust fanciers will help us and send entries for our show on September 28, writes Mr. H. Jones Robins, sec. of the Liskeard Society. We do not want our show to be struck off the map for want of support.

May success crown all your labours for the good of the Fancy, writes Mr. R. Irvine (Blairgowrie). I have been a constant reader of your most valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, from the beginning.

At our meeting on September 28, writes Mr. J. A. Tyler, sec. of the Leicester C.B.S., at the Saracen's Head Hotel, Leicester, we are to have a lecture and exhibition of seeds and foods by Mr. T. R. Trower. A hearty invitation is extended to all.

Schedules for our fifth annual open show have now been sent out, and should be delivered this week-end, writes Mr. R. S. Black, hon. sec. of the Darlington C. and B.B.F.A. Will any fancier overlooked or requiring a schedule please send me a postcard?

Mr. And. Wilson, of 247, Argyle Street, Glasgow, sends us particulars of his "Perfect" moist atmospheric drying cage. Those of our readers who are in the habit of washing their birds will do well to apply for a descriptive list.

I have taken over the secretaryship of the Pentre and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. G. Lingard, and all communications respecting the society should be addressed to me at 122, Llewellyn Street, Pentre, Rhondda. The late sec., Mr. W. Thomas, has resigned owing to pressure of business.

The Burton-on-Trent C.B.S. have gone to considerable expense to obtain the Victoria Hall, High Street, for their show on October 22, write Messrs. Elliott and Wood, the secs. It is an ideal room, having large windows and electric light. We have obtained cheap railway bookings for a 30-mile radius.

It is with deep feelings of regret, writes Mr. J. Spencer, hon. sec. of the Ardwick and Dis. C.B.S., that I have to report the death of the mother of one of our members—Mrs. Snape, of Wilmslow—after a painful illness. She was a true lover of birds, and greatly assisted her son in his hobby. I am sure all fanciers will join me in conveying our deepest sympathy and condolence to the family in their sad bereavement.

We have four medals, including the Border Fancy medal, to be competed for at our show on October 15—50 classes, 43 specials, and reliable judges, writes Mr. W. Foster, sec. of the Buckhaven and Dis. C.B.S. We could not help the clashing of date with Lochgelly; we were first to advertise in CAGE BIRDS' "Show dates fixed" column.

A most interesting lecture, entitled "Suitable Wild Seeds and How to Recognise Them," was delivered on September 13, by Mr. Fred Bowman, the popular hon. sec. of the Yorkshire C.C. of Scotland, before the members of the Glasgow and West of Scotland N.M.B. and F.B.C. The lecture was full of practical points and proved very valuable to all who heard it. We shall hope to publish it in full in an early issue of CAGE BIRDS.

A SLUGGISH BIRD.

AUSTRALIAN FROGMOUTH, OR MOREPORK.

The Australian Frogmouth, or Morepork, is one—the best known and largest—of about two dozen members of a family. Its size is about that of a Crow. It has an Owl-like walk or hop, as awkward as it is curious; and although, like Owls, it lives chiefly upon mice and small birds, it does not, like them, cast pellets. The species are remarkably sluggish, and they are sometimes almost comical in appearance. They are nocturnal, and sleep soundly during the day.

Scotch Fancy Derby O.A.

The Scotch Fancy National Derby O.A. show, held at Glasgow on September 17th, proved an unqualified success. Much of the credit of this rests with Mr. Thos. Smith, the energetic and popular sec., whose efforts were deserving of the excellent result obtained.

The C.B.U. List.

Through some confusion of the date, the Nottingham Permanent O.S. show date was, writes Mr. Geo. W. F. Lythgoe, sec. of the Cage Bird Union, omitted from the list of C.B.U. fixtures in your last issue. This show is to be held under C.B.U. rules on October 15; will fanciers kindly note?

Crested Canary Club.

The list of Crested C.C. members and matter for printing in schedules and catalogues has been posted to the secretaries of all societies receiving our support, writes Mr. J. S. Clarke, the hon. sec. In the event of one having miscarried I will forward duplicate if the secretary will apply. I am still in the position to allot the Roberts cup to two societies, providing they apply by return.

National Green-marked Y.C.C.

The 1910-11 handbook of the National Green-marked Yorkshire Canary Club has just been issued. It contains the standards, etc., for the variety, the rules, and bye-laws of the club, a list of specials for competition, a list of the members' names and addresses, etc. The manual is beautifully got up, and reflects every credit on the hon. sec., Mr. F. Armstrong, of 78, Pear Street, Halifax, who will be pleased to forward particulars as to membership, etc., to would-be members.

High Praise for "Our Canaries."

I cannot speak too highly in praise of "Our Canaries." It is the finest work on Canaries that I have ever seen. I am surprised that it can be got out so cheaply. It seems to me that it should be in the hands of every Canary fancier. I cannot find words to express my appreciation for your work.—(Signed) A. W. BESSEY, Sunnyvale, California.—[Mr. Bessey is the foremost breeder of birds in America, and has purchased hundreds of birds from England in his efforts at creating prize strains.]

The Norwich Plainhead Club.

May I again remind members of the Norwich Plainhead Club that subscriptions are due and must be paid before the first cup show (Wellingborough) or they will not be elegible to compete for specials? I should be glad if they will let me have same as early as possible, so that there may be no disappointments. I should also be glad to hear from fanciers who are desirous of joining the club, and would draw their attention to the grand list of specials in Wellingborough schedule, which anyone joining now can compete for.—JNO. HOPKINS, hon. sec.

The R.S.P.C.A.'s Scandalous Attack on Bird-keeping.

Bird lovers beware! The R.S.P.C.A. is on the warpath to destroy your hobby. The recent decision in the High Courts given in their favour has prompted them to further action, and in every district their officials are on the look-out for infringements of the Wild Birds' Protection Act, as it has been interpreted by Lark-eating Justices. Last week we reported a case brought against a London bird dealer for exposing recently caught Finches in London. This week we give full details of a scandalous prosecution against a Nottingham man. The absurdity of the position is this. If Mr. Swift had customers who liked Finches as edible delicacies, he could have sold thousands of them after their necks had been wrung without undergoing a penny fine or a minute's imprisonment. Touch the stomach of these insane sentiment mongers and they howl at once. Attack the so-called "sports" of their rich subscribers and they are silent. Listen to the twaddle served up by even such a reputable paper as the "Nottingham Guardian" on this point:—

> Four years ago, on the initiative of the City Council, the keeping of recently caught Goldfinches was prohibited within the borough, and these songsters are thus protected throughout the whole year. Yet the defendant in this case was disposing of no less than a dozen young Goldfinches freshly caught. The bird catcher's trade is not one of an elevating kind, and few outside the circle of those who profit by the traffic in birds would regret its abolition. But if Goldfinches are worth a sovereign apiece, as was suggested yesterday, persons will be found to capture and sell them, taking the risk of detection and punishment. The fact that very few Goldfinches are caught here may be accepted as justification for the complete protection afforded them by the wisdom of the Corporation. Many varieties of feathered songsters would be annihilated ruthlessly for the sake of filthy lucre were preservation not ordered by humane local authorities. Have the people engaged in bird-catching ever given one serious thought to what would be lost if they were allowed to carry on their destructive campaign without check or hindrance? Robbed of its singing birds, the country would be deprived of half its beauty and attractiveness. Not much artistic perception is needed to realise this. It is because beautiful birds are a delight to the senses, creatures of joy and brightness and charm, that true Nature lovers feel grateful for the punishment of those who heartlessly deprive them of freedom.

If the writer of this mushy nonsense had had the slightest idea of the law on the point, or knew in the least what he was talking about, he would have seen that the Goldfinches in question were caught, or, at any rate, brought in from an entirely different county to Notts—miles away from the district it is so desired to protect. The local Corporation are perfectly right to protect the birds within their own county, but what the law says now is that it shall protect the birds in other counties as well, even though the local authorities in those counties may wish for farming and agricultural reasons to see their numbers lessened. What this insane slush slinger and others like him are doing, is to put a premium upon bird slaughter, and this fact has been admitted by the Editor of the official organ of the R.S.P.C.A. itself. We who keep birds, who study their little ways and requirements, who spend our days and even nights in keeping them well cared for—we who know how bitterly and brutally cruel Nature is to her creatures—have no desire to carry on our hobby "without check or hindrance." We wish to be under proper legislative control, What we do object to is the usurpation by shallow-pated sentimentalists of the law and the arrogation to themselves of such special virtues as sympathy and kindliness to animals, even at man's expense. We hope to announce something on this subject shortly that will give the R.S.P.C.A. a little food for thought.

City and Suburban A.C.B. Shows.

I am delighted to say, writes Mr. V. Wynn, the hon. sec. of the City and Suburban A.C.B., that after many disappointments we have at last secured the large hall on the ground floor of the Institute for our future shows, the inauguration of which will be the annual one, taking place on November 18 and 19. This magnificent hall (with a commanding entrance) capable of holding over 1,000 birds is 72ft. long by 33ft., having eight skylight windows, and 24 32-candle-power electric lights. This will now meet our growing requirements, and there will be less cramping of the exhibits, and greater facilities for tasteful staging, besides better accommodation for the comfort of visitors.

One of our surplus coloured plates will be given away free with each copy of our next week's issue. The price of "Cage Birds" will be one penny as usual.—Editor.

Northern Crest Club.

Our esteemed president, J. Ford Maling, Esq., has decided to present the club with a silver challenge cup for the best old Crest or Crest-bred exhibited by a member at our annual club show, writes Mr. J. G. Hutchinson, hon. sec. of the Northern Crest Club. Conditions: To become the absolute property of any member it must be won three times in succession or four times in all. It is not necessary for the bird to have been bred by the exhibitor, although it must be his bona-fide property. I feel sure all members will concur with me in thanking Mr. Maling for his generous gift, and I hope they will show their appreciation by making a good entry at Blaydon.

Echoes from Glasgow.

That the show was a success for quality; that it was down in numbers; that the Derby cock was a champion yellow; that it was the best yellow cock seen for years; that it was a most popular win; that the second yellow was a brother to the Derby winner; that it was a fine bird; that the second yellow hen has gone to Corkerhill; that it was a grand bird, and Monlgomery knows it; that Mc. was pleased with his deal; that the second yellow cock has gone to East Kilbride; that J. D. Brown was the buyer at a fair figure; that it has gone to a true sportsman; that his second buff cock is a champion; that the Derby bird should win next Saturday at Edinburgh; that the Edinburgh fanciers turned out well; that their exhibits all through were a grand lot; that some good birds were out of the tickets; that the runner-up for the blue ribbon was the first yellow hen; that buff cocks and yellows were grand classes; that entries are going back while quality is improving; that the turn out of visitors and fanciers was fair; that the secretary for the city show was pushing for specials; that he (McDonald) met with much success; that our friend "James Thomson" was missed; that the secretary had a busy time; that there will be a big muster at Edinburgh next Saturday.—"SCOTCH FANCY."

Thrush Causes an Accident.

A remarkable accident befel Mr. J. A. Walker, one of the drivers at the Chester steam shed of the London and N.W. Railway, says the "Chester Chronicle." The driver left just after midnight on September 11, and was running at a high speed between Bagillt and Holywell when the left-hand glass, through which he was keeping a look-out, was smashed, he being momentarily dazed. Looking round for an explanation it was discovered that a dead Thrush was on the footplate. That a Thrush should be flying about between 12 and one o'clock on a very dark morning is extraordinary. The Thrush has been sent to Mr. Newstead, of Chester, for preservation.

Stamford C.B.S. Show.

We find that if our open show is held on the date originally fixed, i.e., November 24, writes Mr. A. W. Ludlow, hon. sec. of the Stamford and Dis. C.B.S., we shall in all probability lose many of our exhibitors living at places within easy reach of Cambridge, fanciers who, after a two days' show there, can hardly be expected to patronise ours the day after. We have made arrangements with our two judges (Messrs. J. Dobson and R. J. Howe) to come on November 17, and the Cage Bird Union have kindly allowed us to alter the date under the circumstances. We are adding a class for A.V. British Hardbill hen, also two classes for novices for Canaries, and an extra selling class for Canaries value 10s. We are also dividing the first two classes of Norwich and Yorkshires into clear and ticked, separate from evenmarked and variegated.

OUR HOLIDAY COMPETITION.

The following are the successful entrants in our recent holiday competition in order of place:—

1st prize: C. Brown, 4, Hazelwood Road, Northampton.

2nd prize: John Evans, 96, Willow Street, Oswestry.

4th prize: G. Bates, 110, Holly Park Road, New Southgate.

5th prize: Percy Brill, 80, Cheneys Road, Leytonstone.

6th Prize: W. O. Brooke, Hopeville, 102, Nortoft Road, Bournemouth.

7th prize: C. P. Hamond, 8, Queens Terrace, Otley.

8th prize: G. Bourne, Upper Green, Eversley.

Will these competitors kindly place themselves in communication with us? The total entry was very large indeed, but the number of coupons sent in by each competitor on the average was comparatively small. The winner won with 275 coupons. As each coupon represented three new readers of CAGE BIRDS, the labour in gathering these recruits must have been very onerous. We record our most grateful thanks to all participants, and have every reason to congratulate ourselves and them on the splendid results achieved.

The Commoner Diseases of Birds: Their Symptoms and Treatment.

Although not easily recognised during life, fatty degeneration of the liver is a subject of great importance, and one in which preventive treatment is a very great consideration. It is a fairly common disease, but not of such frequent occurrence as has been suggested at certain post mortems. After death the liver is of the first organs to undergo putrefactive changes, altering its colour and consistency, a fact which has led to many errors in diagnosis after death by those unaccustomed to these changes. There is also a fatty infiltration of the liver, due to an excess of fat stored in the cells of the liver, and which occasionally causes death.

In fatty degeneration there is a conversion of the true liver substances into fat, and this is a much more serious affection. It arises from a diet which is too rich, or overfeeding, or the continued and prolonged use of many medicines. There are no definite symptoms of the disease; the only changes noticed at post mortem examinations are in the size of the organ, which may be reduced or enlarged, while if pressure with a pencil or other small object is applied to its surface it leaves a permanent pit, its consistence is softened, and it will assume a yellow or ochre tint.

Fatty degeneration occurs more often in individual cases (but seldom as an epidemic), where a bird is too closely confined, kept too warm, and too freely fed. To obviate loss from this cause, green food should be allowed freely, and the occasional administration of a saline aperient be adopted, preferably sulphate of soda, which, acting as an aperient, possesses also a stimulating action on the liver. Five to ten grains may be given in three or four tablespoonfuls of drinking water twice a week, according to the species of bird being treated.

Fatty degeneration of the liver may also arise in the course of other infective diseases; similarly so with other affections of this organ, such as bacterial necrosis, arising from contagion. But these cannot be included in the present work, which deals only with those of non-infectious origin.

Peritonitis: Metro-Peritonitis.

The peritoneum or lining membrane of the body cavity of birds is very frequently the seat of disease—occurring in the course of infectious disease, but more commonly in connection with the reproductive system, associated with disease of the ovary or oviduct. In all cases it is induced by the agency of bacteria, both pus-forming and putrefactive bacteria. It arises mainly from local conditions in the abdomen and pelvis due to rupture of the oviduct from retention of an egg, and occasionally from the giving way of abscesses or the presence of tubercular growths (as seen in Parrots).

The peritoneum in its intact state is a sealed cavity which possesses varying powers of resistance. When rupture of the oviduct occurs, and organisms, together with infected egg contents, escape into it, it rapidly undergoes diseased changes, together with its contained viscera. On opening the body of a bird so affected, it is seen to be filled with fluid, generally turbid and offensive in character, and the surface of the bowels, liver, etc., is covered with a thick purulent material. This rupture is of extremely common occurrence, and not always recognised until after death. Hens so affected refuse food entirely, will mope and assume a somnolent attitude; there are, in fact, no true diagnostic symptoms displayed—manipulation only will reveal the true state of affairs, when, on examining the body, it will be found tense, swollen and painful to pressure. Death invariably results, and is primarily induced by the retention of an egg, either soft or shelled; it can occur in both instances.

Egg Binding.

The subject of egg binding is a much hackneyed one, and has been written upon so largely that it is scarcely worthy of further description. I will, however, give a brief outline as to its causation. It arises in connection with the passage of a shell-less egg along the oviduct, when its flaccidity and elasticity prevent its becoming expelled. The oviduct is a muscular organ, as is the case in corresponding parts of the reproductive system in all animals; it is a tube, or passage, along which the egg passes. The bird possesses one ovary, and, corresponding to it, a single oviduct, whose function as a muscular organ is to expel its contained egg. In the case of a shell-less egg, its muscular power is nullified, as it is unable to gain pressure on its contents. Egg binding occurring even when the shell is well formed is generally induced by loss of power, or inertia, of the muscular coats of the oviduct, this happening often in birds of a gross tendency, where the muscular tissue is of low vitality. Surrounding influences, which depress the system generally, are also responsible in otherwise strong birds, and of these cold easterly winds are the most prolific.

The fancier is well conversant with procedure to be adopted in cases of egg-binding. Steaming, perhaps, is one of the most popular methods, and is a good one, inasmuch as it is safe. Puncture of the egg (with evacuation of its contents) by means of a fine stillette rendered aseptic by boiling, requires great skill, as any injury sustained by this method invariably results in death. In all cases lubricants should be used. Medicinal treatment should be directed to increasing the muscular activity of the oviduct, but, unfortunately, the agents which will bring this about are not easily tolerated by the small cage birds, so that we perforce have to rely upon a general tonic, such as the infusions of gentian, calumba, etc., in doses of 3 to 10 drops, depending upon the bird to be treated.

The theories as to the non-elaboration of the shell in cases of egg-binding, or where hens provide eggs minus shell, are numerous and varied. Sometimes we find such cases attributed to inertia of the oviduct, but more often to a decrease of lime salts at the bird's command; but these have never been satisfactorily explained. The shell-less egg occurs in wild birds also. I have found it on post-mortem of a Sparrow found dead in my own garden. It could almost be expected that a bird in its free state would have no lack of lime salts at disposal, so that one is inclined to the view that it is not always dependent upon lack of shell constituents in the food.

The Roller Canary: How Feeding Affects the Song.

Members of the British Roller C.C. meet to discuss the relative values of Foods.

At a well-attended meeting of the British Roller Canary Club, held at "The Royal Mail," Noble Street, London, E.C., on Sept. 13th (Mr. F. E. Fisher presiding), an interesting discussion took place on the subject of the best method of feeding for the improvement of the song of Roller Canaries.

An Experiment.

Mr. F. A. LESTER stated that he was making an experiment by which he hoped to prove that Rollers could be trained just as well as in the past, apart from the usual darkening process. He had, he said, fifteen or sixteen young cock birds which were progressing favourably in the matter of song. They were kept in cages, and so placed that, whilst no bird could see the others, the cages were not darkened, or the light in any way obscured. So far, none of the birds had sung any harsh, high, or loud notes; he was, therefore, justified in thinking his experiment a success. He saw no reason why Rollers could not be trained without being covered up. A breeder always reckoned that out of, say, forty or fifty birds, he would have from ten to twenty that were useless, except as ordinary song-birds; and if at the end of the season his (the speaker's) percentage of "wasters" was no larger, he certainly would not admit that his experiment had been a failure.

Mr. FISHER said that the members of the Club, and Roller fanciers generally, would watch the experiment closely; but they would do well, he thought, to reserve their judgment until after, say, November.

Rape Seed versus Canary and Hemp.

Mr. C. ROEHL stated that when he received any good birds, he almost invariably found in the travelling boxes a seed mixture consisting practically of good German rape; there were a few Canary seeds, and a few hemp seeds, but there was a good deal of shelled oats. On examining the mixture he found that the birds had always given the shelled oats the preference. One breeder in Leipzig he knew had not had a corn of Canary seed in the house, and the last thing he said to him (the speaker) was: Be careful and leave Canary seed alone. By the use of Canary seed Roller fanciers would find that in time the song of their birds would go right up and become much too strong. They wanted to keep the song of the Roller Canary low and sweet. If the birds were given plenty of good German rape seed they would retain their beautiful low song.

Mr. A. GLOECKNER: The Germans give their birds a food consisting of three parts—one part German rape seed, one part oats, and the other part niger, hemp and Canary seeds; the hens have this mixture all the year round, and so do the cocks, except that for two days in every week they have rape seed only.

Mr. C. ROEHL: If you go to many German shows, you will find that they have no Canary or hemp seed in the place to feed the birds on; and they never use either, except when a bird is taken queer.

Mr. GLOECKNER: The Canary and hemp seeds, the Germans admit, make the birds lazy, but then the song becomes deeper in consequence; Mr. Seifert himself told me so.

Mr. NORRIS: Is it not a fact that there is advertised in the German papers what is called "a song mixture," which is mostly composed of Canary and hemp seeds?

Mr. ROEHL: Yes; but you can't depend always on those advertisements. I know the birds like the hemp seed—they like it because it is nice and full, and can get a lot out of it. A Goldfinch, for instance, will readily pick out hemp, and you may put all sorts of dainties before him, but he will go for that first.

Can Anyone Tell?

Mr. NORRIS: Can anyone tell me why German rape should make a bird deep in song any more than Canary seed?

Mr. FISHER: The German rape, I take it, keeps the song nice and low.

Mr. NORRIS: But why? What is there in the seed that it should?

Mr. FISHER: I have seen a number of birds that were fed on Canary seed simply because the breeder could not procure a good rape seed; and his birds sang very loud. Their song was very disconnected, and included a high note.

Mr. LESTER stated that for years back, since he had first had articles translated into English from the German Press, there had always been a certain number of gentlemen who advocated the use of Canary and mixed seeds, as well as those who advised the giving of rape seed.

Mr. FISHER: Yes; they give German rape as a staple food, and the Canary seed occasionally.

Not Made in Germany.

Mr. ROEHL: We call it "German rape," but as a matter of fact most of it is grown in the South of Russia by German farmers; and the German seed merchants send their agents there to buy up the best possible.

Mr. FISHER: Does not a German breeder get as much of that good rape seed as he can, knowing that when he changes his rape seed he is going to change his birds' song?

Mr. LESTER: If it is so, it is news to me. Do you—may I ask—buy the best German rape seed?

Mr. FISHER: Yes; I use it as a staple food, and I feed my birds two or three times a week on a mixed seed.

In answer to a question, Mr. LESTER stated that he used rape seed, but he would not, he said, admit that the birds picked it out eagerly. You admit, he said, that German rape does not fulfil all the conditions necessary for the bird's life. But the German argues in a totally different manner. He will tell you that he gives German rape seed because, on analysis, it will be found to contain all that is necessary to feed a bird, keep up its system, and help to form bone, flesh, and muscle; and that is the reason they use the rape seed.

Mr. ROEHL instanced the German Piping Bullfinch. Here is a bird, he said, which was more trained than the German Canary, because it had to be taught to pipe tunes. The Germans gave this bird German rape and nothing else, except from five to eight corns of hemp every day, and a little egg food.

Mr. J. C. SCHLUTER: I have read a good deal, and I find that the Germans' first study is: What is good for the birds; then they give them the best food.

Mr. GLOECKNER: It is said that rape seed to the German Roller is what milk and eggs are to human beings—it contains everything that a bird wants.

Mr. SCHLUTER: The fact that birds like certain foods better than others is no proof that they should have those foods.—(Hear, hear.)—Some humans like whisky, but it does not do to let them have it always. (Laughter.)

Mr. LESTER: I consider we have many birds in England that can compare with the very best in Germany; are these birds fed entirely on German rape seed?

What Does "Staple" Mean?

Mr. F. J. RANDALL, who had several birds at the meeting, in reply to a question said that he fed his birds on German rape in the large pots, and they had the egg-tray full of Canary seed every day.

Mr. LESTER: And is it not a fact, Mr. Randall, that every grain of Canary seed is eaten out?

Mr. RANDALL: Yes.

Mr. FISHER: Then Mr. Randall's staple food for his birds is rape seed, and you can't get away from that fact.

Mr. LESTER: I will guarantee that if Mr. Randall fills one of the trays one day with rape seed, and another with Canary seed, the next day there will not be a teaspoonful of the rape eaten, whilst the tray that contained the Canary seed will be quite empty. If that is so, how can you say that German rape seed is the staple food?

Mr. ROEHL: Which does Mr. Randall consider is the staple food?

Mr. RANDALL: I always keep a pot full of rape in the cage.

Mr. ROEHL: Then rape seed must be the staple food.

Mr. LESTER: Man's staple food is wheat.

Mr. ROEHL: And a little bit of roast beef sometimes, don't forget. (Laughter.)

Mr. FISHER: The birds only gorge if they are given too much Canary seed, and it is that which makes them so violent in song.

Mr. NORRIS: Now, that is what I want to know; why should it? Can two human beings, having both the same kind of voice, alter their voices by the one feeding on beef steak and the other on fish? Is a change of diet going to make any difference? When you say that rape seed is going to make a difference to a bird's song you are saying that it is going to alter the larynx, which is absurd.

Mr. FISHER: Isn't it a fact that if you give a man plenty of beer, he will become lively, and sing and shout?

Always Sleeping.

Grainger.—She is affected by the approach of the moult, and you will need to be careful with her. A vapour bath daily for a week would do her much good, of course taking due care she is not exposed to any chill afterwards. You should get Part V. of "Our Canaries," in which you will find a special cabinet shown for this work which you could very easily make out of a discarded grocer's packing case. Keep the hen in a nice warm corner, free from draughts, and throw a light cover over cage to induce her to drop into moult as quickly as possible. See she is not troubled with red mites. As staple diet give plain canary seed. Every second day give separately a pinch of summer rape, and a piece of bread-and-milk the size of a hazel nut, dusted slightly each time for the first week, with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with soft sugar. On the alternate days give a third of a teaspoonful of maw. Continue giving a little chickweed, flower-heads of groundsel, or dandelion, daily. Keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand regularly. In the drinking water give 6 drops of syrup of buckthorn and a pinch of Epsom salts daily for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, 6 of tincture of gentian, and a few blades of saffron daily for a week.

Ailing Roller.

C. W. C.—The chief, if not the sole, cause lies in being considerably over-fed, though it is just possible it may also be failing from age, which would tend to aggravate the condition. Try following treatment for a month, and if not quite well at the end of this time, write again and report result, referring to this reply. Keep it quite free from cold draughts, but still let it have plenty of fresh pure air, and see that it is not exposed to the fumes of burning lights in the evenings. The bird should be moulting now, and, therefore, will be all the better for being in a nice cosy position, but its place not overheated. See that its cage is quite free from insect pests, and keep it well strewn with clean gritty sand. As a staple diet, give a mixture of two parts Canary to one part summer rape. Limit quantity given to a small teaspoonful per day, and two days each week reduce this quantity by one half, and add a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake or dry biscuit to the diet. Give a liberal supply of green-food daily—chickweed, dandelion, flower heads of groundsel, but see that none is allowed to remain in cage to become stale. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week. During the next week give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. In the two following weeks repeat the treatment of the two first weeks, as above, in the same order.

Yorkshire Sitters.

A New Beginner.—As you say you know the birds have been in a draught, you may also take it that you know one great exciting cause of their condition. Another cause is their position. Most certainly the steam from the bath will do them harm. Had you taken in "Our Canaries," now being issued in monthly parts at 6d., you would have known this, as the question was fully dealt with in an early part, which no Canary fancier should be without. Now, to try to cure the birds, treat as follows: First remove them to a nice, cosy position, not necessarily over-heated, but still not on the cold side. Keep them in box cages, and see they are quite free from draughts, great fluctuations of heat and cold, are free from red mites, and are not exposed to the fumes of burning lights. Keep cages quite clean and strewn with gritty sand. The grit from the seashore, if not contaminated with animal refuse or sewage, will do admirably for this purpose. Continue present staple diet, and in addition give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with 2 drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight, and twice a week afterwards as long as seems to be necessary. On the alternate days give a quarter-teaspoonful of maw seed. Give a little chickweed, seed stalks of plantain, or shepherd's purse, as green food four times a week. Allow the bath only on bright, mild days, until better. In the drinking water give 6 drops of rhubarb syrup and a pinch of Epsom salts for three consecutive days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, 10 each of oxymel of squills, and tincture of lobelia, and 2 of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another fortnight afterwards.

Treatment of Wheezy Norwich.

Miss Foulger, Somerset.—The first step is to look well into the position in which the bird is kept, in order to see that the causes of the wheeziness are not still present after treatment is commenced. It is perfectly useless following up any treatment unless the cause is discovered and removed. Therefore, see that the bird is kept in a cosy position, not necessarily overheated, but where the temperature is fairly equable day and night, the air always pure and fresh, and free from the fumes of burning lights in the evenings, but still quite free from any cold draughts. See that the cage, which should be of the box type for preference, is free from insect pests. Give a staple diet of three parts Canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Every second day for a fortnight give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, and three drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and lightly sprinkled with soft sugar. On the alternate days give a pinch of maw seed. Continue to give a little green-food daily—preferably chickweed, or dandelion. Allow it to bathe on nice mild days only until it is well. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and a pinch of Epsom salts daily for three days, and afterwards give twenty drops of whisky, ten each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week afterwards. A mealworm each day for a time would prove very beneficial for him. There is no objection to his eating the blooms of nasturtium.

Thirsty Souls.

Thirsty.—Your feeding and management are at fault somewhere, but you do not give enough details for me to say where. The excessive thirst is probably due to the diarrhœa. See all your seeds and other foods are perfectly sweet and sound, the water supply pure, and that the food and water vessels, cages, and perches, are scrupulously clean. Cover cage floor well with sawdust until the diarrhœa is cured, and change and burn the sawdust frequently. Give a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape as staple diet. Every second day give a morsel of ripe banana and a pinch of hemp seed, and on the alternate days a piece of bread-and-milk the size of a hazel nut, with 2 drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and strewn over liberally with maw seed. Give no green food at all until quite cured of the looseness. Continue this dietary as long as is necessary to effect this purpose, then gradually bring the birds on to the usual diet frequently mentioned. In the drinking water give for one day 6 drops of syrup of buckthorn and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny piece, and after this 20 drops of whisky, and 6 each of tincture of gentian, and laudanum each day for three days. If the looseness is not quite corrected in that time continue giving the last-named mixture every second day until the desired effect is obtained, and slightly dust the bread and milk with carbonate of bismuth. When the looseness is removed you may dissolve a piece of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, a piece of sulphate of iron half as big, in two tablespoonfuls of water; add 6 drops of dilute sulphuric acid, and give in place of drinking water for a day or two.

Brevities.

Deformed Toes (T. H. Bennett).—You omit to say whether it is the hind toe, or one or more of the fore toes, which prevents my giving you any very definite reply. Better write again and, if possible, enclose a rough sketch showing which toes are affected, and in what way, or failing this, explain fully how the toes are, and whether the birds occasionally rest on the perch with the toes in the correct position. The remedy, if any is of use, should be used with the least possible delay, therefore, whilst waiting for a reply give thin, almost round, perches, about the size of a lead pencil, or a very little larger, in circumference. If only the hind toes are involved this may be all that is really necessary to correct the deformity.

To Harry Red Mites (Cingalee Again).—In such a cage it is an easy matter to eradicate mites. You failed in dealing with the cage and omitting its appurtenances, and the wall, book, or nail. Place cage bodily into a copper full of boiling water, and boil for a few minutes. Treat seed and water tins in like manner, also the cover you place over cage at night, and, in fact, everything that will bear it. If the cover will not bear boiling, bake it in an oven as hot as possible, short of singeing, for 10 or 15 minutes, or dust it very freely all over with fresh pyrethrum powder, roll up tightly, clap powder well into the fibre, and lay it aside for a few hours, then well shake out-doors. Make up the camphor solution advised to "D. Honey," and thoroughly saturate the hook, cord, etc., repeating the dressing once or twice at intervals of a day. Whilst these operations are being carried through give the bird a bath each day with a few drops of essence of quassia in it, or soak a teaspoonful of quassia chips in the water for bath over-night. Slightly anoint bare places on wings once or twice with castor oil. Keep bird fairly warm and free from draught to expedite the moulting process.

Remedy for Red Mite (D. Honey).—The only remedy is to exterminate it. Have a systematic overhaul and leave little or no chance of survival. You might have seen a method for dealing with aviaries in last issue. If birds are in cages, wait until the moult is over before disturbing them. Meantime clean out cages each week, look well into all joints, corners, and cracks, joints of doors, ends of perches, etc. Kill mites by pressure. Make a solution of one ounce camphor in half pint of methylated spirit, and dip the ends of perches in this each week, and apply a little with a small brush to all likely place for mites to be hiding. Wipe the surplus off the varnish quickly when the crack or joint is flooded, or the varnish will be destroyed and require renewing. This will keep mites under until moult is over, when you should thoroughly saturate them with the solution, or equal parts of lzal and water, and when quite dry re-distemper and varnish if necessary. At same time, do all seed-boxes, fittings, staging, if any used, and also the wall against which the cages are placed.

To get rid of Fat (Anxious).—You must have been overdoing the commissariat. If they are now quite through the moult put them in good sized cages, where they can get plenty of exercise. Limit the amount of food supplied. As a staple give plain canary. Allow only a small teaspoonful daily to each bird. On two days each week reduce this by one half, and add an equal quantity of a mixture of maw and summer rape, in equal parts, and on one other day each week give half a teaspoonful of egg food or crushed plain biscuit—but not the cod liver oil biscuit—and again, when giving this, reduce the quantity of canary by one-half, so that the total amount of daily food only equals a small teaspoonful per bird. Give a liberal supply of green food daily. Continue this feeding until they are sufficiently reduced, but be careful not to forget the daily ration. In the drinking water give 6 drops of syrup of buckthorn and as much sulphate of soda every second day for a week as will cover a sixpence; then miss a week, and repeat for another week.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Treatment for Young Amazon.

J. Lyon.—Continue to supply the boiled maize (this must be prepared fresh daily as it soon turns sour), put over same half a teaspoonful of Parrish's chemical food, and let this soak in before supplying to the bird. Also give ripe fruit—tempt it with various kinds; it may refuse it at first, but will ultimately take it. Also supply nuts and plain biscuit and a seed mixture in about the following proportions: One quart each Canary and white millet seeds, and half a pint each of oats, hemp, maize, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds. When it is eating heartily of the seed mixture, the boiled maize need only be given about twice a week as a change. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in the cage, and permit the bird to satisfy its thirst three or four times a day. Every fourth day in lieu of the plain drinking water, supply one part Dinneford's magnesia to two parts of water, continue this for about a month, providing the [illegible] do not become watery loose. Keep [illegible] some warm yet light and airy position, [illegible] will be free from draught.

Does Moult Affect Speech?

J. W.—A great strain is put on a bird's constitution during the moult, and birds frequently get rather low in tone during the operation, and it is quite easy to understand that when this is the case, they are but little inclined to talk and whistle, but rather to mope. I should give this bird a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia, 1 part magnesia, 2 parts of water, and repeat this as may be necessary to keep the bowels moving freely, but the voiding must not be allowed to remain watery-loose. On other days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, and confine the diet to seed mixture, with ripe fruit (as much as it will take), plain biscuit and nuts as extras. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in the cage.

Budgerigars Not Breeding.

F.H.H.—I should advise you to get "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," price 7d. post free, from our manager. You will have to let the birds take their own course. These birds mostly settle down to nesting operations quicker when there are several pairs together in the same aviary, and if you have space I should advise your getting a pair of Yellows (for variety), turn them in with the others and hang up four husks. An article on these birds was commenced in last week's issue of "C.B.," and should give you a few hints. Your pair kept singly will ultimately breed. Putting in another pair may accelerate matters, but at this season of the year I should not encourage nesting operations, as it is not only weakening to the parent bird, but the progeny are never so vigorous as those reared during the normal nesting period.

Indian Parrot.

Amy H.—Presumably your bird will be either a Ring-necked or an Alexandrine Parrakeet. Supply as a seed mixture one quart each Canary and white millet seed and a quarter-pint each of hemp, oats, paddy rice, and sunflower seed. Well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply such ripe fruit as it cares for, plain biscuit, and nuts in variety. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

If it has been having boiled maize, or any special diet, you must continue this for a time, but gradually discontinue same as you find it eating heartily of the diet advised above. Keep bird strictly out of draught, yet where it can get light and air, and it should do well. If you are in time to write your friend before he sails, he should feed it much as advised above; keep it strictly clean en route, and you should get a healthy bird on arrival.

Birds for Greenhouse Aviary.

Robinson.—Providing you can place cage where its inmates will not be subjected to draught, and the atmosphere is not too humid, the birds will do well under the circumstances you name. Budgerigars, Madagascar and Blue-winged Lovebirds, Cockateels, and Rosellas will agree together, providing they are not crowded. I can say nothing as regards numbers, for you give me no dimensions etc. of the cage. If you will supply these details, I can then definitely advise you. However, I incline to the opinion it would be better to confine the series to, say, one pair each of Green, and Yellow Budgerigars, Madagascar Lovebirds, and Cockateels. If your cage is less than 6 feet frontage, omit the last-named. The Budgerigars would at any rate breed with you. Another alternative is to have one pair only of Lorikeets; these are mostly of very gorgeous plumage, become very tame, can be had out and handled with impunity. If you will inform me a little more definitely which you would prefer of the above, and describe the cage, I will definitely advise you and give treatment of the birds I recommend.

Budgerigars in Moult.

"Wehan."—These birds require canary and white millet seed, millet sprays, and a few oats, green-food (lettuce, grass in flower), and if it will eat it, a piece of plain biscuit or stale crust of household bread, which has been previously soaked in diluted chemical food, and allowed to partially dry up before being given to the bird. For one day, in lieu of the drinking water, supply Dinneford's Magnesia, diluted with an equal bulk of water, and repeat this as necessary to keep the bowels freely moving, not watery-loose. On other days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. If the bird will not drink the magnesia water you must give a few drops of the magnesia (undiluted) direct to the beak with a quill. Give it as much seeding grass as it will eat, also a little apple if it will take it. A piece of clean cuttlefish should be kept continuously in the cage. If the skin is hard, rub in a little cold cream over the bare part, not sufficient to make its plumage greasy. Continue above treatment for about a month, then if the plumage is not renewed, you had better repeat query with full details.

Brevities.

What Bird? ("Boddy").—The illustration which you enclose is a figure of the Rosella Parrakeet; a hardy Australian species, which can be safely wintered out of doors in this country, and breeds fairly freely under such conditions.

Budgerigars More Successful (J. M. Parkes).—We are glad to note that you have now a happier story to tell, and that with the altered arrangements, you have had some measure of success and the promise of more. There should now be no recurrence of the past difficulty. Leave them just as they are through the winter; let them take their own course as to breeding or not, and in the spring put up a fresh lot of husks (I certainly believe it good policy to renew these annually). Burn the old ones, and your luck should continue.

Whydahs, etc. (Paradise Whydah).—Your sketch was a palpable Pintail Whydah; the Paradise has a breast of rich dark chestnut, and the caudal plumes are long and broadly webbed. These two species are the most common on the market. Others are Queen (Racket-tailed), Giant, Red-collared, Yellow shouldered, etc. There is no such book as you ask for,, but one will probably be advertised in this paper in the near future. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," from our Manager, 1/1 post free; it really covers the ground as to general treatment, but in a book of this scope, detailed descriptions of all the species was not possible. If you write the Editor, he can probably send you a book covering part of the ground at any rate.

Wintering Birds Out of Doors (G. E. H.).—Providing your county is not a very northern one, the only birds you need bring in are the Cordon Bleus, and Lavender Finches, i.e., of the birds named in your query. An ordinary Canary breeding cage in your sitting room, standing in some light, airy, but not draughty position, would suffice for wintering a pair each of Cordons and Lavenders in. These birds are often wintered in unheated rooms; when fully established (acclimatised) the protection of four walls is all they seem to need. It would be certainly best to try them in such a room as you can put them in, then to take the other alternative you suggest.

Striated Finches (L. S.).—In so small a booklet as the one you name, it was impossible to give inclusive lists; but these birds come under the group treatment for Mannikins to which the familiar Spice or Nutmeg Finch also belongs. Diet: The following will be ample: Canary and white millet seed as a staple mixture, also "paddy" rice and millet sprays, greenfood, cuttlefish, grit, and water for drinking and bathing. The Striated Finch is a native of India. A little soft food mixture should be given when they are feeding young, but these will be mainly reared on regurgitated seed.

Budgerigars Moulting ("Ignoramus.").—So long as the birds are fit and vivacious there is no call to give any drugs. At this period it is well to keep the bowels moving freely, not loose, with an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia (see other replies in this issue). In addition to the usual seed dietary give very liberal supplies of seeding (flowering) grass, but at this season of the year this should not be gathered till the sun has dispersed the heavy morning dews; also a piece of plain biscuit that has been slightly moistened with Chemical Food. Procure the booklet "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 7d. post free.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

In an Aviary (Erimehi).—Last week I answered a precisely similar question to the one you now put to me; note the reply given "J.A.A.," also that given T. Jones. Canaries can successfully be kept with small British seedeaters. If you desire further information, kindly give dimensions of the aviary. This is an important point.

A Weed (Novice A.B.).—This weed is a persicaria and the seeds of it are found in most of the wild-seed mixtures on the market. Many British finches will eat the ripe seeds, though maybe your Goldfinches will not touch them; they prefer thistles and the like.

Enamel (A. Goodall).—Personally, I prefer (and use) a very dark green enamel for the insides and wires of the show cages for Goldfinches, Linnets, Redpolls, and Siskins; some exhibitors, however, prefer a light blue for all except the first-named. It must be very dark green, remember. For Norwich Canaries the recognised colour is that known as Hedge Sparrow blue.

Another Weed (J. D.).—Yes, the "head" you enclose is that known as hardhead or horse-knob (or knot), the seeds of which are much liked by Goldfinches, Siskins, etc.

A Puzzle (Lark Lover).—I cannot understand your letter; it is clear enough in itself, true, but you do not put any question to me, nor state what information you require. You seem to be feeding the Skylark very well indeed and the bird would seem to be moulting well. Until it has quite finished casting its plumage you cannot, of course, expect to get song from the bird.

Two Mules (A. Holloway).—Mules bred from the hen Bullfinch and cock Canary are well known. There have been upwards of a dozen (I am writing from memory) at the two last Crystal Palace shows. They are very valuable when first-class specimens. Chaffinch-Canary Mules I believe have yet to be put upon the show bench. Reputed specimens have been exhibited, but have not met with general recognition—doubt has always been felt concerning the genuineness of the parentage. I hope you may succeed in breeding an example.

With a Charffinch (S.R.S.).—Some Charffinches are not at all spiteful, but many are rather the reverse. You can try with safety Greenfinch, Linnet, Goldfinch, Siskin, Bullfinch, and Redpoll. Your place is not very large, however, so don't crowd it.

Thistle Seed (J. W.).—The "heads" sent are those of the spear plume thistle. The seeds are very good for Goldies, etc., though the best come from the large Scotch thistle. Cut the "fluff" off close to the seed and drop the heads into a large brown paper bag, shaking this vigorously, when the seed will fall to the bottom. It should be spread on a newspaper to dry, then stored in coarse linen bags in a dry place. A method largely employed is to knock, or open, the heads over a pan of water, when the seeds sink to the bottom and the "fluff" and rubbish float on top. Thus clean seed is easily obtained; it must afterwards be spread out to dry.

Loss of Young Linnets (J.C.).—I think you will find after perusing the "Nutshell" booklet that you have been feeding the Linnets wrongly. If you have any further trouble, however, write me again, but state how you feed and cage them, and what are the symptoms preceding death. It is not possible, you know, for even "experts" to guess why birds die; they must be given some facts upon which to base their opinion.

A Swelling (Bingley Duce).—I hope I have got your nom-de-plume correctly. (1) This swelling is the result of a collection of air under the skin; prick the latter with a clean needle and it will subside. But the swelling may form again. I have found that birds which get such a collection of air under the skin are prone to a return of the trouble. (2) Note the reply to "W.M." this week with regard to feeding a Yellowhammer.

In an Aviary (Lancashire).—(1) Note the replies given "J.A.A." and T. Jones last week. The "mixture" recommended "J.A.A." would suit you admirably. It is more economical to give the chief seeds in separate dishes or hoppers. A good mixture would be canary three parts, teazle two parts, hemp, summer rape, and sunflower one part each, linseed and charlock half-part each. (2) The Foreigners mentioned will agree well with the Britishers. They must have millet seeds, and spray millet. (3) The place will hold comfortably 18 to 24 birds, this depending on the size of the Foreigners selected. Don't overcrowd it. No need to separate them at any time, unless one or other becomes unduly pugnacious.

Blackbird Bald (Tumbler, Ellesmere Port).—In my opinion this trouble is often due to feeding too largely upon more-or less heating meals, which form the base of many foods. Fanciers do not give enough vegetable food (grated carrot, minced lettuce, watercress, chickweed, etc.), and ripe fruit, berries, etc., on which the Blackbird subsists largely when in a state of Nature. Take my advice and alter your bird's diet on the above lines. Any treatment must be local. Anoint the bald place once daily for 5 or 6 days with a tiny smear of mild sulphur ointment (obtainable from any chemist). Don't overdo this, and rub one way only—the way the plumage lies.

(Several British Bird Queries have had, unfortunately, to be held over.)

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. C. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird, for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; annually, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and may accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. And boxes sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

K.M.W.—Cock Whydah. Pneumonia from climatic causes, no doubt acclimatised.

"Grainger."—Chronic induration of liver. The body was enormously distended, as no doubt you would have observed, being principally occupied with the diseased organ, whilst the bowels occupied but a very small space, being compressed against the body walls. This enlargement must have been taking place for some time, its proportion was four times its natural size, and was almost solid quite unlike ordinary liver tissue, which is so readily broken up, and on cutting was quite firm. It is due to the formation within the liver of a quantity of fibrous tissue pressing upon the liver cells and interfering with their functional activity. As the disease proceeds, almost the whole organ undergoes this change. The causes are varied; those known are irritants introduced at some time with the food, as impurities in same, and germs. Contagion is not an essential feature, most cases arising independently and not associated with same.

F. G. F. Enfield.—During the moult at the time you state, the bird contracted a chill resulting in an attack of bronchitis. This either from lack of attention, or proper medicinal application, was never properly subdued, consequently complications arose which terminated its existence. "Bronchopneumonia" was the cause of death. The lungs were very badly and extensively affected. There was scarcely a patch of healthy tissue in it to be found. Bronchitis as a primary and independent affection is generally ameliorated by treatment together with proper and due care to provide warm surroundings. What is most misleading is that birds affected with it have periods of relief and will eat, and whilst doing so adequate attention is not given to its care, the system becomes gradually weakened, and the sufferer falls a victim to pneumonia complicated with bronchitis, which in almost all cases is productive of fatal consequences.

L.W.F.—Seek for cause in the food. The deaths are arising from acute inflammation of the bowels attended with pneumonia. Their symptoms are suggestive of irritation of the bowels. Modify your diet therefore for a few days; give aperient salines in the drinking water, and a daily course of Condy's Fluid in the drinking water. It is not necessary, as you may imagine, that because the cause lies in the food all the birds should be affected in the same manner; it often happens that only a part of same may be contaminated. I mention this to dissociate any such thought that may occur to you. I do not suspect anything contagious, but am of opinion the trouble in each case has a common cause.

H. F. Butler.—It is very possible there is great foundation in your suggestion re your losses. You will, of course, understand that, unless a very exhaustive analytical and toxicological examination is made it is not an easy matter to differentiate poisons manufactured by ptomaines, and those of mineral and vegetable origin. The layman very often has the belief that it is only necessary to examine the various organs to be able to state definitely the poison, metallic or vegetable, bringing about death. Whereas portions of the remains, secretions, etc., have to be submitted to various tests to identify same. Such is not within the scope of the post-mortem expert, the appearances only suggesting that poisons are at work, and in many cases there are few if any lesions to be seen. Your suggestion is quite tenable, and I should take early steps to withhold the food you mention, as it is well known that many green foods do particularly at certain periods contain toxic poisons. You will recall the case of Mrs. Horlebog and her losses from lead poisoning due to paint. A bird submitted to my inspection by her showed unmistakable evidence of poison, but its nature was obscure. To discover its presence would entail the services of a toxicologist, and as the Crippen case shows us, this is a very tedious, lengthy, and undoubtedly most expensive process. Am obliged to you for bringing this matter to my notice. I have many times suspected losses from this cause, and should be very pleased to know the result at some future date as to the effect produced by the removal of this possible cause.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Cutting (F. Lockton).—Accept our thanks for what you sent.

Yellowhammers Bred (C. W. Law).—Our Mr. G. E. Weston writes as follows: "I rather think it the first instance, if the birds were bred in a cage or flight cage; Yellowhammers have been bred in aviaries, however—I think by Mr. Teschemaker, for one."

Club Notice (W. Curry).—Your club notice arrived too late for insertion in our last issue. Notices should reach us not later than Tuesday morning's post.

Hints on Soldering (Hy. Thornley).—We think the matter has been amply covered by your own and others' letters, and cannot see our way to publish an article. Many thanks for offer.

Refusing the Order.

House Sparrows as a rule are very unfriendly towards Martins, and will frequently drive them away and appropriate their nesting quarters. But recently the writer heard of a pair of Martins, which built in a shed and constantly drove the Sparrows away. And what is more surprising is that the latter did not dispute the matter with them, but meekly departed.

Club Reports.

WINDSOR AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Special meeting at Star and Garter Hotel, September 4th, when all the members turned up. Schedule for show on November 30th was carefully considered and adopted. The show will be open to all living within a 20 mile radius of the town, and will include a members' show. Will any fancier wishing to join, communicate with the secretary? The entrance fee is 1/-, and 2/6 annual subscription. E. A. STICKLAND, Sec.

BRITISH ROLLER C.C.

Monthly meeting held headquarters, Sept. 13th; Mr. F. E. Fisher in chair. Five medals were allotted to Wolverhampton show, Nov. 3rd and 4th. Decided, to have a class at the Dulwich and Peckham annual show, Nov. 8th. Mr. F. A. Lester will be judge. Several other proposals were carried. A discussion took place on "What effect has the feeding on the bird's song." (See special report on another page.—Editor). J. W. NORRIS, Hon. Sec.

UDDINGSTON O.S.

Special meeting, held in reading-rooms, Sept. 17th, Mr. Thos. Prentice, president, in chair. The open show classification was gone over, but was left till next meeting, when a final decision will be made. Agreed, to get subscription books printed for next meeting, to be distributed among members. Note.—Will members who have not been notified of meetings lately, please send on names and addresses to me at their earliest convenience.—JNO. KILPATRICK, Interim Secretary, 2, Dean Brae Street, Uddingston.

WIGAN AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting, held Sept. 3rd, Legs of Man Hotel, Mr. Ball in chair. Correspondence having been read and discussed, Mr. Ball gave an account of his visit to Leicester, and the business of the Cage Bird Union meeting, expressing himself very well satisfied at the businesslike manner of the whole proceedings. Mr. Ball was thanked for his services. The Roller show was fixed for Dec. 16th and 17th next. Mr. Nuttall gave his address: "The Bird from Egg to Feather." This very interesting subject was well dealt with, although several fanciers could not see eye to eye with the lecturer. Mr. Nuttall promised to continue at some future date. Mr. Webster proposed, Mr. Large seconded a vote of thanks to Mr. Nuttall.—W. DYER, Asst. Sec.

LONDON AND PROVINCIAL O.S.

The absence of Mr. Trower, on account of his wife's illness, members were entertained by a "Lecture on Seeds," by Mr. E. S. Lugg, at their new headquarters, the Leysian Hall, City Road, on Sept. 15th. Many members and friends were present, and all seemed to thoroughly enjoy what Mr. Lugg had to tell them about the seeds with which they feed their pets. It was a most interesting and instructive lecture, and greatly appreciated. Owing to Mr. Crabb having to leave early, the pleasant duty of proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. Lugg fell to Mr. Mortlock, who took the chair when Mr. Crabb left. Mr. Mortlock told the members that he had bred this season seven Yellowhammers in confinement, and that he had one with him that had died that morning. The members were greatly interested with this specimen (this being the first time, I think, that this species has bred in captivity.—CHARLES W. LAW, Hon. Sec. (We hope to publish this lecture in an early issue.—EDITOR.)

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting held Sept. 17th, Fawcett Street Cafe, Mr. W. F. Swan presiding. Arrangements for members' show were considered. Proposed, to hold show Nov. 19th. Messrs. Swan, Elliott, and Riseborough, were appointed committee to visit the various halls and select the most suitable. Schedule was gone into; agreed, to have 38 classes. Seven judges were nominated and secretary instructed to write each asking terms. Mr. W. Reid, hon. sec., and Mr. J. Riseborough, hon. treas., having resigned their positions owing to pressure of business, the election of their successors took place. Mr. James Jeffrey, 3, Glenthorne Road, Roker, Sunderland, and Mr. Anthony Walker, 14, Wilson Street, Sunderland, were elected. A vote of thanks given to Messrs. Reid and Riseborough for their valued services. We shall be glad if all members will now give their attention to specials for show, and also to induce new members to join. Mr. Sanderson, of Port Glasgow, who is on a visit to the town, honoured us by his presence, and related a few of his experiences.—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec., 3, Glenthorne Road, Roker, Sunderland.

GATESHEAD AND DIS. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held Sept. 14th, Mr. Robson presided. Secretary announced we had received the patronage of the Crested C.C., the Yorkshire C.C., the Border Fancy C.C., the Northern Yorkshire C.C., the Northern British B., M., and Foreign B.C., the Northern Crest Club, the Northern Lizard Club, and the Northern Counties N. and C.C. Mr. J. Nicholson (Haltwhistle), was elected a member. Notice of motion given by Mr. W. Curry, "That minute relating to Novices be rescinded," to be brought forward at our next monthly meeting for discussion. We were favoured with a lecture by Mr. Shepherd: "My experiences in the Cage Bird Fancy." These, he informed us, extended over a period of 40 years. He commenced to take an interest in birds when he was about 10 years of age. His first experience was with the Sparrows. He came into possession of three young ones. These, with the aid of old Grannie, and of the parent birds, he managed to rear. He hung the cage outside and the old birds used to feed the birds. He afterwards came into possession of a green Linnet which he kept for a good while, and then sold to an old fancier for 2s., combined with a promise (which was fulfilled) of a pair of "Cumberland Fancies"—now known as Border Fancies. These he had for two or three years. His next move was to try Mule breeding. He made us all laugh, when he said, fancy trying to breed Mules with a little Border Fancy hen and a big Greenfinch cock! Yet from these he bred Mules at his first attempt. He had rather a roving disposition in his younger days, but later settled in Liverpool and Dist., for some years. In Liverpool he came in contact with a few old fanciers, namely, Mr. Chundle and others and was able to profit largely by their experiences. While in Liverpool he still had a longing to get back to Canny Newcastle, "the toon of the North," and eventually arrived here after an absence of twenty-seven years. And the first acquaintance he made after his return was Mr. Maddison. The lecture was listened to by all with intense interest, it being very instructive and edifying. Several members testified to what they knew of Mr. Shepherd, whom they had always found to be a true fancier, and one who was always willing to assist others.—A. HOLDEN, Assist. Sec.

Steadying British Finches.

Sir,—I should be very much obliged if any reader could give me some information regarding the steadying of Linnets and Goldfinches. What is the quickest and best method, and what the best cages to use? I have always found the steadying a difficult and long job.

Constant Reader.

Another Blackbird that Sings While in the Moult.

Sir,—I noticed a short time since a paragraph in your valuable paper, Cage Birds, referring to a caged Blackbird being in full song whilst moulting. I thought perhaps it might be interesting to some of your readers to know that I also have a hand-reared Blackbird at the present time in full moult, and also in full song. He is singing strong from daybreak to dark, and has been singing since the first week in April without any stopping.

The Dulwich O.S. 1909 Prize Money.

Sir,—I should like to ask, through the medium of Cage Birds, whether the Dulwich O.S. show managers have settled up their last year's prize money accounts yet, and paid all out or not? I and a friend sent six birds to their show last year, and we scored one second, and two fourths, besides other cards. But, lo and behold, the prize money has not yet appeared to my knowledge. I have written several times to the sec., and once to Cage Birds, but never once received an answer. I should be very pleased if they would send me my prize money.

Henry Kaye.

The Cage Bird Union and the London Federation.

Sir,—Mr. Warley's reply to my letter on the above subject is a feeble, fatuous and futile defence of his conduct. He leads off with the hackneyed remark of "Mind your own business" (I thank him for the implied compliment that I have business to mind); it is the usual refuge of a person cornered, but it has not the virtue of even being original. Whatever Mr. Warley's ideas of business may be, I submit that it is very much my business to contradict an untrue statement made publicly in regard to an organisation of which (for the year) I am an official. It occurs to me that the remark applies more particularly to himself. He certainly would have been better occupied minding his own business than going to Leicester to make a prejudicial remark about an organisation of which he admits he knows nothing. Is that the reason which made him feel qualified to speak? Of course, he does not know anything of the transactions of the Federation, or he would never be antagonistic towards it. He further states, "It is best known to the societies he mentions why they left the C.B.U." What an admission, after stating that they seceded on account of the Federation! If it is best known to them, why did he arrogate to himself the right to speak for them? Was he minding his own business? I say again, without fear of contradiction, that the societies named did not leave the Union on account of the Federation. Mr. Warley even goes farther by stating the matter does not concern him. Then why on earth did he state that which he did? He admits of having spoken without the "best" knowledge on a subject which does not concern him, and yet he says he has nothing to withdraw. What prodigious reasoning, displaying an extraordinary sense of unfairness! Lastly, he states that he has a right to speak for the Union. Most certainly he has, and I would be the last person to deny him his right. I wonder if it has occurred to Mr. Warley that I am writing nothing against it? My complaint was not what he said about the Union, but what he said about the Federation. After this explanation he may be able to disentangle himself.

Is it a Singular Instance?

Sir,—I had a clutch of five eggs from Canaries—two unfertile eggs, one dead in shell, and one that died on the second day, which left me with one bird alive. This the mother fed all right till the 12th day. Then she started to pinch it, and it would not stop in the nest. Two days after the mother broke her leg in some way. So I took her away and put another hen in the cage to see if she would feed the youngster, which she has done for a week now, the young being 22 days old. It is just beginning to feed itself a little now. I would like to know if any other of your readers has had a similar experience.

J. Morris.

Cage Bird Union Matters.

Sir,—I have been very interested in the Cage Bird Union and its rules, etc., and being only a novice I should like to ask the following questions: (1) Can anyone show at a club that is not affiliated to the C.B.U., if he does not belong to any club himself? (2) If anyone belonging to a club that is not affiliated to the C.B.U. is debarred from showing at any show that is under C.B.U. rules? (3) Is the Yorkshire Union worked on the same lines as C.B.U.? The more I study the Union and its ways, the more I get puzzled.

Looker-on.

[The foregoing questions are a little difficult to reply to, but so far as our information goes we may answer them as follows: (1) Yes; provided the management approves of his bona-fides as an exhibitor. (2) No. The C.B.U. only penalises its own members and the members of societies affiliated to it. It has no authority or jurisdiction over non-members or members of non-affiliated societies. (3) No.—Editor C.B.]

A Famous Breeder of Green Canaries.

Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, of Liverpool.

Sir,—Having an hour to spare when passing through Liverpool I thought I would pay Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, the popular Chairman of the Green Canary Association, a visit to see a few of his Greens. Much to my surprise I found him behind the fanciers' counter instead of the bar. He has opened up as a fanciers' provider, and by the look of his stock he means it in every sense of the word. From floor to ceiling he has stored show cases and cages, including all the specialist club makes by noted makers. A special line are the G.C.A. cages and drinkers, of correct size and colour. All the cases are made of threeply wood—a grand idea to my mind. Looking round the shelves I found everything a fancier requires. I tried to think of something he had not in his shop, but it was "trotted out" of some nook or corner. All seeds are kept in zinc bins, so as to be free from mice. His Spanish seed is of wonderful quality. No wonder the majority of the Liverpool exhibitors patronize him. Continue with this class of seed, and you cannot go wrong, Metcalfe. His speciality is the "conditioning mixture"—truly a choice blend of the seeds so necessary to bring out the good points of an exhibition specimen. He informed me he has to thank Mr. Tom Rowlands, of Green Yorkshire fame, for helping him to blend this mixture. The mixture should be in every exhibitor's room. For British bird men a nice selection of wild seeds is kept. Next I came to the bird-rooms. Mr. Metcalfe's showroom is "a beauty." It is well ventilated, etc. In it I found about two hundred Greens, for which Mr. M. is noted; they looked a grand lot. Those just about finishing their moult appeared like winners—whatever beats them will be toppers. The clear Yorkshires are a very even lot, but were a bit backward in moult, so I could not describe their individual merits. The two other bird-rooms contain the stock birds. My word! there is size here. But, like the others, they are deep in moult. These birds are all for sale. Mr. Metcalfe explained that he has practically done exhibiting; he prefers to find winners for his patrons. As an exhibitor he is well known, having been successful in both Yorkshire and Norwich Greens, his prizes including 1sts at the Crystal Palace. But he explained that the Green men used to think a deal more of a 1st at Manchester, where there were from thirty to forty in a class. It was here that the sensational prices were started for Greens. Mr. Mackley, of Norwich, claimed Mr. Metcalfe's self yellow, 1st in its class. This bird was sent abroad; its son, which also stood 1st at the Crystal Palace and Manchester for Mr. Metcalfe, was claimed soon after. As a judge his services are being requisitioned, being a specialist in Yorkshires and Norwich. Anyone visiting Liverpool will receive a hearty welcome here (at 68, Brunswick road), even if they are not in the buying humour. This was my experience.

Old Fancier.

Cure Wanted for Bald Bullfinch Hen.

Sir,—I should be glad if any readers of Cage Birds can tell me what to do with a Bullfinch hen that is bald. The bird has a white scurf on the skin, and it appears to me it will be entirely without feathers before long unless something is done to prevent the scurf from forming. I am sure the moult is not the cause of the trouble. I wish Cage Birds every success.

Another Constant Reader.

Thirty-seven Eggs from One Hen.

Sir,—I have a little German Canary that has this season had nests consisting of two 3's, two 4's, two 6's, one 7, and one 4. She had three nests before I got a mate for her—two 3's and one 4. I got a small Norwich and mated to her, and they have had five nests and have hatched out 19 young ones. The parents brought up 14 fine healthy young birds—ten cocks and four hens. Two more young are three weeks old, but I don't know their sexes yet. I should like to know if any fellow reader of Cage Birds has had anything like this in any one season.

Wm. Brownsword.

P.S.—In reference to my letter sent earlier in the week, I may say that the little German has since laid again twice—once on Saturday, and once on Sunday. This makes its ninth nest. I think this is a big performance, if not a record. I am getting on in years, and living by myself I keep this one pair of birds just to keep me company.

The Late Entry Nuisance.

A Timely Appeal.

Sir,—In reply to the letter under the above heading in last week's Cage Birds, I consider that if show committees would make their date of closing for entries as late as possible, seven days at earliest, they would strike at the root of the whole trouble. Up to the present, the last day for sending entries has been generally from 10 to 14 days before the show. I consider this too early to be certain of the fitness of the birds. Perhaps the birds are due at another show before then, and it is impossible to know how they will return from that. If secretaries would accept entries up to seven days before the show there would, I believe, be no need for "whipping up," and extending time at the end. May I point out that those shows that have had to advertise "entries extended" must necessarily be among those that close too early? In addition, may I also suggest to secretaries that they be more prompt in sending out catalogues? My birds have frequently returned from a show before I have received a catalogue.

The Management of Linnets and Goldfinches.

Sir,—I trust the following will prove of use to some of your numerous readers. The best way for a novice to be sure of getting cock Linnets and Goldfinches is for them to go to some reliable fancier or catcher and ask to have a good cock bird picked out, whether for song or exhibition. The best staple diet for Linnets, and one that has stood the test of time, is Canary and German rape mixed, and the following given every other day or two or three times a week as a tit-bit: teazle, maw, linseed, and gold of pleasure (either mixed or separate, as the fancier wishes). I have given these seeds with success and have had plenty of good singing from the birds. As regards the Goldie, I mix some hemp in with the above mixture for their stock food, as they don't eat much Canary seed as a rule; but some will eat it more than others; also I give a little niger seed in the tit-bit mixture. The cage I favour for these birds is about 14in. long, 5½ deep, and 13in. high; which is a nice size. It keeps them in health, provided they are given plenty of gritty sand, and, during winter months, plantain stalks and apple, and during summer plenty of seeding chickweed, groundsel, shepherd's purse, dandelion leaves, and seed heads, also thistle heads just ready for bursting, which last the birds enjoy; but first cut all fluff off as it makes such a mess. I also give them a bath and I spray them also sometimes, adding some quassia chips to the water to clear them of mites, if they have any. By means of the above named diet and great care in keeping them and the perches clean, I have had the birds singing most of the winter and all through the summer; and I enjoy their many antics and sweet songs, which have well repaid me for the trouble of obtaining their food, this being sometimes very scarce and difficult to find.

Outdoor Birdroom.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

Robins Nest in a Box on the Wall.

Sir,—It might interest your readers to hear about a pair of Robins who built a nest in a box hanging on the wall in my garden close to the greenhouse. The box is simply an ordinary one, which has hung on the wall for two or three years; it has never been occupied till this spring. I put over it an old slanting dust-pan for a roof, and a piece of wood in the middle of the box to make a division. In the spring I noticed the Robins flying in and out of the box with bits in their mouths, and to my great delight I found that they were building a nest. They were very courageous in spite of our two cats and a dog; the former were constantly watching them, but the Robins ignored them and made such noises that I believe the cats were frightened. I am told that cats are afraid of Robins on account of their red breasts. Can any of your readers confirm this? Three eggs were duly hatched, and I could see the mother bird feeding the little ones when I was inside the greenhouse; she could also see me. The pair were quite tame. My cook, who is fond of birds and animals, put some crumbs outside her kitchen window and they came down to get them, and even flew inside the scullery on to the table, picking up whatever they could find. As the young birds grew older they went out of the nest. As, however, they could not fly far, the cats were a source of danger. The birds were put back into the box and I fastened some wire against it, and made a platform from which the parents fed them through the wire. It was most interesting to watch them. The cage was only about four feet from the ground, so a good view was obtained. A pair of Blackbirds also built a nest on the same wall near the cage, and at about the same height. One of them went to the Robin's nest, but was driven away by the inmates. Whenever I went near their little home the pair came close to me in great anger, and tried to peck my face. One of them actually perched on the cook's shoulder while she was cleaning the box out, and showed signs of fury.

* Tame Swallows.

I heard of a nest containing three baby Swallows, who fell forty feet from the roof of a house. They were rescued, and an attempt was made to bring them up by hand. They are now very tame, and I have seen them eat crumbs and chopped egg.—Sent by W. Robertson (age 13), 21, Lawrence Street, Partick, Glasgow.

*Tomtit's Strange Nesting Place.

In the box of a cart belonging to a gentleman living at Penwortham, a Tomtit built her nest and laid six eggs. The cart was in daily use for carrying bricks, and each morning when the carter lifted the lid of the box the bird flew away, to return when the cart came back. The nest was ingeniously built, so that when the cart was tipped the eggs did not fall out.—Sent by A. Clements (age 11), 99, Dempsey Street, Stepney, E.

 A Sure Sign.

In a Scotch rural district two boys were one day discussing what sign it was when the Cuckoo is heard for the first time in the year. One said it was a sign you were getting married; the other said it was a sign you were going to be rich. A farmer, overhearing them, said, "That cannot be true, because I have heard it many times, and am not married yet, and I am certainly not rich. Just then a local worthy, known as Jamie, was passing by, and the farmer said, "Jamie, can you tell us what sign it is when you hear the Cuckoo for the first time?" "Yes," said Jamie, "it's a sign you're not deaf."—Sent by W. Allen (age 13), 26, Mount Street, Cleckheaton, Yorkshire.

KATHERINE WEBB (Cambridge),

"Teila's" Escapade.

A fortnight after I had my Cockatiels I came in one morning and found my mother in a disturbed state of mind; she had gone into the aviary to feed my birds, and, unfortunately, "Teila" (the hen Cockatiel) had escaped. We were very much afraid we should never see her again. But we made enquiries in the neighbourhood, and in a short time a man came to tell us that the bird was sitting in a tree in his garden. Then the difficulty was how to catch her. The gardener thought she might come to her mate if she saw him, so we caught "Cockey" in a butterfly net, put him in a cage, and carried him to the garden in which "Teila" had been seen.

When we got there, however, she had disappeared, but, fortunately, "Cockey" started to call very loudly, and in a short time "Teila" flew into a tree close by. As there was a little summer house facing the tree in which she was sitting, we put "Cockey" in his cage just inside, and strewed the floor and the doorway with oats, of which she is very fond; and then went some little way off to watch further events.

"Cockey" continued to call, and presently his mate flew down to him, and settled on the cage, whereupon the gardener crept up very quietly and shut the summer house door. She was soon secured, and put into the cage with "Cockey," who was delighted to have her back, and we soon had them happy again in the aviary. My birdy friends told me I was exceedingly fortunate to get my bird back, as generally when Cockatiels escape they never return unless they have young ones, and as mine had not even eggs I thought myself very lucky.

Nesting Arrangements.

About a month after the prodigal's return I put a large box—one that I procured from a bird dealer, and which was more like a Noah's ark than anything else—into the aviary for the Cockatiels to nest in, with some sawdust at the bottom to keep the eggs when laid from rolling about. In a few days I was very much interested to see that they had taken possession of it. After some time had elapsed, and when both the birds were out of the box, I looked in, and found five white eggs in it, a little smaller than a Pigeon's. As Cockatiels begin to incubate on the arrival of the second egg, there is always an interval between the first and the last chicks hatched—from seven to ten days, according to the number of the brood.

Both Cockatiels sit. "Cockey" sat from ten o'clock in the morning until about four o'clock in the afternoon, when "Teila" took his place, and sat all night. But to my great disappointment the eggs proved to be clear. I left them in the box for nearly a month, and then took them away, as Cockatiels generally take from sixteen to seventeen days to incubate.

As time went on more eggs were laid, but when they ought to have hatched, to my surprise I saw that both birds were out of the box, and as they did not return to it I took out the eggs the next day to see what was wrong. I was very grieved to find two of the eggs were chipped, and on breaking tho remainder found five young birds all cold and dead. I should be most grateful if any of my readers who have had a similar experience could tell me to what cause I may attribute this misfortune.

A Successful Attempt.

The third attempt was successful, and a pair of strong young birds, covered with yellow down, were the result. These did not, however, leave the nest for six weeks—until, in fact, they were nearly as big as their parents, though by no means so well feathered, their heads being perfectly bald.

Whinchats and Stonechats.

Tho Whinchat and Stonechat are birds very near akin, and frequent the same wide commons and furzeland downs. Their feeding and nesting habits are very similar, but why the Whinchat should migrate to warmer quarters and the Stonechat remain on the bleak hillside during the winter, is one of those little items in the ways of wild creatures that still puzzle us.

"CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS."

Phenomenal Rush for Copies of Part Six.

The nature of the information contained in part six of "Cage Bird Hybrids" is so practical and helpful that fanciers have quickly recognised it to be one of the most interesting parts yet issued. This work will now very soon be in a complete form ready for binding, and we shall issue beautiful cloth and gilt covers calculated to make the book an ornament to the library. Mr. Houlton's work has met with the most appreciative comment not only from the leading and most experienced breeders of Mules and Hybrids, but also from hundreds of novices, who own that to his advice, so simply and fully given, they owe all that they know. Every part contains two magnificent coloured plates, executed with his customary skill and felicity by Mr. Harry Norman, that most talented specialist in bird portraiture, and the price asked for each book, viz., 6d., is, all things considered, ridiculously cheap.

ALNWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Special meeting, held Temperance Hotel, Sept. 13th. Chairman (Mr. M. Swan) read the resignation of the secretary (Mr. W. A. Broadley), which was accepted with regret. Proposed by Mr. G. Carns, seconded by Mr. Robinson, that Mr. R. Forster, 36, Bondgate Without, Alnwick, be elected secretary; carried. Following members added to committee: Messrs. T. Dixon, G. Carns, J. Wright, W. Nesbit, J. Forster, and R. F. Rennison. Open show business also dealt with.—R. FORSTER, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN LIZARD CLUB.

Meeting held Sept. 17, headquarters, Mr. Reid in chair. Considerable discussion ensued whether we should have our cages marked "Northern Lizard Club," on a small plate; decided, to leave same over to another meeting. Some breeders present gave an account of the past season, and their experiments, such as double silvering, etc.; this was very profitable to all. It was resolved to resume this discussion at some future time. The various fixtures in the ensuing season then had attention. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed a most enjoyable meeting.—G. DAVIDSON, Hon. Sec.

BOURNEMOUTH & DIS. C.B.A.

Monthly meeting held headquarters, Sept. 14th. Letter read from Mrs. Downing Farrar, kindly offering special for best non-colour-fed Norwich bred and exhibited by a member in 1910. The hon. sec. announced the association had received the support of the Southern Norwich P.C. (Novice Section), also the cup, and Novice Southern Yorkshire C.C., at forthcoming show. The subject for the evening being "Various wild and other seeds," the hon. sec. submitted samples of many wild seeds, and a discussion followed as to their merits for British birds which fed on them. An enjoyable and instructive evening closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman, Mr. Jones.—W. O. BROOKE, Sec.

THE YORKSHIRE UNION.

Council meeting, held Sept. 17th, Market Tavern, Bradford, Mr. F. Hammond (president) in chair. Good attendance of delegates, 46 being present when business was commenced. The president made a touching reference to the sad loss sustained by Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, in the death of their only daughter, and as an act of esteem and sympathy the delegates rose silently in their places, to support the vote of condolence which the secretary was asked to tender to the family. The committee's action in allowing the specialist clubs to print their particulars in the Union handbook at half the ordinary rates was endorsed, this necessitating Minute No. 5 of the previous Council meeting being rescinded. A reported member from the Manningham C.B.A. had not paid his arrears to the Society, according to the Council's request at its previous meeting; it was unanimously decided to expel the defaulting member from the Union. Correspondence from the London Federation relating to the railway petition was read, and freely discussed, it being the unanimous opinion that many concessions already allowed to certain sections of different associations should in all fairness be extended to the cage bird Fancy, in the carriage of exhibits, and also of the fanciers themselves in travelling to and from shows. Many efforts have been made by the Union and the various specialist clubs to try and obtain some such consideration, and although the influence which could reasonably be got was placed behind them, they have met with the same curt rebuff each time; this has undoubtedly had its effect on the Union and specialist clubs, and no small wonder, after the tremendous amount of work put in, can be expressed, if the Union do not, perhaps, look at this combined effort in perhaps as bad a light as our fellow-fanciers down south. But this did not deter the Council from giving its whole-hearted support to the petition framed by the Federation, although in certain of its phases it did not go perhaps quite as far as one could like; still the feeling prevailed, that if only a little could be achieved in this combined effort, it would perhaps, lead to something more substantial in the future. The Council pledged itself to do whatever lay in its power to further the efforts made in this direction. The full details of the scheme were left in the hands of the Secretary to arrange with the Federation, and full particulars will be published as soon as arrangements have been completed. A rather knotty problem presented itself in the nomination of judges for next year's Union shows, owing to one of the new Union rules coming into operation, namely, "That no reporter shall judge a Union Show." It was decided to allow the definition of this rule to remain in the different societies' hands in nominating their respective judges.—H. HILL, Secretary.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting held at headquarters, Church Institute, 60, Paddington Street, on Sept. 12th, Mr. A. W. Curtis in the chair. Letters read from Mrs. Parry, J. Goodall, Murton Gill, G. E. Weston, Messrs. Withers Bros., and F. W. Ayres. Mr. H. E. Tringham elected a member. Mrs. Parry and Mr. R. P. Harper were nominated. Vote of thanks to Messrs. Withers Bros. for a welcome special, a prize of a water-colour drawing. Balance sheet of Y.B. show, duly audited, was read and confirmed. Schedule, consisting of 90 classes, was drawn up for annual show, Nov. 18th and 19th. A vote of thanks was given to the "Early Birds" Cricket Club for the use of their ground and materials at the return cricket match, Sept. 3rd, resulting in a loss by 23 runs. Winning the toss, our opponents elected to bat first, compiling a score of 85 runs; our reply was 62. The game was well contested, and played in a sportsmanlike spirit, praise being due to Messrs. J. Pooley and A. Curtis for their effective howling, and to the nicely timed batting all round the wicket, and one of the highest individual scores of A. Pooley. It was indeed "hard luck" for our opponents' best bowler, J. Collier, not to have performed the "hat trick," for on three occasions he succeeded in taking two wickets with successive balls. The absence of three members was much regretted, otherwise a different result was possible. The full score: "Early Birds": Clisby, c. Haile, b. Pooley, 5; Hunt, run out, 3; Tugwood, b. Pooley, 0; Collier, c. Wynn, b. Pooley, 4; Sibley, c. Chard, b. Prior, 18; Tombling, not out, 12; Poole, b. Curtis, 4; Dye, b. Curtis, 0; McGrath, b. Pooley, 4; Ferrier, hit wicket, b. Prior, 7; Greenham, b. Curtis, 14; byes, 7; leg-byes, 2; wides, 5; total, 85. City and Sub.: F. Prior, c. Tombling, b. Collier, 0; J. Pooley, b. Sibley, 4; V. Wynn, c. Sibley, b. Collier, 19; A. Pooley, b. Collier, 19; A. Curtis, b. Collier, 0; W. Cottey, b. Collier, 2; Haile, c. Sibley, b. Collier, 6; C. Prior, b. Collier, 4; B. Pankhurst, b. Collier, 0; J. Chard, not out, 5; Dye, b. Collier, 0; byes, 3; total, 62. As Mr. Sanders (the London Federation delegate) was again absent, it was agreed to accept the report of same as published in the Press. Instructions were also given to remit the fee as agreed upon.

A wild seed competition took place at the last meeting of the City and Suburban A.C.B., when disappointment was expressed that there were only four competitors taking part, not only out of respect to Mr. Prior, as the judge, but because a gold, silver, and bronze medals were offered. The task set for judging was for the most useful collection. First prize was awarded Mr. W. Page, whose collection the judge considered was gathered with great judgment, every seed being useful for British birds and Canaries. This collection consisted of 29 specimens gathered in the very pink of condition, three grasses, plantain, bastard groundsel, arrow grass, cress, dandelion (second crop), charlock, knapweed, shepherd's purse (second crop), gold of pleasure, thistle, sow thistle, dock, teazel, groundsel (second crop), summer rape, hardheads, etc., being included. Mr. F. Wyse, whose love for wild seed collecting is well known, secured second place of honour with—curiously enough—another 29 specimens. This collection was behind the winner's in usefulness, many of the seeds not being so fit for Britishers or Canaries, and also contained berries not quite in ripe condition. Mr. Prior bestowed great praise on him for the good variety. Included in this were German rape, dandelion, groundsel, red dock, sweet herb, milk thistle, belladonna berries, knapweed, flips, chickweed, cow parsley, blind nettle, blackberry, wild rape, shepherd's purse, etc. Third prize was awarded Mr. G. Pill, who staged thice samples of thrashed seeds: 1, bird-lock; 2, a desirable mixture; and 3, a mixture which contained cultivated seed amongst the wild. The vhe card was awarded Mr. W. Knight. Mr. Prior went exhaustively into the use of the various seeds, the proper time to gather them, where to locate them, and how to tell when they were ripe. Questions were asked by Messrs. F. Lathleiff, W. Cottey, W. Page, A. W. Curtis, and V. Wynn, and were answered in a manner possible only by one who had devoted long years to the careful observation and study of wild birds and their seeds. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Prior, who replied.—V. WYNN, Hon. Sec.

In the Courts.

GOLDFINCHES IN NOTTINGHAM.

At the Nottingham Summons Court Bench on September 8, Harry Swift, of 13, Pump Street, was summoned for "unlawfully, knowingly, and wilfully having in his possession and control certain wild birds recently taken, viz., three Goldfinches, contrary to the Wild Birds' Protection Act." There was a further summons in respect of nine Goldfinches.

Mr. R. A. Young put the case for the R.S.P.C.A., and pointed out that the Act of 1880 and 1881 had been extended by the Home Secretary on the application of the Nottingham City Council in May, 1906, to prohibit the keeping of recently caught Goldfinches for the whole year round in Nottingham. They would prove that these birds were recently taken. A case in the High Court, consisting of the Lord Chief Justice, Justice Channell and Justice Coleridge, had, he said, lately decided that a man having recently taken birds in his possession within the time and the area prohibited, would be committing an offence by virtue of the extension. When the birds concerned were mentioned in the schedule, as in this case, the offender was liable to a fine of £1 for every bird.

Inspector Clayton spoke to finding four boxes at the Great Northern Parcel Office on August 30, containing nine young Goldfinches, freshly caught. The boxes were addressed to various parts of the country. He saw the defendant in company with Sergeant Baxter, and Swift replied: "I know they are young," and added that he had had them a long time, and they came from 100 miles from here. Witness reminded him of the recent High Court decision, and Swift replied: "I know all about the law. I have had to do with your inspectors before. I shan't say anything more until the time comes off." Witness later went to the Great Central Railway Office, and found three more Goldfinches in two boxes, one of which was addressed to Sheffield and one to Oldham. Swift came to his office later on, and witness asked him what he had to say about them. He then observed "I don't know what I did say to you last night, as I was excited." Witness pointed out to him that the birds were all freshly caught, and he replied: "Yes, they're all freshly caught young birds. I didn't know we weren't allowed to keep them. Why don't they tell us? I shall consult my barrister in London—(laughter)—and have a long talk with him. I know we're liable to a 20s. fine for each Goldfinch, and very few are caught about here. They're worth £1 each."

Witness produced the "London Gazette" containing the official extension order to the city of Nottingham.

Cross-examined by Mr. W. B. Smith, for the defendant, witness said defendant's name and address were on the boxes. He believed defendant carried on business in several names.

Mr. Smith produced a trade paper advertising Goldfinches for sale.

In reply to further questions, witness said he did not know whether action had been taken in respect to those advertisements. He had nothing to do with birds sent from other parts of England. He had heard that Goldfinches were sent from Russia and Ireland to Nottingham.

Mr. Smith submitted that the Bench were not entitled to make a conviction. The onus rested on the prosecution to prove that defendant knew the birds were freshly taken. They only had the opinion of the witnesses. They had not proved that the defendant's statements related to the birds which were the subject of the present prosecution. The Act only related to English birds, and there was no evidence to show that these were taken in England.

The Bench said the matter would be cleared if defendant was put into the witness-box, but Mr. Smith reminded them that it did not rest with him to prove where the birds came from, the onus lay on the prosecution entirely.

The Chairman (Mr. J. E. Pendleton), who was accompanied by Mr. J. H. Hayward, said that, notwithstanding Mr. Smith's able defence, he thought the prosecution had made out a case, but they would only inflict the nominal fine of £1 and costs on the first summons, and costs on the second.

Defendant was allowed time to pay in.

This is the first case under the extension of the order in Nottingham.—"Nottingham Evening Post."

The Sparrow's Beak.

The beak of a baby Sparrow is large for the size of the bird, and arched in shape. This is so pronounced in some specimens that it appears almost a deformity. As the bird grows the beak gradually assumes the normal shape. The beak is strong and powerful at all times.

Home of the Puffins.

Writing of the Puffin a well-known naturalist says: "St. Kilda is the birds' paradise. All other breeding places of this bird that I have seen sink into utter insignificance when compared with the vast colonies there. Every available place is burrowed and honeycombed with boles, and the sea is often black with birds. The island is so undermined with Puffins' burrows, that there is scarcely room for the birds, and many of them have taken refuge under large masses of rock lying on the steep grass-covered hillsides that slope precipitously to sea, whilst others quarrel with the Razorbills in the cliffs."

The Shows.

GLASGOW (National Derby).

Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A. annual show, held September 17, in the Grand National Hall, Main Street, Gorbals, Glasgow. The event was full of interest to the genuine Scotch Canary fancier. The exhibits were the best of the season's breeding, and meeting as the fanciers and friends did for the first time, there was a fine enthusiasm; and everybody seemed to be pleased with the admirable judgment of the gentlemen who officiated. It was pleasing, too, to observe the uniformity of style in the placing. The forecast was in favour of last Saturday's cup winner, but the fanciers from the East proved that they had something worth bringing west. Mr. Dalgleish, whose name has been a household word for over a quarter of a century in the capacity of breeding and judging, won the gold medal and cup with an ideal yellow cock, for style, size, and beautiful plumage. The runner-up was a yellow hen bred and owned by Mr. McLennan. The contest was keen, but the stronger sex won the day. All the same, the hen is a beauty, and has a future before her. We understand she passes shortly into the hands of Mr. Montgomery, of Corkerhill. Through a misunderstanding, the cup winner was scheduled at £20, and was virtually claimed, but on the position being explained, the purchaser magnanimously withdrew his claim, and bought the brother, which stood second in the same class. The quality throughout the show was most meritorious, and those interested, who were not forward, missed a treat. In the absence of Mr. Smith, the secretary, for three hours in the afternoon, Mr. Wright, the president, was in charge, and he carried out the duties of the double office with much acceptance. His happy disposition has won for him the goodwill of the Fancy. The public were admitted in good time. The judges were: Messrs. Hamilton (Caldercruix), Clark (Rutherglen), Porteous and Watson (Glasgow).

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lend and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

TWO STANDARD PUBLICATIONS.

A Superb Standard Work.

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House) and is being published in 8 monthly parts, at 6d. each. Magnificently Illustrated by that great bird artist, Mr. H. Norman.

PART 6 is now ready, price 6d. from your newsagent or direct from us packed flat in card 7d. post free. This part contains two magnificent coloured plates depicting

Price 6d.

In Part 6 of "Cage Bird Hybrids" we reach Chapter XXVII. In this Mr. Houlton deals with some Hybrids that have yet to be produced. Possible crosses between Softbills are dealt with. The whole field of exhibiting of Hybrids is covered and the scales of points for both light and dark varieties are printed. The Part is crammed full of interesting illustrations in line and wash—black and white and colour, not the least valuable being a picture that sets out the astonishing variation in eye markings in Hybrids. Information of the nature contained in this part has never before seen the light, and no Hybrid breeder can be said to have educated himself until he has perused this remarkable work. In Chapter XXX, the feeding and moulting of Hybrids is gone into exhaustively, and altogether the value of this part is immeasurably beyond the price asked for it—sixpence. Call at our offices and see it for yourself or send a London friend on your behalf.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates in the complete work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present-day type and general characteristics of a modern hybrid.

TO SAVE MONEY.

Parts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 can now be supplied for 3/4 post paid; or for 4/6 prepaid, we will take orders to supply the complete work—in parts as published. Send your order at once, direct to us, with remittance.

"OUR CANARIES"

The Book with an Object!

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN, General Canary Expert to "Cage Birds," assisted by over 100 of our present-day Leading Breeders and Authorities.

PART 5.—Now on sale everywhere, price 6d., or direct from us carefully packed in stiff card for 7d., post free. Contains two highly artistic coloured plates by Mr. H. Norman, depicting a Clear Body Dark Crested Norwich and Buff and Yellow Even-marked Borders.

Price 6d.

2 Art Plates and 24 pages of intensely interesting and thoroughly practical reading matter.

Part 5 of "Our Canaries" is of exceptional interest to all breeders and exhibitors at this time of the year, inasmuch as it deals with the preparing of Canaries for the show bench. Mr. Claude St. John, in Chapter 4, gives his own methods and those of Mr. J. C. Barnes, of obtaining that tip-top condition, without which it is useless to expect your birds to win prizes. Chapter V deals with another highly important point in Canary keeping, viz., Feeding. It explains most fully how to feed Canaries at all periods of the year; the preparation of the various foods and tit-bits, and the manner in which they should be given. That knotty point the weaning of the young birds is dealt with by such prominent breeders and exhibitors as Mr. D. Mallinson (Huddersfield), Thos. Arnott (Hawick), Levi Butterworth (Rochdale), J. Garner (Hazel Grove), W. Adams (Rochdale), T. H. Melhuish (Cardiff), R. G. Joliffe (Glasgow), and J. McLennan (Edinburgh), and alone is worth far more than the sixpence charged for the complete part. The coloured plates are magnificent standards of their particular varieties, and the numerous illustrations contained in this part are one and all lessons in themselves. We are sending copies of this work all over the world.

WHAT AN AMERICAN BREEDER THINKS OF "OUR CANARIES."

I cannot speak too highly in praise of this work. It is the finest work on Canaries that I have ever seen. I am surprised that it can be got out so cheaply. It seems to me that it should be in the hands of every Canary fancier. I cannot find words to express my appreciation for your work. Yours very truly,—A. W. BESSEY, Sunnyvale, California.

TO SAVE MONEY.

This work will be completed in 16 monthly parts, of which Parts 1 to 5 are now ready and can be supplied together, packed flat for 2/9, post free, or for 9/- prepaid we will supply the complete work in parts as published.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

16.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Sixteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first sixteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over sixteen. MINIMUM, 16 words 6d.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

in the trade would make such an offer as I have made for years past, viz., have any of my appliances on approval, test them side by side with similar articles from elsewhere, and if mine or not better value at lower price, smash them up and I will refund the whole of your money. For several years this offer has been made, but never yet has one article been broken up, nor have I ever been told that anything of mine came out of the test second best. This fact alone should prove to you who is the man to supply you with tip-top value at rock-bottom price. Clap nets made from ¾-inch mesh, genuine thread netting specially knitted for bird netting, 3 yards long, 5½ feet deep, 4 feet fly, 4/- pair; ditto, 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. Please note, these clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, each net guaranteed full measurement as stated, and are fitted up with staves, poles, pegs, hemp lines, and everything complete ready for immediate use; sparrow nets, fitted complete on 15 feet bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto, on 17 feet poles, 6/-; ditto on 19 feet poles, 6/6; Lark nets, 15 yards by 10 feet, 12/-; 18 yards, 15/-; 20 yards, 17/-; 25 yards, 21/-; 30 yards, 24/-; lined and geared ready for use. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, free from snarl or stretch, and strong as boat lines, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free. Loose netting, same as used in above clap nets, ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard, post free. This netting must not be confused with the thick American cotton netting, which is often sold for bird netting; mine is made from 66s. 3-ply thread, is very fine but strong, and does not show on the ground. Lark netting, 1½-inch mesh, 10 feet deep, 4d. yard, post free. The original Japanese bird-lime, guaranteed strongest lime made, will hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, does not run in sun, will hold even in the rain, and leaves the feathers clean in all cases, ¼-lb. 6d., ½-lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample 3d., all post free. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 18 inches wide, 1/-; ditto, 18 inches long, 9d. each. These net traps are by far the largest and most effective traps on the market. They can be baited for Hardbills and Softbills at same time, call bird can be used inside them if desired, and will catch and hold uninjured any bird from Wren to Rook. Cannot get out of order, and so simple that any child can set them. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Round or square-topped call cages, all wire tops and wood bottoms, close wired, coloured green, and made by cage-makers, not navvies, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. Store cages and everything required by catchers always in stock. Send stamp for printed price list and hints on net making. All nets thoroughly tested before sent out, and sent on approval on the distinct understanding that you get all your money back if not perfectly satisfactory in every way. All goods are of same sterling quality as before, as I have not sacrificed quality for price. Remember that a useless pair of nets are dear at any price, but a good pair will catch their cost in an hour or so. See following letters and then judge for yourself:—"26, William-street, Witham Green, Boston, September 6th.—Sir,—Please send pair nets as follows. Two year ago I had a pair from ———, which were supposed to be rot-proof, but now they are completely rotten.—Yours, H. French." "Press Wood, nr. Whitchurch, September 5th.—Sir,—Please send following. I was very pleased with your netting; it has made a good pair nets.—Yours, S. Gibbons." "2, Luke-street, Bursiem.—Sir,—I am highly satisfied with clap nets and drinkers, so now please send following.—Yours, J. Dean." "53, Liverpool-road, South Birkdale.—Sir,—Please send lb. lime. That I had from you last year was best I ever had. I have some from ———, but it is no use; I have missed over 76 in four days with it.—Yours, R. Makinson." "Mount Pleasant, Newburgh, Fife.—Sir,—I am again sending for bird-lime from you. I have got it the last three years, and it is best I ever had; no bother taking the birds off the twigs.—Yours, J. Panton." "56a, Naplerston-terrace, Jamestown.—Sir,—Please send following goods. I had three net traps some time ago from elsewhere, but they are useless.—Yours, E. Bridgman." "Jessop-street, Codnor. Sir,—Please send following. The last nets I had from you worked a treat, and come over like a flash of lightning. Just the thing for sharp birds.—Yours, P. Watson." Send your orders to the man who knows what is required for successful catching, and you will not be disappointed. I supply the leading professional catchers throughout the world. These are men who get their living by catching, and must have best appliances; so surely if I can satisfy them I can satisfy you. Remember, all on approval, cash or "Cage Birds" deposit system. See British Bird column for further advertisement.

PERHAPS YOU DO NOT KNOW

that has proved "tip-top" for rearing Canaries and Hybrids, is one of the finest things you can add instead of eggs, to three times its bulk of biscuit meal or cage-bird food, as a base for colour feeding. It not only improves the feather, but insures getting the full amount of colour out of a good pepper. Sold by all Corn and Bird Shops, in 3d., 6d. and 1/- tins. Have you seen or tried as a soft diet for Canaries and other birds? It strengthens and give stamina, and for growing stock and when colour feeding, saves any amount of trouble, in 3d., 6d. and 1/- tins, and in 7 lb. bags, 3/3.

Bear these things in mind NOW.

TROWER'S COLOUR FOOD

is a good one, and only requires damping for use; made with Finest Tasteless Pepper; requires no additions, and gives excellent results. Of all Corn and Bird Shops, in 3d., 6d. and 1/- tins, or direct from us.

struck you that by dealing with me you run no risk whatever of not getting exactly what you want? You see, I guarantee everything I sell to be exactly as represented, and in order to prove this to you I send all on approval, entirely at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or on "Cage Birds" deposit system, and if birds do not realise your every expectation you only have to return them, and back comes the whole of your money promptly and cheerfully. I was first advertiser to send all wild birds on approval, and during the whole 19 years I have been trading have never done business on any other terms. I have an exceptionally large stock of warranted genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect health and condition, at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, twelve 12/-; specially selected larger cocks, to moult for exhibition or muling, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 17/-; few extra special clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, fit for keenest competition, 3/-, 4/-, and 5/- each; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/-, twelve 7/-; splendid lot cock Bullfinches, 1/6, 2/-, and 2/6 each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- and 1/6 each; grand lot cock brown Linnets, all guaranteed clean moulted and full colour, with nut brown backs and rose red breasts, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially selected larger cocks for muling and contest singing, and guaranteed now in song, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 7/-; few exquisitely pencilled large show specimens, 1/6, 2/-, and 2/6 each; cock Greenfinches, 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6; yellow exhibition specimens, 1/- each; cock Chaffinches, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; exhibition specimens, 1/- each; Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/6, six 2/-, twelve 3/-; exhibition specimens, 1/ each; splendid lot big, bold, clean moulted cock Skylarks, in perfect feather, 6d. each, three 1/3, six 2/-, twelve 3/6; specially selected cocks, very steady for show or singing, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-; few genuine finger tame, hand-reared 1910 cock Larks, in free song, 3/-, 4/-, and 5/- each; young Canaries, 2/6 couple, 12/- dozen; Goldfinch, Linnet, and Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 4/6 dozen; Lark runner cages, 6d. and 8d. each, 4/- and 6/- dozen; penny tin drinkers, 6d. dozen, three dozen 1/3, gross 4/-; zinc ditto, everlasting wear, 9d. dozen, three dozen 2/-, 6/- gross. Dealers please send stamp for wholesale cage list; prices and sizes will astonish you. Kindly note, I claim to have more birds through my hands than any other six men in the Midlands, and challenge denial; so persons on the look-out for exhibition specimens cannot do better than place their order with me, and there is one thing they may rely upon, and that is, if I cannot give them a good bird for their money I will not send inferior specimens. Although I do not make a song about it, I supply most of the leading exhibitors of to-day, and have supplied birds that have won at Crystal Palace and every other cage of note. Visitors to Birmingham are requested to call and inspect stock of the various advertisers. They will then see who really holds the birds. As the wording of my advertisements are being copied week by week, I beg to say I have no connection whatever with any other person in the trade, and that my only name and address is—

NOTE THIS WEEK'S

Prices for CANARIES, not "Bundles of Feathers," nor Half Moulted Specimens.

Norwich & Yorkshires

The Price is Right, but the

Have on approval and test the fact.

My prices for the genuine article—with sex guaranteed—is: Pairs, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 upwards; cocks, 6/-, 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 upwards; hens, 2/-, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6, 6/- upwards; travelling cages, 3d. extra.

NORWICH OR YORKSHIRE COCKS.—Singing, and will make champions, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6 each; now to prove this, I offer to give six months' approval with these birds—i.e., to refund money in full or exchange same for a cock on full song. All other birds usual approval terms, all bearing my stamp as a guarantee of sex, and any bird proving not to be a cock bearing such stamp is exchanged, the lapse of time being no object. Hence, here is a security never offered by anyone else, and a safeguard against the now well-known "hen trick"—i.e., the tempting priced, so-called singing cocks, whether named Norwich, Hartz Rollers or Yorkshires, it is all the same. Why purchase these German hens when I offer you genuine Norwich hens? Three for 5/-. Beware of the poor late-hatched examples sold, only to die by having to moult in winter.

Read two more testimonials, with full dates. It means real cheapness, because you get a good bird at a moderate price—not the impossible low price, which spells

You have not seen these before.

Abbotstown, September 23rd, 1910,—Received Canary safely. Never more pleased with a bird in all my life. He is in splendid health and condition. It will give me pleasure to deal with you again. Edward Casey.

CLEAN MOULTED AND FEATHERED LIKE WAX.

Do you want a winner? If so, you cannot do better than place your order with Thomas, whose birds won hundreds of prizes last season, and who has had a most successful breeding season.

Note.—My birds won three 1sts and two 2nds last week in their preliminary canter. I invite you to come and see my birds for yourself. Come on any day but Sunday, and I shall be pleased to see you. I hold the largest stock in the country. If you cannot come yourselves, your order by post will receive the same prompt and personal attention.

The following are ready in clears, ticked, greens, Cinnamons, green marked, Cinnamon marked, etc., etc. Long, stylish Yorkshire cocks, 5/6, 7/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/- each. Grand, slim, upstanding hens, full of type and quality, 3/6, 4/6, 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each. Splendid matched pairs, sex guaranteed, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 25/-, 30/-, upwards.

A choice selection of stout, cobby Norwich, guaranteed bred from noted exhibition stock, same price as Yorkshires.

SPLENDID EXHIBITION SPECIMENS, in both Yorkshires and Norwich, now ready for breeding.

Write for particulars. Satisfaction absolutely guaranteed. Birds sent at my risk; 7 days' approval. Easy payments arranged if desired. Thousands of testimonials received. Send for list. Travelling cage 2d. extra.

JOE THOMAS, Breeder and Exhibitor, AMBLER THORN, HALIFAX

Winning Yorkshires.

Read following recent testimonials.—18, Burrows Road, Neath, September 26th, 1910,—The exhibition Yorkshires came in grand condition, and are beauties, and should do me some good. G. Matthews to J. Taylor. Another from: 9, St. Oswalds Road, Small Heath, Birmingham, September 24th, 1910,—Received yellow cock safe, and after looking him well over, I am more than pleased with it, and consider him a really good show bird, and should win. J. Sheppard to J. Taylor. Another from 42, Clunch Road, Holywood, Ireland, September, 1910,—The pair of Yorkshires you sent me last season have bred me some grand show birds. I showed three at our show, and won 1st and special for best in show, also 2nd and 3rd prizes. They have reared 12 fine youngsters, and I am sure your birds cannot be beaten for the price I paid for them. T. Dunwoody to J. Taylor. All are now through the moult, and in grand feather and condition; colour fed and natural colour, and all cocks, on song: Fine, stylish Yorkshire cocks at 5/6, 7/-, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Pairs matched to breed winners at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- per pair. In clears, ticked, green marked and Cinnamon marked: Hens, full of type and quality, at 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/-, 8/6, 10/6 each. Exhibition cocks and hens that can win in keen competition at reasonable prices. Please state wants. Also a few good cocks and hens that can win at local and members' shows, at 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each. Illustrated new price list post free. Travelling cages 3d. extra. Seven days' approval at my risk.

Norwich, Easy Terms, etc.

Large, cobby Norwich cocks, on song, at 6/-, 7/-, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each. Extra good hens at 3/6, 4/6, 5/6, 7/-, 8/6 each. Pairs, matched to breed winners, at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/- per pair, colour fed and natural colour; exhibition cocks and hens, very reasonable. State wants. Champion Yorkshires and Norwich songsters, at 6/-, 7/-, 8/6, 10/6 each. Easy payment system; birds sent off at once on receiving first payment, in any of above varieties. Send at once for full particulars, terms, etc., of my "Original" easy payment system, post free. All on 7 days' approval. Only and old address—

I have removed from St. Huberts Road to 44, Lomax Street, writes Mr. R. W. Mercer (Gt. Harwood).

Kindly note our change of address to White Hart Yard, Newcastle-on-Tyne, write Messrs. Frank Penny and Co.

Splendid classification and good prize money at Broughty Ferry Show. Fanciers should get a schedule at once.—(Advt.)

Will show secretaries please note my change of address to 62, Whitchurch Road, Cathays, Cardiff? writes Mr. Alf. Shellam.

I have changed my address to 11, Robertson Road, Preston, Brighton, writes Mr. A. T. Riddles, sec. of the Brighton C.B.A.

There is a splendid classification at Wellingboro' Show, and fanciers should make a point of getting a schedule at once.—(Advt.)

Class 4 in our schedule should read: "Border Fancy, clear or ticked yellow, hen," writes Mr. J. C. Bell, hon. sec. of the Border City (Carlisle) O.S.

Mr. A. Gilchrist (Coldstream) has been appointed to judge cage birds at our show on November 26, writes Mr. J. Brockie, sec. of the Earlston (N.B.) O.S.

"Little Jim" lectures at the Dulwich and Peckham's headquarters on Tuesday next, Reindeer Hotel, Rye Lane, writes Mr. H. W. Tomsett (Brockley).—(Advt.)

I have taken over the secretaryship of the Rotherham C.B.S., the late sec., Mr. G. Oakes, having resigned, writes Mr. B. Bailey, 47, Craven Street, Parkgate, near Rotherham.

I thank all who have applied for schedules writes Mr. E. R. Woodhead, Secretary of the Hartlepoons C.B.S.; same will be forwarded in due course, probably about a week hence."

I shall be glad to receive schedules of shows from secretaries, writes Mr. W. J. Sanders (35, Sea, View Terrace, Swansea). I may say I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for nearly four years.

The date of the annual show of the Selkirkshire P. and P.A. is fixed for November 26, writes Mr. A. J. Brodie, the hon secretary. The judge of Canaries will be Mr. James Neil (Kelso).

It was owing to a printer's error that the show schedules of the Clapham C.B.A. were not ready until September 27, writes Mr. A. C. Askew, the hon. secretary. We are hoping to have a record exhibition.

As we have the Border Canary Club's support we have altered our show date to November 17, in order to avoid clashing with Swansea show, write Messrs. Tottle and Minty, hon. secs. of the Frome C.B.S.

A printer's error occurs in the Border Fancy section of our schedule, writes Mr. W. H. Pickles, hon. sec. of the Morecambe C.B.S. Class 15 should read: "Yellow, any variety cock"; class 16, "Buff, any variety, cock."

This year, writes Mr. J. Machecknie, sec. of the Dumfries A.S., a section for cage birds has been added to our show, to be held on October 11 and 12, and we hope it will be rewarded with the success it deserves.

Our schedules are now in the printers' hands, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall, hon. sec. of the Newcastle C.B.S. We have two more open classes than at last year's show, making 85 in all; the members' classes added make up a total of 126.

We have secured the services of Mr. Jas. Sharp (Bathgate) as judge of British birds at our show on Nov. 12, writes Mr. A. Cant, hon. sec. of the Hamilton (Cadzou Oaks) O.S. This completes our list of judges. We are giving 51 classes.

We have changed our judging arrangements and Mr. A. Royle (Sale) is to officiate; also we are putting up a silver cup to be won outright first time with best team of 4 birds, writes Mr. H. W. Jones, Hon. Sec. of the Eccles and Dis. C.B.S.

We have engaged Mr. W. Mossie to judge the Border Fancy section at our show on December 3, writes Mr. T. Duncan, sec., Whitburn, N.B., C.B.S. I had a letter from Mr. Smellie saying he had made previous arrangements to judge at Cupar on the same date.

I have been appointed secretary of the Grangemouth O.S. in succession to Mr. G. Smith, he having left the district to take up another situation. All communications respecting the society should in future be addressed to me at 18, Wallace Street, Grangemouth.—J. D. MILLER.

Our show on October 6 and 7, to be held at the Corn Hall, Norwich, is open to all, writes Mr. R. Roll, sec. of the Norwich Alliance C.B.A. The only specialist club's support is from the Foreign Bird Club. Crest and Norwich fanciers can freely enter. I will accept post entries up to first post Monday morning, but not later.

The Blaydon-on-Tyne and Dis. C.B.S. have secured the patronage for their annual exhibition of the Northern Crest Club, the Northern Yorkshire C.C., the National British Bird and M.C., the Crested C.C. (for the Robert's Cup, value 25 guineas), the Northern Counties Norwich Club, and also the Northern Lizard Club. —GEO. HAYVER, sec.

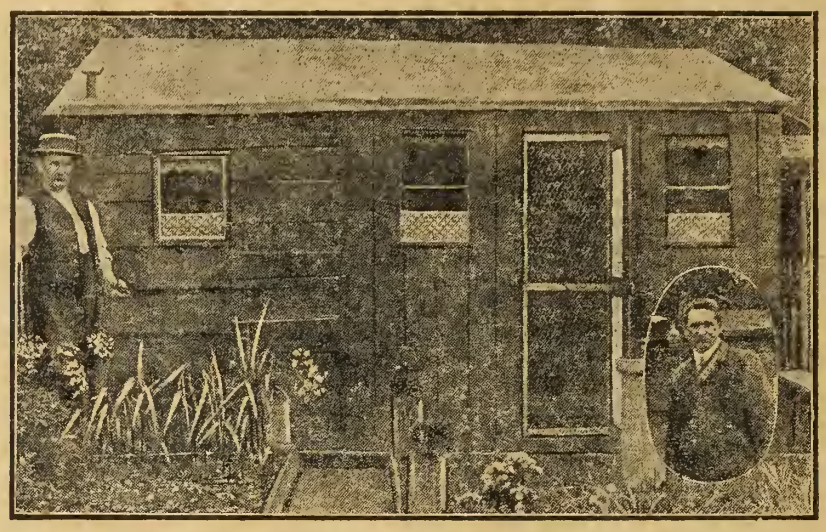
The Newcastle C.B.S. are holding a washing exhibition at their meeting on October 6. The meeting will commence half an hour earlier, viz., 7.30., instead of 8. Two medals will be given for best washer, and the members who do not compete will judge. Entrance fee 6d. Competitors are requested to bring their own birds and requisites, except the bowls, which will be provided.—T. C. CRAWHALL, hon. sec.

Please accept my thanks for your kindness in illustrating my yellow Border Fancy hen in CAGE BIRDS this week, writes Mr. E. R. Roberts (Pen-y-Groes). I am pleased to say she is looking as well as ever, and has bred good specimens this year. I have had a very successful season, having bred 138 young, and they are all doing well, and now coming through their moult nicely. Some of them look very promising.

Mr. Fred J. Rook (Chichester) writes recommending, as a remedy for baldness in birds, the use of "Gamages' hair, fur, and feather restorer," he having had good results therefrom. The preparation, if it cannot be obtained locally, can me had from Messrs. Maggs, of Swansea, or from Mr. Rudd, of Norwich.

Our "Guide to the Shows."

Next week we purpose publishing, in conformity with our usual custom, a guide to the cage bird shows that are to be held during the 1910-11 season. Whilst we cannot hope to include all the shows (some societies have not yet decided upon their show dates), we are relying upon the secretaries and officials of those societies whose exhibition dates, etc., have been arranged, to furnish us with the necessary information to enable us to make our list as complete as possible. The particulars we are wanting are: (a) the name and date of show; (b) the names of the judges officiating at same; (c) the approximate number of classes provided; (d) the name and address of the secretary (or show-manager); and (e) whether held under Cage Bird Union rules. We should be glad to hear from the secretaries of Caerau, Haverfordwest, and Woking shows.



AN OUTDOOR BIRDROOM WHEREIN ROLLER CANARIES ARE BRED.

This homely yet thoroughly practical and efficient outdoor birdroom is the property of Messrs. W. and A. Brooke (Church Road, Smethwick) who are enthusiastic breeders of Roller Canaries, and who find that their pets do well out in the open in this birdroom.

We have got new headquarters at the Institute, Manchester Road, which are far more cosy than the others, and more in the centre of the town, writes Mr. Hy. Howard, Sec. of the Walkden and Dis. C.B.S.

The judge selected for our cage bird show on October 27 is Mr. E. A. Lovell (Bristol), writes Mr. W. J. Davies, hon. sec., Treharris F.S. We are giving 16 classes for cage birds, and the show will be held under C.B.U. rules.

Our final table show is fixed for Oct. 1, and admission will be free, writes Mr. H. Foden, Hon. Sec. of the Ashton-under-Lyne O.S. The show will be open to the public at 6.30, when we should be pleased to see a crowded house.

A magnificent programme consisting of no fewer than 38 musical items was gone through at the first annual concert of the Wood Green F. and F.S. (in aid of the cup funds) on September 22, at the Canning Hall, Canning Crescent. Considerable talent was displayed, and the concert was a great success throughout.

I was very surprised and delighted, writes Mrs. E. Fildes (Sale), to find the picture of my yellow Green Border in the last issue of CAGE BIRDS. Please accept my best thanks for the honour, and also convey my thanks to your artist, Mr. Norman, for making such a life-like drawing of the bird.

The Newcastle Show.

Newcastle Society are trying to excel themselves in their show this year. They have almost all the important patronages. They are giving a 2s. 6d. special for most points in each class, and 10s. 6d. for best bird in almost all sections. The crest and foreign sections are having more valuable specials through the generosity of two vice-presidents.

The N.B.B. and M.C.

A private meeting of the National British Bird and Mule Club was called for Sept 22, at "The Feathers," Gt. Chapel Street, Westminster, for the purpose of considering the suggestion "that an association be formed to protect the interests of bird-keepers and traders in commodities connected with bird-keeping." No business of importance was transacted, and the gathering was purely of an informal kind.

Hanley C.B.S. "Specials."

Messrs. Simpson, Hardy, Robinson, and Peake have given for most entries in open classes at our show on October 20 (members not to count), a real Wedgwood Jasper timepiece and pair of vases, value £2 2s., direct from the Wedgwoods and Sons' works, at Etruria, writes Mr. B. Peake, hon. sec. of the Hanley C.B.S. There are also two candlesticks in Jasper. The Society have given two 10s. cash specials, one for most points in Norwich and one ditto in Yorkshires in open classes, members' classes not to count.

I shall classify any entries that fanciers may send me who have not been supplied with schedule for our show on Oct. 8, writes Mr. R. Whitton, Hon. Sec. of the Broughty Ferry C.B.S. The show is held under the patronage of the Scottish Specialist Clubs, and we have given a liberal classification.

Fifty-four Young Rollers.

At the end of last June, writes Mr. Arnold Read (West Bromwich), I purchased the entire bird-room stock of Mr. J. C. Schluter, of London, including three excellent "Glucke" cocks, the Palace (champion class) winner 1910, and thirty-four young birds. This year also I bred fifty-four young birds from a "Glucko" cock, half Glucke, and half Seifert, and an excellent Seifert cock. I must say I admire the "Glucke" note immensely, and my birdroom seems full of it. As a constant reader of your valuable paper CAGE BIRDS, I am anxious to encourage my brother novices, by giving them knowledge of my very successful breeding season.

The Lochgelly C.B.S. Show.

Lochgelly fanciers have from time to time made various attempts to start a cage bird society; but failed until November of last year, when it was decided to run a show. This was fixed for October 15. A few of the best "beggers" in our midst then canvassed the district, and we are now in a position to guarantee prize money. We have 65 specials; also several gold medals, and three beautiful silver trophies value from 7 to 10 guineas. For a small district and as starters I think we have done well. We hope fanciers will support us. We are convinced that if we get a good send off Lochgelly will in the near future become the premier show of Fife at least.—THOS. TAYLOR, chairman of the Lochgelly C.B.S.

TESTIMONY THAT TELLS

I have had no fewer than 37 orders in response to my small advert re Linnet and cages in CAGE BIRDS. To those whose orders were delayed I beg to tender an apology, this large number being the cause. If took me all my time to send off the birds, etc. This speaks volumes for CAGE BIRDS as an advertising medium, and the result of same completely surprised me. I wish CAGE BIRDS the success it richly deserves.—SAM HOWORTH (Ashton-under-Lyne).

I have sent birds all over the United Kingdom, even to Australia and America, through my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS. Goodness knows to what parts of the globe your paper does not go. I have never had a complaint yet, but many repeated orders. My brothers and father and I have used your paper, CAGE BIRDS, for year. I am sending enclosed letters for you to see for yourself. B. SMELT (Derby). (We have perused the testimonials sent with this letter; they evidence the satisfaction given to Mr. Smelt's customers.—Editor.)

Kindly allow me to express my thanks to those who so kindly responded to my appeal for specials, writes Mr. A. Macdonald, Sec. of the City of Glasgow O.A. Although comparatively a stranger to many of the Norwich Section, that section has come forward so well that our schedule, which will be issued in a few days, will bear comparison with any that have gone before. The Association's is the only great show in Britain that pays full prize money in every class, irrespective of the number of entries, and to uphold this position, I would appeal to all to enter as many as possible. Especially do I appeal to the Crest, Belgian, and Yorkshire Associations on the English side of the border.

A COLOURED PLATE FREE.

A Coloured Plate should be found in every copy of this week's CAGE BIRDS. We have decided to issue these, from our surplus stock, for the benefit of new readers of our periodical. We would ask all old friends who may already have included in their stock the plate they receive to confer upon us the favour of passing it along to someone amongst their acquaintances who is interested in birds and likely to become a recruit to the ranks of practical bird-keepers.

Under the White Rose.

MEMBERS' SHOWS were the principal items of interest in the West Riding last week-end, and they were patronised by a good number of visitors, all I suppose eager to see what class of birds was likely to be out next week at the first show of the season, viz., Bradford City; and those who saw the birds were struck by the spick and span appearance of them. Many of the birds looked as though they had been through the moult a good few weeks, so well finished off were they.

BRADFORD EAST was first in my line of route, and 3.15 found me at Park Chapel Schools, where I found Mr. C. Whiting adjudicating on the 117 birds put down, and "he wor sweeating ower't job." Rather a warm day, wasn't it, Charlie? The birds here were well through and very level; some of them will be heard of later. I was delighted to see that the members of this go-ahead society were eager for the fray, notwithstanding the fact that several of them will be competing in the open classes this year. I wonder how they will like their first taste of it. A lot will depend upon whether it's sweet or bitter; let's hope it's fairly sweet.

CITY OF BRADFORD O.S. lay next on my line of travel, and I found they had even topped Easter's number, having a grand total of 123 birds on view, and a grand lot these were! And what struck me was the very good length of the majority of the exhibits, combined with nice quality and rich colour. This augurs well for their open show on Saturday. There is nothing like members' support for a good show. I had a look at all the Yorkshires but could not get to see the Norwich, Mr. W. A. Cowgill, the judge, being engaged in the placing of the cards during the time of my visit. I had a little chat with some of the officials in regard to their fixture next week, and they were in high spirits, fully expecting to have a real good show. The ladies, too, are expecting a lot of hungry fanciers to tea, and are making ample provision for them.

A SHORT walk and a penny tram ride took me to the headquarters of the Bradford West Society (drat it, it's all Bradford!), fully expecting to see a good number of birds, but I was terribly disappointed. A society like this and only just over 40 entries; what's the matter? Are the birds up there too good to put down at members' shows? Holding them back for the open, eh? They even had to amalgamate several classes, with the approval, of course, of all concerned. Shall I tell the tale, Geo—, no! not this time. There's nowt beats good owd 'uns, Geo— (nearly done it ageean), nobut young ones, at's better, Geo—. The best bird special here was won by a certain fancier, who was not quite satisfied that it was the best bird. It should have been won by such and such a bird; but then this belonged to him as well. It's all right when you think you have one better than the best. Mr. W. Cruise placed the tickets here; sorry they did not find you a little more to do, Willie.

TIME did not permit me getting as far as Gt. Horton "G.I." show; the daylight is now shortening so fast. But I hear some extra nice stuff was down for Mr. L. Dykes to sort over. Numbers were not large, only 30 odd; quality, however, was excellent, several being sought after by the exhibiting fraternity. Those are the sort of birds you want nowadays.

YEAR-BOOKS of the "Open Norwich Plainhead Canary Club" and "The National Green Marked Y.C.C." are both out, and they contain full information for all members and intending members; they are, in fact, a perfect record of all the rules, competitions, prizes, etc. Intending members should apply to the respective secretaries at once, so as to get conversant with the advantages to be gained.

Bird Seeds.

The Why, How and When of Seeds for Cage Birds

While down by the seaside last week I received a letter from your worthy secretary, Mr. Law, asking me if I would oblige him with a paper on this subject. I had a certain amount of misgiving under such short notice, but felt it an honour to comply. I am not going to start with any apology, but will do my best with this subject.

Concerning Canary Seed.

Taking the most important item in the diet of cage birds, this is undoubtedly Canary seed. Some say it originated in the Canary Isles; hence its name. However, it is now cultivated in Spain, Morocco, and Egypt, and in the Turkish possessions, although we get a big bulk from La Plata. All these different grades are called after the country from which they are grown and imported.

There is not a shadow of doubt that the best we get is Spanish, although not necessarily grown in Spain proper. But in selling, we must do so under the designation of Spanish or Spanish kind. I mention this particularly, for a lot of "Giant," "Bold," "No. 1," etc., varieties are really the same seed graded and sold according to size, the price naturally following.

To distinguish the Spanish seed from others, we have a longer and bolder seed than is grown elsewhere. The next best Canary seed we get is that from Morocco, which varies to some extent in size. It is sold under the name of the two principal ports it is shipped from, viz., Saffi and Marzagan. Its characteristics are somewhat like those of the Spanish seed, but it is more round, and not the length of the Spanish variety.

The next is Egyptian and Turkish. Both these are smaller than those previously mentioned, and generally much more trouble to clean.

The smaller variety we get is Plate (or that from La Plata), and naturally the cheapest, and generally the dirtiest.

The small quantity of English Canary cultivated is hardly worth mentioning, as very little reaches our principal ports and markets, which are London and Hull. I saw some very good English seed a few weeks ago when in the Eastern Counties. It equalled in size a good bold Spanish; but the failing was the harvesting.

This seed, Canary, is the most essential article of food for the biggest percentage of our birds kept in confinement. As bread is to the human being, so is Canary seed to the cage bird, excepting, of course, Soft Bills and smaller foreigners; then millet seed takes the premier position, the reason for which I will touch upon later.

Canary Seed Analysed.

The component parts of Canary seed are: Water, albumenoids, fats, carbo-hydrates, and ash or mineral matter, in the order named. Being somewhat deficient in albumenoids and fats, we must naturally find other seeds to fill up this deficiency; but before turning to the next most important seed in our feathered friends' dietary, a word on purchasing Canary seed. I am not over keen on the exceptionally large "Giant" seed. A good bold seed, of the true Spanish character, is my favourite—a long, well filled, bright, and, above all, clean sample, that you can put your hand freely down when in a bag. No fear is then necessary as you have a good sun-dried seed. Sun-dried seed is always the best. Kiln-dried, of necessity, must carry some of the sulphur used in drying, which is rank poison to our birds. So keen has Canary-seed buying become that the brokers of to-day reject the kiln-dried, as there is not the market for it. I am not, however, going to dispute the fact that a lot does reach our markets and get sold.

Rape Seed.

I contend that rape seed is the next most important seed our Canaries and British Finches require, containing as it does a bigger amount of albumenoids and fats than Canary seed; in fact, two component parts lacking in Canary and hemp seed. Again, the fats are more pronounced than in hemp.

Rubsen, or red seed, or German summer rape, as it is called, is the best. Again, it is not necessary that it be "made in Germany," for we get good French and Russian. I am bound to admit that there are as many grades in this as in Canary seed, also that we get very little really good Rubsen in England. My advice is, when you do get a chance of getting some fair sized, sweet, clean, nutty-flavoured (not bitter) rape, buy a quantity and store in a cool, dry place. It improves with age, and is at its best when about three years old; only beware of your storage. The seed must be turned over occasionally. The great trouble otherwise is the germination of weavels caused by heat and dirt.

The other variety of rape is black, principally English and French, grown for their yield of rape oil, commonly known as colza oil. Very often charlock seed (which is a mustard seed) is mixed with rape; so beware, especially for your Canaries; it is, however, one of Nature's wild seeds, largely forming a staple food for our British Finches in their wild state.

A Seed Rich in Oil.

The next seed is hemp. Hemp is cultivated extensively in Europe and America; also in many of our over-sea possessions. It is very rich in oil, yielding nearly as much as rape, but of rather a harsher kind. When buying, care must be taken to get equality in size and ripeness. Avoid the green, unripe seed, or you will be courting trouble, such as diarrhœa and inflammation. The shell, or husk is said to contain an irritant poison, and when ground, can be used as an insect powder. This past season has been a very bad one for hemp seed. A big lot got on to the market full of small holes, with the kernel eaten away. It has many uses commercially, such as rope-making, etc.

A Good "Corrective."

Teazle seed should, in my estimation, form a bigger item in our seed bill than usually, containing as it does a wonderful amount of medicinal properties. Canaries generally like it. It acts as a corrective, and carries off the effects of over-indulgence of oily seeds. It is cultivated in southern Europe mostly. On no account be without it for British Finches. They require a larger quantity than any other cage birds.

Linseed or Flax.

Give me a good Dutch linseed, although we get some really fine Plata. Care must again be exercised in giving this rich oily seed. You can safely leave it out during the hot summer weather, but it is very useful during the moulting season, and the winter months. In case of colds, it is invaluable, opening the pores of the skin, its glutinous nature also assisting the digestion. Its properties are so well known that I need not dwell on this seed. It is cultivated extensively throughout Europe and America for many other commercial purposes than our requirements for bird foods.

Maw, or Poppy Seed.

Maw seed or poppy seed is one of the most useful and stimulating seeds that enter into the requirements of our birds. It contains a rich bland fixed oil, and it is very soothing and sweet. There are two classes of this seed. When buying, get the small blue-grey, not the dull grey, which is a cheaper kind. It is grown principally in Holland and Russia. The Dutch is undoubtedly the best.

Gold of Pleasure.

Gold of pleasure is very like maw in its effects. Although rich in oil, it is not by any means so easy of digestion, but has a more lasting effect. It has come to the front of late years by leaps and bounds; when growing, it very much resembles shepherd's purse. It is principally imported from France, Germany, and Holland, the extracted oil being used as a food, also for soapmaking, painting, etc.

Concerning Niger Seed.

Many contrary opinions are held concerning this flesh-forming, nutritive, non-stimulating, oil giving seed. India is said to be its home. It grows in pods something like our beans.

My personal experiences are all in its favour. When getting Britishers ready for the show bench I give half a teaspoonful of niger each day for a full previous week, my Finch mixture already containing a sixteenth part of the whole. There is not the slightest doubt it is a preventative of egg-binding in Canaries. A friend of mine once tried it on a pullet which was troubled that way. He assured me he met with beneficial results on three separate occasions; he gave a handful each day. When buying, see it is a coal-black and shiny; don't have a dull, broken, rancid seed, or look out for trouble.

Millet Seeds.

Indian white and red millet seeds are the ones that enter our list for cage birds. Indian is the smallest and white and red the largest. It is mostly for Foreign birds that it is used. All the millets contain a big percentage of starch and sugar, and are necessary for our warm climate birds, more so than for Canaries and British. I must not omit to name spray millet, which is cultivated in the South of France and Italy, and is much the same size as Indian. It is also used as a food for human beings.

The Most Difficult Hybrid.

THOMAS SMITH (Glasgow).

Ten years ago the fascinating Canary-Bullfinch hybrid was looked upon as a rara avis, and when one of this cross appeared on the show-bench it was considered a living wonder; all eyes were turned to it, and breeders who could not attend the exhibitions where it was entered eagerly read the show reports, and lye and bye, several entered the competition. The production of the Canary-Bullfinch was found to be not so difficult as was supposed. As in every other section of our hobby, good, bad, and indifferent examples of this cross have been bred. The parentage will no doubt be visible in a diminitive hybrid, bred by the mating of a small Canary with a Bullfinch, and the bright colours will exist; but a specimen of that description would not have the faintest chance of winning against what is regarded as the popular winner. Size and shape are necessary in a pair that are expected to breed a Crystal Palace champion.

The Male Canary Parent.

I know from observation that breeders do not always pick a cock Canary having the proper type and size. The question naturally arises: What stamp of Canary should be mated to the Bullfinch hen to ensure the desired results? In my opinion a large Canary of the Norwich type, into which there has been bred as much Cinnamon and green blood as possible, is necessary to keep up the size. In the hybrid, as everybody admits, colour is a most important factor, and while colour-feeding is an aid, the ground or natural colouring is the foundation upon which quality of feather is based. The green feather is beautifully laced, and transmits the "lacing" to the young hybrid. Cinnamon and yellow make the colour very much denser. No breeder can afford to ignore these properties.

The fancier will thus see that a specially bred Canary is as essential for crossing with wild birds, as a Sib.-breeding hen is for breeding with the Goldfinch, Linnet, and Greenfinch. It is necessary, therefore, to start with a male Canary that is suitable for the purpose.

If the correct type is not available at the start, a cross between a Scotch Fancy and a Norwich might do, until a pair set apart had reared suitable stock. The majority of breeders act as if there were no science in the raising of stock birds. I would counsel all who think of hybrid breeding to procure a pair of off-cast Norwich Canaries, of the proper size and colour, and work them up.

The Bullfinch Parent.

The desirable Canary having been secured, he should be placed in a cage with the wild bird. Keep the birds together in pairs as they are to be bred. This course is recommended on the ground that they pair up the more readily than if kept separate or among others. In the latter case they might form an attachment to another male in the room, and so long as he is within ear-call, the female may refuse to mate with the mate the owner has selected for her. This may be regarded as of no moment, but her refusal to become attached to the Canary in nine cases out of ten may lead to a lost season.

Until recently the British Bullfinch hen was used for hybrid breeding, and one or two smart, nicely marked Canary-Bullfinch hybrids were staged, and were at leading exhibitions. But as it became widely known that a small hybrid had little chance in competition with a large hybrid, the Siberian Bullfinch hen was selected. In fact, for exhibiting purposes, the only hope of producing a show hybrid is centred on the Siberian Bullfinch hen.

In purchasing a Bullfinch hen to mate with the Canary, care has to be exercised in deciding upon a healthy bird. It should be sprightly, and full of vigour, and preferably a young bird. As the Siberian finds its way into the Scottish home, the shows in Scotland will, no doubt, provide a class for the "Siberian Bullfinch hen," which should stimulate Scottish breeders to go in for the very best that can be bought, namely, hens that give every promise of being successful exhibits, and producers of good hybrids. I would say, select a large, up-standing hen, with a fine bloom of feather. The cap should be all black, the body the usual grey, and the wing bar as perfect as can be; the black feathers on cap, wing, and tail, should have a fine gloss; and in other ways she should at all times have the appearance of being well groomed. A dull Bullfinch that passes its days sleeping and moping, is apt to have broken and bedraggled feathers; she seldom improves, but more frequently goes back, or loses vigour; such a bird will be of little use for breeding. I had a Bully hen which had been carelessly kept, consequently, had poor feather, but having plenty of vigour and with careful keeping she soon got into condition and was as serviceable as any other member of the aviary. In the buying, common-sense has to be exercised.

For trying one's patience and perseverance no branch of the Fancy equals that of breeding the Canary with the Bullfinch, but a couple of months' successful breeding are worth a whole season of ordinary operations. Produce a couple of champion crosses of this kind, and success on the show bench is pretty certain all over the United Kingdom. And there is the fact that a handsome price can easily be obtained for a first-class specimen.

Eastfield Side C.B.F.S.

The members journeyed to South Wingfield for the second time this season, this time to play a football match. We started by brake at 2 o'clock, dressed in fancy costumes. A large crowd witnessed about 24 of us start from headquarters (the Masons Arms), and we caused quite a sensation travelling through the towns. They were expecting us at South Wingfield, and the whole village turned out to greet us. The match started right away. The Canary men won the toss, and kicked down hill. South Wingfield were soon pressing, but F. Hawksley saved finely. Then the Canary men had a turn, but we were repulsed. However, Higgins scored with a good shot. This livened the birdy men up, and from a corner well placed by Smedley, one of the homesters fisted out. J. Wallaco scored with a free kick. The homesters got away, and they scored again. The Canary men, not to be denied, went down the field in a line, Smedley nearly scoring. Bernard saved his shot, which went to Nuttall, who scored with a good shot, which gave Bernard no chance. Half-time arrived with the score 2 each. Nothing was scored in the second half. Result: Eastfield Side 2, South Wingfield 2. After the match tea was provided at the Manor Hotel. The host and hostess (Mr. and Mrs. J. Hunt) knew how to cater for the hungry Canary men, who spent the rest of the evening in song and jest. Mr. F. Hawksley was at the piano. Songs were sung by Messrs. Leader, Smedley, the Wright Bros., R. Nuttall, and Hawksley. The time for returning arrived all too soon.—R. NUTTALL, Sec.

Bankfoot and District C.B.S.

On September 11 the members had a ramble to Oxenhope. Starting from headquarters, the party went via Carrbottom Road and Haycliff Hill, over Pickles Hill to Horton Bank Top, where they caught the car and rode to Queensbury; then they walked via Albert Road and over the mountain and Swelling Hill to the Goose Inn at Causeway Foot, where they decided to have tea, early though it was, as they would not be able to get any for two hours after leaving here. It was a good substantial meat tea, to which every man did ample justice. After tea we walked by way of the fields behind the Goose Inn until we reached the valley just above Ogden reservoir; then we turned to the right and followed the footpath across the Moors to Oxenhope. It was now getting dusk, and we thought it advisable to be making tracks for home, which we did by way of Denholme and Thornton, a walk which was enjoyed by all. We now decided to have another tram ride into Bradford, where we parted, each going his own particular route home. The weather was dull at first, but became very nice at about 3 o'clock, and continued so until we reached home; the distance travelled would be close on twenty miles.—W. NORTH, assistant sec.

The Shows.

LANCASTER (Primrose).

Lancaster Primrose C.B.A. held their 4th annual show Sept. 23 and 24, in the Central Hall, Great John Street. The society had the patronage of the two specialist Border Fancy Clubs. The show room is one of the best in England, being on the second floor of the hall, and only one door into the room; it can also be heated with hot water. The hon. sec., Mr. J. H. Nayler, carried out his duties in a most satisfactory manner, and looked well after the wants of the exhibits. Mr. H. J. Brown was show manager, and was assisted by a capital committee; and it was very pleasing to see the birds well staged and everything in its proper place. We must congratulate one and all upon the able manner in which the show was worked. The entries were much better than in previous years, and was considered extremely good, seeing it was held so early in the season. The challenge prize, won by Mr. G. Brown, of Chirnside in 1909, was won this year by Mr. H. W. Howe, of Wellingborough, for most points gained by three nominated birds. Mr. T. Cubby, of Carlisle, won the Club medal for best Border, with a gem of a buff cock, his hull hen being the runner-up. In the Norwich section the chief winners were Messrs. Howe and Lawson; in the Yorkshire section, Messrs. Wilkinson and Woodhead, A. Hirst, and I. Stewart. The Mules and British section were very good, and attracted a great number of the visitors during the two days of the show. Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) judged the Canaries and Mules, and Mr. S. Mulliner (Lancaster) the British birds and gift class.

NEWMILNS.

The Newmilns annual show, scheduled the "model country show," came off on September 24th, in the Morton Hall. The hall is well adapted for the housing of cage birds, being free from draughts, and having good ventilation; and it is well lighted. The Border Fancy and British bird sections were good, some classy exhibits in both sections being staged. But what, oh what, came over the Scotch Fancy men? Just fancy: 14 classes provided for and every one of them cancelled! Now, this will never do for the "Model Show." There are any amount of good exhibitors and good exhibits in the district. We hear that some slight dissatisfaction was felt at the "sliding scale" method of paying prize money, but surely this alone was not the sole cause of cancellation, from "the only country show in Scotland giving full classification in this section." Mr. R. D. Mair is a hard working and most courteous secretary, and he is assisted by a committee of good fanciers. Everything calculated to make the show a success was efficiently done. Mr. Robert McDowell, president, has the welfare of the show at heart as have also the working committee, amongst whom we noticed Messrs. H. Mitchell, W. M'Geachie, E. Ralston, J. Pollock, J. Reid, G. Girvan, W. M'Cartney, J. Dykes, Auld Bros., Williams Bros., J. Aaron, Smith and M'Cartney, A. Morton, W. Brown, T. Nisbet, and W. Armour. Mr. Gavin Alston judged all classes and his awards gave general satisfaction.

The Critique.

BORD. FCY.: YELL. CK. CL., ETC. (8): 1 and Border Fancy Medal, Findlay, gem, correct type, A1 quality, well worth its place, lovely col. and feather; 2, Walker, very similar but not quite the finish of winner, beautifully staged; 3, Monaghan, another grand one, just a wee bit thick; vhc, Cunningham; he, Clark; c, Withers. HEN (5): 1, sp, Walker, cl. yell. and a right good one, perfect head and neck, finished to perfection; 2, Clark, another nice little hen, true Border all over, presses winner; 3, McCarrall, lovely head, perfect feather, smooth as glass, grand type, not far away; vhc, Duncan; he, Graham. BUFF CK. A.O.S. BRIT. OR FOR. (6): Erskine (Capell Tanager), Troon winner, in lovely bloom, well staged; 2, Johnstone (Bramble-finch), very good Brain, fine size and col., lovely spangling; 3, Morrison, pair of long-tailed Grass finches, in best possible condition, lovely staging, some thought might perhaps have won; vhc, Callacher; Malcolmson absent. SELL. 7/6 (3): 1, McQuiston; 2, Morrison; Malcolmson absent.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN DERBY.

The Scottish Metropolitan (open Derby) O.S. held their 3rd annual show on September 24th, and it proved one of the greatest successes in the annals of the club. The entries were about the same as last year's, and, considering the poor results of many breeders this season, the show was a really good one. Quality as well as number was well represented. After many months of rising hopes and shattered ideals, the day of competition so keenly looked forward to by breeders of the bird of circle has passed, and the verdict has been given to the specimen considered the best youngster of the season; and never has an award been given where greater pleasure has been voiced. All the breeders and exhibitors present had a thorough examination of the cup winner, and were unanimous in the opinion that he was "A gold one." It turned up in the 1st class of the show a yellow cock, the property of Mr. J. Dalgleish, and a better all-round specimen of a yellow cock it has never been our pleasure to handle. It has free action, splendid top end, rare reach, lovely packed neck, and top shoulder, and grand length of side; it is in grand bloom, and is an ideal specimen. Mr. Dalgleish was heartily congratulated on his win. The prizes for yell. pied and buff cocks were accounted for by Mr. J. McLennan, another breeder whose fame is now world-wide among prominent breeders. Mr. Drysdale accounted for the prizes in the buff piebald class with a strong representative hen. Mr. Watson won in the yell. hens, with a very forward bird, staged in grand bloom, while Mr. McLennan got the award in yell. pied hens. Buff hens were strong in numbers and quality, and the award was given to the exhibit of Mr. J. D. Brown, while an old breeder (Mr. Hogg) won first in the buff piebald hens. Belgians were well represented, but taken all over, did not come up to their brethren; while possessing plenty of substance they were lacking a little in nerve, and did not get to work as soon as was expected; probably later on they will be more tractable. Capt. Philip accounted for first in the cock class with a strong built yellow, while Mr. Greig secured the award in the hen class also with a yellow. The judging was in the hands of well-known experts. The yellow cocks and yellow pied cocks, yellow hens, and yellow pied hens, were under the care of Messrs. Low and Fulton; and Messrs. Park and Hamilton took the remainder. Mr. J. Kean officiated as judge of the Belgians. The awards of all were well received. The show was held in the Buccleuch parish hall—a grand place for a show of this size, being well lighted and free from draught. The management were to be congratulated on the untiring efforts of their worthy hon. sec., Mr. J. R. Mickle, who had everything in A1 order for the comfort of exhibits and exhibitors. We noticed that the result board (the idea of the well-known Mr. Kinlayside) was used, and greatly assisted those present. Sales were, on the whole, good. The most notable was the yell. foul cock of Mr. Bell's; this was sold to Mr. Maxwell, of Lauriston, while Mr. Robertson's two Belgian cocks found a purchaser in Mr. McClure, of Glasgow. The office-bearers were:—Hon. pres., Mr C. R. Drysdale; vice-pres., Mr. W. Thornton; hon. sec. and treasurer, Mr. J. R. Meikle; acting committee, Messrs. J. Dalgleish, J. McLennan, A. Paterson, J. B. Kerr, W. Allan, and A. Stanert; auditors, Messrs. M. Petrie, J. Sinclair, and W. Whitefield.

The Truth about Bird Protection.

Interview with Sir Walter Gilbey.

Some remarkable facts concerning the wonderful increase of bird-life in recent years. The damage the feathered hordes work to agricultural interests. A crying need for relaxation of bird protection.

Readers of CAGE BIRDS will be cognisant of the fact that one or two societies are now endeavouring to obtain the extension of the present Wild Birds Protection Act, in doing so aiming a blow at the hobby of bird-keeping on the specious pleas that the bird-catcher is responsible for the practical extermination of our English song-birds, and that his calling is essentially a cruel and brutal one—pleas well calculated, as those in office doubtless thoroughly realise, to appeal to the sentimental side of their patrons and induce a flow of those subscriptions to which such societies owe their existence. We have always strongly combated the view that bird-keepers are responsible for the extermination—or threatened extermination, if there be such a danger, which we unhesitatingly deny—of any of our British birds, and that the bird-catcher is necessarily a "brute" and his calling cruel. Further, we unhesitatingly state that since the present Wild Birds' Protection Act came into operation, bird life generally has shown an enormous increase in Great Britain, so much so that many species, including some of our favourite song-birds, have become an unmitigated nuisance and a source of grave loss to the many thousands of grain and fruit-growers and agriculturists generally.

"Many Hundred Thousand Pounds."

In support of the latter view comes a trenchant letter from Sir Walter Gilbey, published in the "Daily Telegraph" of last Monday. In this Sir Walter speaks of the "extensive damage done by birds," and of their enormous increase of recent years, and he states that the W.B.P.A. has produced results which threaten to be disastrous to fruit and grain growers. Sir Walter sums up the situation as follows:

"Taking the year through, the loss must amount to many hundred thousand pounds. It is useless to try and encourage the increase of small-holders, who under the most favourable circumstances are hard put to it to make ends meet, if so important a source of their income is to be left to the mercy of birds. Bird protection within reasonable limits is an excellent thing; but sentimental ideas cannot be allowed to override practical considerations, and those who know the extent of the injury done by birds will agree that protection has been carried too far. What is urgently needed is combined effort by all who sympathise with small-holderand cottager to procure relaxation of the Act. The law is administered by each County Council, which has power to modify its provisions as applied to the county under its control. Appeal should be made to each County Council to relax the protection now extended to those species of birds which are conspicuous for the mischief they do to fruit. With the enormous yearly increase noticeable in our bird population of recent years, there can be no risk of exterminating any species; it will be sufficiently difficult to reduce their numbers to reasonable limits. I have not in the above mentioned the damage done by birds to farmers; it is beyond all calculation, and I urge them to co-operate in obtaining assistance."

Coming from Sir Walter Gilbey, himself a large landowner and grain and fruit grower, and who in his long and honoured career has rendered great service to agriculture generally, such a message is of the highest import, and CAGE BIRDS at once sought an interview with Sir Walter, which was graciously accorded. Seen at his country seat in Essex (Elsenham Hall), Sir Walter told our representative that he was pleased to find his letter to the "Daily Telegraph" attracting widespread attention. He had already received a number of letters from all parts of the country congratulating him upon the stand he has taken, and bearing out his statements as to the mischief arising out of the great increase in bird-life of recent years, and as to the need for relaxation of bird protection. "One of the writers," smilingly remarked Sir Walter, "even calls me 'a public benefactor.'"

A Grave Question.

"That the question has become a very grave one," continued Sir Walter, "cannot be denied by anyone who has a practical acquaintance with the matter, and it must resolve into a Parliamentary fight in the interests of grain and fruit growers and small holders generally. 'Sentiment' cannot be allowed to prejudice the widespread interests of so large a section of the community. I shall be pleased to afford to anyone who has doubts upon the matter full proof as to the great hordes of birds we now find about us, and the enormous damage they do."

"How about the harmful grubs and insects these birds destroy, and the loss of their lovely song to the countryside, if they are not protected from capture and slaughter?" we queried.—"Those are pleas which sound very well, but will not stand investigation," replied Sir Walter. "If the number of certain species, such as the Thrush and the Blackbird, were reduced by one half or more, we should still have sufficient, and more than sufficient, song to satisfy everyone. As to the insects, well, I am convinced that in recent years the habits of many birds have undergone a vast change, and that a number of species in the past considered beneficial as insect-destroyers, for at least a considerable portion of the year—the fruit season—now feed very little at all upon grubs, etc., but have turned their attention to the fruit. The Thrush, for instance, has become quite as large an eater and destroyer of fruit as his neighbour the Blackbird. The Woodpigeon, too, simply plays havoc amongst the strawberries; a fact, no doubt, that many will be surprised to learn. The Rooks, too, have become very numerous, and destroy grain largely, the Starlings lending them a helping hand, so to speak; then the Sparrows, too, are a great pest. By careful calculation made this season on a field of barley not far from the Hall, I estimate that a loss of at least thirteen quarters of grain is the result of the depredations of the birds on this small area alone."

A Change for the Worse.

"That the feeding habits of many of our birds have undergone a change is proved," continued Sir Walter, "by observations recently made upon their crops. The crops of a large number of Rooks obtained from the different counties of England showed, for instance, how largely grain has come to be an article of their diet. Starlings, too, have been conclusively proved to be grain destroyers. It is not difficult to see that this change has been brought about by the enormous increase in the number of the birds; to find a sufficiency of insects, grubs, etc., to subsist upon would be a task for each individual bird, therefore they turn upon what is handy to their beaks—our fruit and grain crops. I am a great lover of the feathered creation, but I cannot shut my eyes to the grave state of things now prevalent, and which a continuance of the present system of bird protection will render still more serious. There must be, as I have said before, Parliamentary action taken on the matter."

Sir Walter stated that his own experiences of the destructiveness of the birds in recent years were paralleled on the estates of all his friends who were large landowners and agriculturists; and the many fruit growers of his acquaintance told the same story of destructive work in the orchards.

In reply to an enquiry, Sir Walter Gilbey said that he considered the recent decision of the Appeal Court (obtained at the instance of the R.S.P.C.A.), by which the bye-laws of protected districts were made to affect districts which did not desire complete protection, as highly mischievous. The whole question of bird protection called for revision, the time had come when a relaxation of the protection of many species was clearly needed; the mere sentiment of persons uninformed as to the actual position could not be allowed to weigh against the needs of the agriculturists, the fruit-growers, and the small holders.

A Word for the Bird-keeper.

Sir Walter said he could see no justification for the statement that bird-keepers and bird-catchers were responsible for despoiling the countryside of its birds; on the contrary the species most commonly favoured by bird-keepers—such as Linnets, Bullfinches, Greenfinches, Larks, Thrushes, and Blackbirds—were enormously on the increase, beyond any doubt.

On the Elsenham estate over 2,000 acres of land are farmed, and a great number of acres devoted to fruit culture, the fruit going to Sir Walter's jam factory, which is quite a model establishment of its kind under the able management of Mr. Cotterell, with whom, by Sir Walter's kind permission, we had a brief conversation.

Mr. Cotterell confirmed to the full the remarks of Sir Walter. Our representative was shown a large quantity of fruit gathered the day previous to his visit, and the extensive manner in which it had been damaged by birds had to be seen to be believed. "And this, comparatively speaking, is nothing," remarked Mr. Cotterell;" had your visit been some three weeks earlier, I could indeed have surprised you. The birds will let nothing alone; strawberries, raspberries, gooseberries, plums, apples, pears, all come the same to them. Some speak of netting the fruit, but on large estates it is impossible to do this adequately, and even then the birds manage to find their way through. Cherries and greengages it is hardly possible to grow at all. The birds have increased remarkably in numbers, and almost every kind seem to have acquired a taste for fruit. We employ boys to "scare" them, but even this helps but little, so bold do they become, while catching seems to have no effect upon their numbers. I have known one labourer snare 36 Thrushes and Blackbirds, mostly young birds, before breakfast in one small patch of raspberry canes, yet after breakfast there were twice as many to be found in that same patch! It is a problem, I can tell you. It is impossible to leave fruit until it properly ripens; we should find none left to gather. I have seen a flock of over 100 Woodpigeons flushed from one strawberry field; the damage they do can well be imagined. Fruit growers have other adverse causes to face, of course, but the birds have become one of their chief problems, and they must be dealt with.

To Make Grit Tablets.

Sent by Mr. W. H. Appleton, 12, Anthony Street, West Gorton, Manchester.

Enclosed is a simple method of making grit tablets—one I have used with good results. The birds pick and enjoy it, and will pass their time picking it instead of plucking their feathers and nibbling the cage hack. Get a Bovril box with divisions in, or a toffee box, and divide it into small squares, as shown in sketch. Then get some mortar, sand, and lime from any builder's yard, or where building is going on; mix it well together, and place it in the divisions. Now put a match stick in the centre so as to make a hole through it. Then place it in the oven, box as well, to bake and go hard. When it has baked leave it to cool. Take out the match sticks; put a piece of string or wire through, and hang one of the tablets on the cage front. It will help the birds to shell their eggs, and will improve their health.—W. H. APPLETON.

LISKEARD.

Annual exhibition of cage birds, etc., in connection with the Liskeard, Devon and Cornwall was held on Sept. 28th. The president for the year, C. J. Elnor, Esq., is one who takes a keen interest in the welfare of the Association. He is supported by an influential and energetic committee of fanciers, viz., Messrs. W. D. Hambly, W. Tos, E. Skinner, A. Wills, E. Hicks, H. Laver, W. Hoar, A. Smith, W. Smith, F. Dilger, E. H. Scantlebury, F. Richards, R. Braddon, A. Quiller, H. Biddick, J. S. Elliott, J. Martin, P. C. Martin, R. Broad, W. Seaworth, W. Kingdon, and E. J. Lowe. The hon. secretary of the cage bird, etc., section was Mr. H. Jones Robins, to whom much praise is due for the efficient and painstaking manner in which he discharged the duties connected with his office, his genial disposition and courtesy winning for him not only the respect of the Association, but of fanciers generally. The birds were well staged, as usual, in the spacious and well-lighted Public Hall, which forms an admirable place for their display. In the cage bird section there were 12 classes, and many of them contained some very excellent specimens of their kind. The classes for Crest-breds, Mules and Goldfinches, also the A.O.V. class, were, unfortunately, cancelled for lack of entries. Several very good Yorkshires were staged. The Norwich classes were the feature of the show, and some typical birds were among them. The entries totalled slightly under 100; Mr. G. H. Billett made the awards, which in most cases were favourably received.

Questions on Bird-washing.

Meeting held Sept. 20, On ward Hall. Mr. Cook (Manchester) gave a washing exhibition. Our members have been looking forward to this, and congratulated themselves on being able to see such an experienced exhibitor demonstrate. He washed two birds, explaining as he went along. The way in which he handled the birds proved he was an expert. Some useful information and practical hints were gained. These are a few of the many questions that were asked:

Do you believe in feather beautifiers?—In using them you should be in a very warm room, or the preparations seem to clag. I prefer Pear's, or white Windsor soap; Sunlight soap is also good.

Do you have the two rinsing waters a little colder than the first water?—I prefer them about the same temperature.

Do you prefer wrapping the birds in cloths before putting them in drying cage?—I have used cloths; also put them in cage right away without. I dry the birds very much with pieces of silk or very thin clothes, wrap them up, and put them near the fire; then I proceed to wash the next bird, and when I have finished that I take the first bird out of the cloth and place it in drying cage before the fire.

How many days do you wash the birds before the show day?—I wash all birds on the Tuesday before a Saturday's show.

What kind of a drying cage do you use?—I use one show cage for each bird till dry; then I transfer them into breeding cage.

Don't you consider a drying cage better than putting the birds before a fire; has not this a tendency to curl the feathers?—I don't care for drying cages; of course, I acknowledge that if you dry the birds too quickly it will curl the feathers.

Do you leave birds in kitchen over night after washing?—No; I take them back into breeding room same night. Next morning I spray them with cold water.

Do you believe in giving a stimulant such as whisky in drinking water?—No: my birds are teetotalers. I have always found that when you put anything into the drinking water you have a job to get them to drink it well; this has been my experience. But if you are able to get them to drink it may do them good.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Cook closed the meeting.—J. SPENCER, Hon. Sec

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following Conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side only of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Post cards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the pruper matiug, etc. of Norwieb, Yorksbires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day an the variety concerned

Beating Time.

W. Byone.—You will not do any more good with this bird. Your feeding is faulty, and keeping the bird in a very warm room, unless you are sure the heat is regular and not fluctuating between hot and cold, will not mend matters. Keep in a comfortable place, not overheated, free from variation and draughts, and nicely ventilated. Feed on a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple. Three times a week for a month ive half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with three drops of a mixture of equal parts cod liver oil emulsion and syrup of iodide of iron mixed in it, and on each of the alternate days a pinch of maw seed. Give a little green food four times a week. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and six drops of syrup of rhubarb daily for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another fortnight. Nutsbell booklet has been sent you. You would do well to get House's "Canary Manual," 1s. 2d., or "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., both post free, from our Manager, for advice on general management.

Stuck in Moult, etc.

W.C.M.—(1) Give bird a vapour bath as described in Part VI. of "Our Canaries," ready immediately, morning and evening, for two days, and move her to a quite warm position, but see that the warmth is regular and equable, and that she is fully protected from draughts. Add 20 drops of whisky, and five each of sweet spirits of nitre and syrup of saffron to the drinking water, two days in every three for a week. If at all constipated, give a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for two days before giving the above mixture. Place a light cover of thin linen over the cage for a time until the moult has been completed. (2) Briefly, a staple diet of plain canary seed, a small teaspoonful of a mixture of one part each hemp, niger, millet, and teazle, and a half-part each maw, gold of pleasure, linseed, and sesame, twice a week. A little green food or ripe fruit four times a week. To tone up the system at end of moult, dissolve as much ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine as will cover a sixpence in an ounce of sherry, and give 15 drops in the drinking water four times a week for a fortnight. The fullest particulars on this matter will be found in Part V. of "Our Canaries." It is impossible to go into the same detail in these replies.

Reported Progress, etc.

Grateful.—Many thanks for sending result of treatment, which I am glad to know proved so successful. Continue same generally until the symptoms have all disappeared. It is quite probable the claw lost will be reproduced as soon as the bird gets into a healthy sound condition. The foot is clearly not fully restored yet. Paint toe three times a week with tincture of benzoin. It is not necessary to keep the birds in the dark now they are moulting. A cover of very thin linen over three-fourths of the cage front is all that is necessary. As you want your birds to have a lly around the room daily, even this is not essential. If you kept the blind down before the window it would be quite sufficient. Again, as you are not, I presume, colour feeding with the object of showing the birds, no darkening at all need be done. Perhaps you do not make the colour food palpable enough. Do not give it too strong at first, and add a dash of maw seed and an eighth part of the bulk of pepper in soft sugar, and well blend the whole. If looseness gets too bad, stop green food for a few days and dissolve a small crystal of sulphate of iron in the water. No other special treatment required whilst moulting. To teach them to sing they should be caged separately and kept in earshot of a good free singing adult cock—or two is better—or a bird organ frequently playing daily until they have acquired their full song. The "pitch," if by this you mean the key in which they sing, is a matter of taste. In a general way the "lower" or "deeper" the notes the better. What you wish to avoid is a shrieking, ear-splitting song, which is more of a pain than pleasure to be compelled to listen to for hours together. You will doubtless see plenty of Belgians and Scotch Fancies offered in our advertisement columns between now and next March.

Brevities.

Red Mites (Orrell).—Read replies to "Cingalee Again" and "D. Honey" in last issue, which contain fuller details than space permits of giving again just yet. You are mistaken in thinking your all-metal cage is necessarily proof against harbouring mites. If feasible, boil it, and treat the position where it hangs thoroughly. Add a few drops of essence of quassia to its bath twice a week. If it will not bathe in it, spray it with the fluid, and give it a bath of clean water shortly afterwards. Smear the bare places with vaseline.

Canaries in Outdoor Aviary (A. Pinnion).—If the birds were bred and reared under normal conditions of temperature they will thrive well without any heat at all through the winter in your aviary. It will be very useful to supply small boxes loosely filled with soft, short hay for them to sleep in if they feel inclined. During very severe weather give a little hemp and maw regularly, or a little crushed oats to pick amongst. Only give the bath during mild and dry weather—that is, withhold it during damp, wet, and foggy weather.

Swollen Oil Gland (Well-wisher).—Stop soaked rape, and give instead a staple dict of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Give a little egg food every second day if you are not colour-feeding, and add two drops of cod liver oil emulsion to it each time for a fortnight. Give a fair supply of green food daily, and add a pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon juice to the water for two days. After that give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. Paint the swollen gland with tincture of iodine twice in one week. If it forms a "head," not otherwise, prick it with a clean needle, press out contents, wash clean in a little warm water, and anoint with zinc ointment daily until healed.

Protrusion of Vent (H.J.Y.).—It may be some internal derangement, as you suspect, or it may be simply due to an overfed condition, causing the bird's organs to be blocked with masses of fat. In the former case you had better not interfere, and if the latter surmise is, in your opinion, correct, limit the diet to a small teaspoonful of seed daily, mostly plain canary, and varied only with a small amount of rape. Give a free supply of green food daily, and occasionally a ripe grape broken open. If this does not suffice to keep the bowels quite free add a pinch of Epsom salts to the drinking water as often as is necessary to effect this purpose.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "Housc's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Effect of Shock (E. Carlin).—There is no accounting for the result of such a shock. Some birds will not sing for years afterwards, and I have known some that never sang at all. You can only endeavour to keep the cat, or any cat, quite out of the bird's sight for a time until it has had time to recover from the shock. Add six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid to its water three times a week for a month, and twice a week give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, thistle, maw, and gold of pleasure. Give a little chickweed daily.

Damp in Greenhouses (W. Gamble).—If you can successfully root, or "strike," the geraniums you speak of, I should not say the place was too damp for the well-being of the Canaries, but what will doubtless greatly affect them is the extremes of temperature and constant fluctuations that are to be expected in such a situation. If you kept the birds there and heated it, a temperature of between 45 and 50 degrees would be high enough all through the winter. Taken altogether a greenhouse is anything but an ideal place for birds.

Tail-Wagging and Pick-me-up (H.R.).—(1) See that the bird is quite free from cold draughts, and is not near burning lights in the evening. Treat as advised to "W. Byone" in this issue. Give a good spray of tender chickweed daily, and a mealworm, if she will eat the latter. (2) For tonic to brace up system at end of moult see latter part of reply to "W.C.M." (3) See Mr. Weston's column for reply to Linnet query. Also please remember in future that queries for different sections should be on separate sheets of paper, as the queries bavo to be distrihuted to different authorities for replies.

A Slow Moulter (no Nom-de-plume). — You should have said how you feed and treat bird. Keep it in a comfortably warm place, not too much so—quite free from draughts and variations, and see it is not troubled with red mites. Feed on a staple mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. On two other days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, linseed, teazle, and maw, and on each of the remaining days a little green food. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand. In drinking water for one day give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and after that 20 drops of whisky, 6 each of glycerine, and tincture of gentian, and half a chlorate of potash lozenge, every second day for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary. Don't expect bird to resume singing until the moult is quite finished. You should get the Nutshell Booklet on "The Canary," post free 2½d., from our Manager, for hints on general treatment.

Lancashires with Diarrhœa (Silk).—Keep cages and perches as clean as possible, the former liberally strewn with sawdust, which should be frequently removed and burnt until diarrhœa is cured. In addition to the staple of canary give both birds a half teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp and teazle and a little dry crushed plain biscuit. Give no green food until better, but a little ripe banana three or four times a week will be beneficial. Add 6 drops syrup of buckthorn to water of the cock bird for one day, and afterwards add 20 drops of whisky, 6 of tincture of gentian, and 2 of laudanum, to water for two or three days as may be necessary. As soon as the diarrhœa is stopped, add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea, a crystal of sulphate of iron half as big, and 6 drops of dilute sulphuric acid to water for a few days longer. Give the hen 5 drops syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts for two days as will cover a sixpence, then the whisky, etc., as above, until looseness is stopped, and finally 20 drops of whisky, 6 each glycerine, and oxymel of squills, and 2 of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a week.

Blood for Hardiness and Song (Novice).—Green blood is the correct thing for giving tone and depth to colour, but I fear it is by no means essential to either hardiness or singing capabilities. These are questions of strain and careful training, with the rigid weeding out of all which fail to come up to the standard. As your object is to breed birds for the market you will do well to avoid too much green blood, as the clear birds will almost, if not quite, invariably prove the first favourites with buyers. You omit to say whether you want two or four hens. If two, get two lightly ticked buffs, and if the cocks have clear underflue the hens may with advantage "blow light." If four, get two similar to above, but with the least possible amount of dark flue, one clear buff, if with a slight amount of dark flue it will be no disadvantage, and a lightly variegated bird with dark wing marks. This will give you a fair proportion of clear young, but you will still have a goodly number of ticks and more or less variegated. If your old birds have bred more than one season it would be best to mate them with young birds next season instead of mating them together again.

Red Mite Again (J. Andrews).—See replies to "D. Honey" and "Cingalce Again" in last week's issue. There is nothing to add to what is said there, but in your case you can materially reduce the plague by dropping covers of the cages each morning into boiling water immediately they are removed. Let them remain soaking until cool, then wring out and dry. Do not put any "smelly" stuff about covers which would deter the mites going on them, and by the means named you will be able to trap and destroy myriads. Allow birds to bathe freely and add a few drops essence of quassia to the bath three times a week.

No Better (Puff o' Wind).—You should have given a reference to my former reply, or enclosed it. As it is, I am in the dark as to what treatment you have been giving. The hen is evidently a chronic asthmatic subject, and probably incurable. See she is not troubled with red mites, and that all the ordinary causes are removed. Do not hang her cage high up, nor near a burning light. Get a chemist to dispense you a mixture composed of two parts each glycerine and oxymel of squills, and one part each of chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, and add ten grains of iodide of potassium to each ounce of mixture. Give 12 drops of this in the drinking water every second day for a fortnight, miss a week, and repeat for another fortnight. Shall be glad to hear result, with reference to this and previous reply.

Deformed Feet (J. H. Bennett).—The birds seem to be suffering from congenital defects, and are probably examples of the physically unfit, so that it would he really best to chloroform them. No. 1 may possibly be improved by putting on rings made by cutting an eighth of an inch off the end of a feeding bottle tube, as you must have seen frequently advised here. Leave them on a month, and give bird rather wide flat perches meantime. When the rings are taken off, change the perches for thin ones about the size of an ordinary lead pencil. If this does not correct the deformity nothing else will. No. 2 is quite irremediable, and is far best left severely alone, unless the leg was amputated altogether, which I do not advise you to attempt yourself. Were the parents of these birds closely related, or weakly?

Making Cages (Knowledge Seeker). — The size you name will do nicely for single breeding cages, especially if your fancy is one of the smaller breeds. Another inch in length would he a great improvement. I prefer them to be not less than 20ins. long, and, if a large breed is kept, 24ins. is still better, though I do not object to an inch less in distance from back to front. You could keep two birds in one of the cages during the winter with strict attention to cleanliness. For serviccable flights for winter use make double breeding cages 40ins. long, 16½ins. high, and 10ins. or 11ins. deep, with a movable partition in the middle, which you could take out in the winter, and run three or four birds in each cage, wherein they would have the full space just named for exercise. "Aviaries, Birdrooms, and Cages," 2/3, post free, from our manager, would prove very helpful to you in making your own cages.

A Mating Question (Grass Green).—As your chief object in seeking suitable mates is to acquire extra length which is needed, you must not let colour weigh too much with you. Of course, if you can encompass both objects at once, so much the better, but always keep a sharp eye upon the one main object. Get the longest and most slim hens you can, with good length of side, long pipe tails, and that stand well up on legs, showing plenty of thigh. If over 7ins. in length over all so much the better. To obtain your first point concerning colour the hen should be a buff green, bred off two clear dark-eyed parents, will be most likely to give you the highest proportion of "yellow or bulls," if by this term you mean clears, as I think you do. You must not expect a majority of clears in any case.

Ventilating Birdroom (No Nom-de-plume).—Yours is a case where only one having full knowledge of condition and the strain of birds can give useful advice. Unless the birds are thoroughly hardy and acclimatised, so that they would if required thrive in an out-door aviary in the open air, I would not advise you to open the window regularly, nor to leave it open at night. A ventilator near roof would be infinitely better than any other makeshift. The method you suggest would prove useful, and you might give the room an airing every nice mild day in this way, but on cold inclement days you should hang a cover before the cages when you open the sash—more or less, according to climatic conditions, or else arrange a screen before the open part of the sash in such a way that the incoming air is directed upwards and away from the cages. Another method would be to remove a glass from the top row of window panes and replace with a piece of fine wire gauze, over which a solid cover of wood or zinc may be fitted to remove and replace at will. If hinged on at the bottom edge, it may be opend to any required extent with the requisite angle for directing the air upwards.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Birds for Greenhouse Aviary.

Robinson.—As you have no experience of bird-keeping, I should advise the following pairs: Green Budgerigars, yellow Budgerigars, Madagascar Love-birds, blue-wing Lovebirds, and Cockatiels. These will all agree together and thrive on the same diet and treatment. You must well furnish the back of the aviary with branches of varying thickness, that is with twigs from say ¼ to ½ or ¾ inch main stem. hang up about 8 husks (large and small) and some of the pairs will breed. Have several seed hoppers about, this prevents bickerings. The main diet will be canary and white millet seed in equal parts, also millet sprays; and supply in a separate hopper the following mixture: Hemp, paddy rice, oats and sunflower seeds in equal parts. Greenfood (such as seeding grass, or lettuce), and a few pieces of any make of plain biscuit may be thrown in. The aviary floor must be covered with gritty sand and several pieces of cuttlebone must be kept hanging in the cage. Water for drinking and bathing must also be supplied. A little of any ripe fruit they eat (ripe apple is popular) is very wholesome. You should get from our Manager "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1d., and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 7d., both post free.

An Ailing Amazon.

R.C.—I should mix some of the dry seed mixture with the boiled maize, or, rather, put them side by side in the same food vessel. The bird will ultimately take to the seed. In the meantime, keep up the supply of boiled maize, and as this soon turns sour, it must be prepared fresh daily. Give four drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak, from a quill, and repeat the dose in a week's time. Put 10 to 12 drops of Parrish's chemical food over the daily supply of boiled maize. I am not clear about your reference to meat, unless by this you refer in a general way to the boiled maize, but note—tea, coffee, or milk slops must not be given, and table scraps and animal food are also strictly barred. I should most certainly keep it as far as possible from the healthy grey. You can take it as a general rule that a new purchase should never be brought into close proximity of healthy stock till you are quite sure the former are thoroughly fit. The Amazon ought to have ripe fruit, also a few nuts, and pieces of plain biscuit. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in the cage. If any unfavourable symptom develops, repeat query with fullest details at once.

An Ailing Red Cardinal.

V. A. G.—There is no bird that can be considered immune. These generally arise from lack of exercise, and, in consequence, overfatuess. Your diet is about right, but you might add a little of any ripe fruit he will eat. Dissolve two grains of bromide of potassium in a little syrup, and stir this into the daily supply of drinking water on alternate days. Also give an aperient—Dinneford's magnesia, diluted with double its bulk of water, as necessary to keep the bowels moving freely, hut the voidings should not be watery-loose. Supply canary and millet seed, cuttlebone, ripe fruit, soft food, green food, and mealworms, spiders, beetles, etc. Three doses of bromide should be sufficient, but for a time if you notice the hird at any time labouring under great excitement, a dose of tbe bromide should give relief. Should be glad to hear how the bird progresses.

Birds for Inside Aviary.

R. R.—There is a great risk attendant upon keeping Budgerigars and Finches, etc., together, but the risk must be your own; providing you do not permit the Budgerigars and Lovebirds to become too numerous, you may not suffer material loss. Grey Javas are shy breeders in captivity, though I bred them freely years ago; the White Javas breed quite freely, and are a handsome addition to any aviary. Blue-winged Lovebirds are very smart birds, but I am rather doubtful as to their ultimate behaviour among your Finches, etc. The males are bright green birds, with bright blue flights and wings. Get pairs of the following Finches: Ribbon, Spice, Striated, Diamond, Ruficauda, and Zebra, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Long-tailed Grassfinches, Silverbills, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Common and Green Avadavats, Bengalese. Waxbills: Orange-cheek, Grey, St. Helena, and Sydney. The above will supply you with a very beautiful assortment, and if your aviary is suitably furnished and fitted with nests, etc., they should thrive and do well together.

What Thrush?

Arcady.—It is a Spectacled Thrush, also known as the Chinese Jay Thrush, and Chinese Laughing Thrush, and should be fed on any good soft food mixture (several are advertised in our pages), ripe fruit, and a liberal supply of live food, mealworms, beetles, cockroaches, caterpillars, slugs, spiders, snails, grasshoppers, and the like; any kind of live insect will be the most appreciated dainty, but with this species I should not hesitate to give table scraps, cooked meat, milk pudding, and the like. There is so much individualism in birds, even of the same species, that I always make it a rule to let the bird itself define "special dainty" by the eagerness with which it comes for the particular item of its diet it most fancies; you will soon ascertain this, but I conjecture it will be an insect of some kind that will bring it to the front wire in a flutter of intense excitement and expectation. I am interested in hearing of the Black-headed Siskin and Canary Hybrids; the Editor would be glad to get a descriptive account of the rearing of these birds.

Foreign Songsters.

J. Kay. — Among the cheap, freely imported Foreigners of more than average merit are the following (that is, those ranging from 2/6 to 12/6 per pair): Practically all the Serins. I may mention specially the Grey and Green Singing Finches, charming little birds, and very sweet songsters, the Alario Finch is another good songster, Avadavats and Gold-breasted Waxbills have a soft and very pleasing little song, though not very varied. Cardinals are very often very indifferent performers in a cage, and only condescend to utter a song worthy of the name during the breeding season in an aviary; of course, there is no rule without an exception, and the Cardinal's notes are fairly powerful and musical and uttered frequently and with great rapidity. The Pekin Robin is another cheap songster, but this needs soft food, fruit and live insects, though it takes a little seed. Very pleasing little songsters are the genus spermophila, though costing a little more than the figures given above, among which we may name the White-throated, Bluish, Reddish, Fire-red, Lavender-backed, Lined and Guttural Finches. The St. Helena Seed-eater and Cape Canary also come within the scope of your query. All the above, except the Pekin Robin, are seed eaters.

Troupials and Hangnests.

"Zobra.—(1) Your bird is either the Jamaica or Brazilian Hangnest. Troupials and Hangnests are first cousins and the terms are very loosely used (2) These birds take little or none of the soft food mixture, but I always supply a little, with a few scalded grocer's currants stirred in, also ripe fruit and, lib., and some live insects, mealworms, etc., half a dozen morning and evening will be none too many. The main diet of these birds is ripe fruit (orange, banana, split grapes, etc.), and live insects. The mixture it had been fed on is quite wholesome, as also is the mixture you are now giving. Do not give tea, but you can supply milk, and, of course, water for drinking and bathing. Not easy to establish, but once this is accomplished, they are robust enough, and should then live for years, but they must have plenty of live food, and a few scraps of finely minced meat (cooked for preference), stirred in with its mixture two or three times a week is advisable. Bathe its foot in warm water, dry, and then anoint with whisky. Put a little Dinneford's in its drinking water every third day for a couple of weeks, and add to the mixture 12 to 20 drops of Parrish's Chemical Food daily.

Brevities.

Crossing Budgerigars (D. Dalbie).—Yes, and breed freely; nearly all their progeny will be pure greens, and all are fertile.

Budgerigars and Nest Boxes (E. A. Kemp).—Your proposal will answer the purpose, but it is better to screw the half shell in position, and then run concrete round it; I should, however, think it would be better and cheaper to write one of the regular advertisers of Budgies in our columns, to send you half-a-dozen on; the carriage would only be trifle.

What Birds? ("Enmehi").—You have accommodation for about a dozen birds, and with British Finches you could keep the following: Common and Green Avadavats, Zebra, Orange-cheek and Grey Waxbills, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Bronze Mannikins, Bengalee and Silverbills. All cheap, pretty, and easy to cater for. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" very helpful, 1s. 1d. post free from our manager.

What Bird? (Parrot Lover).—(1) It is the Swainson, or Blue Mountain Lorrikeet. (2) The principal diet should consist of milk sop and ripe fruit; but you can let them have such canary and white millet seed as they care to tackle, together with a little green food (green in flower or lettuce) and sponge cake. (3) Lorikeets are not talking species, though I have had some that have seemed to mutter words sort of sotto voce. They have been well called the monkeys of the Parrot tribe. It is an Australian species.

Budgerigars Not Breeding (E. D. G.).—These birds usually breed with greater freedom when two or more pairs are kept together; they stimulate each other; however, it is merely a matter of patience. Your pair will ultimately settle down and breed alright. I certainly advise you to leave things just as they are, and they will undoubtedly breed for you next spring, if not before. Supply them liberally with flowering (seeding) grass so long as you can get it free from frost.

Budgerigars Ailing (Amateur).—So long as they are not subjected to draught these birds require no artificial heat; undue warmth will often occasion an abnormal moult. Continue to foment the swelling as before. Give the bird two drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak from a quill, and repeat this as may be necessary to keep the bowels moving freely, but not unduly loose. Put a little chemical food in their drinking water. If the other birds appear to harass it, cage it separately. The males will reproduce their tails in due course. I should give the birds a spraying occasionally. I do not expect they will bathe, and keep a look-out for mites.

Grey Parrot Weak ("Camborne").—You give me no idea of how you have been dieting and treating this bird. Give an occasional aperient—Dinneford's magnesia diluted with double its bulk of water—as required to keep the bowels freely moving, but the voidings should not be watery-loose; at other times keep the drinking water well coloured with Parrish's chemical food. Confine the dietary to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), and plain biscuit. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Repeat query at once, with full details, if other adverse symptoms develop.

About Budgerigars (L. C. B. S.).—You would find our booklet, "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," very helpful to keep by you for reference; 7d post free from our manager. (1) For cages, say, 1 pair each green and yellows. (2) 18 x 18 x 36 inches high, with four husks. (3) Yes. (4) For indoors they can be procured at any time. (5) No, they may at first resent company, but they will soon settle down. (6) Possibly, but I don't recommend this in a cage, but Black-checked Lovebirds (very handsome) would doubtless breed in such a cage as above. Keep Lovebirds in single pairs. (7) As already noted, Budgerigars often take a long time to settle down when kept in single pairs, and I do not consider your cage high enough to give them sufficient exercise; it ought to be at least 24 inches high, even for a single pair, but they will ultimately breed. Supply grass in flower (seeding grass) liberally, as long as you can get it free from frost.

Outdoor Aviary (Amateur, Leicester).—(1) The aviary will answer its purpose admirably, but there is no need to separate Budgerigars and Cockatiels; keep them together, and utilise the other side for, say, a pair each of Black-cheeked Lovebirds and Rosella (mealy for preference), Parrakeets. (2) Four or five pairs of Budgerigars and one of Cockatiels. (3) I always leave things just as they were, merely putting up fresh husks each spring and destroying old ones. I never separate sexes. (4) Yes, but the inner part must not be dark, or they will not use it; it may be necessary to insert a square of glass into each end; the glass must be covered with netting on the inside.

Temperature for Greenhouse Aviary (F. H. Wright).—Very many of the species you name are kept out of doors all the year round in garden aviaries, but under your conditions it will be better to keep as close as possible to a minimum of 45 to 50 degs. F. The best method is a Clarke Syphon Gas Stove. Oil stoves are risky unless they get personal attention, burners washed periodically in soda water, great care paid to trimming, and the wick not allowed to become hard from too long use. Oil stoves are not safe in either greenhouse or aviary if left in charge of the maid. We used to do as you suggest; now exigencies of space make this impossible; all we can do is to indicate it by the title given to query.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Burgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Madagascar Lovebirds (Sheffield).—Give the birds some branches with the bark and leaves on, which they will strip off and use as lining for their nest, which can be either a husk or closed in box, with hole for entrance only the latter plan will be the better. Put up two boxes so far away as possible from an interference, then leave them to themselves as much as possible. This is also the only way to tame them, as they become thoroughly used to you this scaredness will disappear; this demeanour is common to the species. They are shy breeders in captivity, therefore the more inducement to encourage them.

Overgrown Beak (Miss Hawkins).—There is only one thing to do, and that is to pare the beak (mandibles) down to normal size; if you have had no experience with this, you had better let your local vet. cut it back for you, or, failing this, some experienced fancier in your vicinity. A continuous supply of cuttlebone, a lump of old mortar rubbish, and pieces of hard non-splinteriug wood to exercise its beak upon should prevent a recurrence of the trouble. If you watch the operation carefully you should be competent to pare it back yourself another time, but there ought to be no need for it if you supply the above materials.

Wintering Birds in Greenhouse (H. Butterfield).—See reply to J. S. Campbell. All the birds you name can be wintered in the greenhouse if damp and draught are excluded. There are, to my mind, only two forms of artificial heat for such places, where a hot-water service cannot be put in, viz., Clarke's Syphon Gas Stove, or a small slow combustion stove, with the latter there is, of course, the objection of dust, but with care this can be reduced to a minimum. However, with the birds you name, if you do not keep them in cages less than "Canary breeders," and fulfil the conditions given in this and the other reply referred to, the birds should do well enough without artificial heat.

Greenhouse Aviary (J. S. Campbell).—In the first place, you must put felting over one half of the glass roof (the entire length); this will keep the birds cooler in summer and warmer in winter. The place for the Budgerigars really ought to be 24 inches high to supply them with proper exercise, etc. The Budgerigars and Canaries can be wintered outside in your greenhouse bird-room, providing it is neither druughty nor damp. It will be suitable for breeding in providing you can keep the temperature fairly equable. You will have to arrange some blinds to keep the sun in our variable climate from making the temperature too fluctuating. All the birds you name should do well, if you attend to the above details of management.

Redheaded Finches, Parrakeets, etc. (A. P.).—Am glad to note you have had luck with the Redheads, and that you now have two young birds in good condition. Brown's Parrakeets could not possibly be described in a few words; they are beautiful and very uncommon. The plumage is principally scaled black and white, with areas tinted with primrose-yellow and with blue in larger wing feathers. They should breed, but have not done so freely as yet; but then they have been so uncommon. Diet: Canary and white millet, with a little of the following mixture for variety: Oats, bemp, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds in equal parts; ripe fruit, green food, and cuttlebone, with, of course, grit and water. You must address the Editor re articles.

Sugar Birds, etc. ("Volucris").—(1) Unless the aviary is very sheltered, and the night quarters very snug, the Sugar Birds ought not to remain out much longer, but it all depends on the weather—one year they may have to be brought indoors in September; another year they are safe outside in November. It was impossible for me to definitely say what species yours were; therefore, I can only say that immature birds are mainly green, and that this is also the colour of the adult ben, and that out of the breeding season the males more or less revert to this colour annually. A show cage, in my opinion, looks best enamelled black outside and pale sage-green inside; it should be about 12 x 11 x 9 inches high. (2) It looks to me very like an injury or egg binding; if the latter, it will either have got rid of the egg or be non est before you see this. If it is still the same, cage it, give an occasional aperient, and put it on a course of Parrish's chemical food.

Answered by G. E. Weston.

How Many? (Enmehi).—The aviary mentioned would not comfortably accommodate more than about 10 small Finches. It is really only a cage; several of my own cages (flights) are considerably larger, in fact.

"Kedlock" Seed (Collier Lad). — Yes, charlock seed is the same as "kedlock"; many people give it the latter name. It is not suitable for regular use with Canaries (except for such as fly about in aviaries), but a little can be given once or so a week amongst their mixed seed.

Sexing Young Blackbirds (M. Greene).—Young cock Blackbirds have the wing-flights and tail feathers perceptibly darker (blacker) than the young hens, otherwise the plumage is the same. Two or three feathers plucked from the breast will soon reveal the sex when they grow again: in the cock they will come jet black; in the hen, brown.

In an Outdoor Aviary (A. E. Gee).—Budgerigars have often been known to mutilate weaker birds kept with them, and the bleeding wings and damaged legs you are getting in your aviary are undoubtedly the work of the Budgies you have there. You must take them away at once from the Goldies, Linnets, etc. The week before last I gave in this column a list of desirable seed-eaters (Finches and Buntings) that would answer splendidly for an aviary. If it be Foreign Finches you want, our Mr. Page will name a selection for you if you address a query to him.

Wintering in an Aviary (E. Allison).—I think you made a mistake in leaving the end open that faces due north; had it been possible to so arrange matters, the south end was the one that should have been left unprotected. Still, I feel sure that the Bullie, Goldie, Canary, and the Mules will winter all right in the place. The question, so far as it concerns the Foreign birds, should have been addressed to Mr. Page, who answers queries in that department; look in his column next week for a reply.

Three Items (B. Francis).—1. For the Twite try the tonic recommended "Juggins" this week. Are you sure the bird is not "stuck in the moult?" Or drowsy because it cannot make a start casting its plumage? 2. Get a small bottle of Lysol from a chemist and stir one drop into three tablespoonfuls of drinking water, and give this the Chaffinch fresh twice daily in a glass (not tin) vessel. If the symptoms do not abate in three or four days, then I am afraid the bird has contracted lung trouble, which you may find incurable. For the latter trouble give the medicine recommended D. Davidson this week. 3. This tail may not come right until after another moult; you made a mistake in pulling it. Soak the feathers to the root in pretty hot water (not scalding, of course), for a few minutes, then dry and smooth down into position, holding the feathers into position by slipping a suitably-sized rubber band (not too thick and strong) over the tail, leaving it on for several days. If this does not result in the tail feathers keeping a proper position, then I am afraid it is a hopeless case. It is always risky pulling out tail and wing feathers immediately they have moulted; they are then very apt to come stunted or awry.

Goldfinch Greenfinch Hybrid (P. Watson).—The Goldfinch-Greenfinch is not at all a rare hybrid, being easily bred (comparatively speaking), and its value is not high, except in the case of a specimen of exceptional merit from the exhibition point of view. An average specimen would, if a cock, be worth 10s. to 15s.; a first-class show bird, two to three pounds, or thereabouts. Hens are of no particular value.

A Greenbird Mule (N. Ringwood).—An ordinary cock Greenfinch Mule, in full song, is worth 6/- to 10/- Show specimens, of course, are worth very much more. If your Mules could hear a good singing Linnet and a Canary, they would pick up a fine song themselves. They are very robust and strong-voiced, but lack the sweetness of tone possessed by a Linnet Mule.

Young Bullfinches (Avis.).—Young Bullies are "got on to hard seed" in the same manner as Goldies and Linnets—i.e., by the use of shepherd's purse, plantain, and other wild seeds, freely at first, but with a liberal allowance of cracked sunflower seed in addition, and some ripe berries (black, privet, etc), where obtainable. Feed plainly in the winter on this mixture:—Canary 2 parts, teazle 1 part, linseed, summer rape, and charlock half part each; a little sunflower frequently, with the wild seeds, and berries, too. Read "Nutshell" handbook.

Treatment of Goldfinch (Bowes).—Your feeding is good and the cage suitable. The moult generally begins in August or September, and lasts six weeks, or somewhat longer. The bird begins to sing again as it gets over the effects (strain) of the moult. Yes; song develops naturally. No doubt your bird is too shy as yet to begin to sing out. Is it a young bird (greypate) or an old bird? You would find the "Nutshell" booklet on the Goldfinch (or Mr. Norman's book on British seedeaters) very useful to you. Don't give the bird colour-food; he wouldn't eat it, in fact, if but newlytaken. Give him plenty of thistle-heads. The song of a Canary will not "spoil" the song of a Goldfinch.

Pecking at the Fingers (J. W.).—The birds' attempts to "peck your fingers," as you put it, are merely evidence of their tameness and familiarity with your person—not evidence of their annoyance with you and your treatment of them. Many of my own birds positively hang about the cage fronts waiting for me to stick up my finger near them, so they may "fight" it. I consider this a very pleasing little mannerism (except when my Parrot or my Magpie mistakes my finger for an iron rod), and the view you take of it somewhat surprises me. There is no "cure," unless you turn the birds out into a large aviary to see if they lose their exceeding tameness.

About a Nightingale (Anxious).—I have found it quite a usual thing for Nightingales to have periods of song alternate with periods of blank silence, so to speak, and with no apparent reason, such, for instance, as a lapse into ill-health. This behaviour is most marked in those months in which the 'Gales are not on song out in their native wilds. In the spring a healtby 'Gale will sing with fair regularity. I have never known a ben Nightingale to sing, nor have I ever heard of one (a proved female) doing so.

Goldies and a Chaffinch (Juggins).—Let the young Goldies have the hemp lightly cracked, and give some crushed safflower (or sunflower) seed and maw seed as well. Let the Chaffinch also have some cracked safflower (or sunflower) daily. Give both some wild seeds—the Goldies would greatly appreciate thistleheads. A week or ten days on a reliable tonic and building-up medicine would be advisable. Get an ounce of compound syrup of hypophosphites B.P. from a good chemist, and stir half a teaspoonful into three tablespoonfuls of drinking water; then divide it amongst the birds, giving it fresh at least once daily (twice would be better).

Two Items (J. A. S.).—(1) The bird sent is a Gold-crested Wren. It is a resident species, though flocks of these tiny creatures undoubtedly travel long distances during the migratory periods. (2) The properties of all seeds are explained at length in our book on "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (post free 1s. 2d.), which you would find exceedingly useful. Maw seed is held to be very beneficial by the great majority of bird-keepers. It contains a blaud oil which seems to exercise a soothing effect in cases of stomach trouble (whether, curiously enough, from either diarrhoea or constipation). It has a good feeding value, too, and is useful to give birds which are slightly "off colour"; or for use as a "tit-bit."

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. And bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

H. Tite.—Canary was in all respects a strong and healthy bird. Death arose from impaction. The proventriculus (true stomach), whose contents are generally fluid in nature, were in this case solid, hard, and dry, and the organ was distended to its utmost capacity.

G. T.—Considering the fatalities you have experienced, one would almost suspect a contagious element. There was, however, no such appearance on post-mortem. The liver had undergone fatty changes, and the lungs were affected with pneumonia as a sequel. Your dieting may be very good, but possibly you are too lavish. Try for a little time a more restricted menu, giving only watercress as a green food, whilst continuing your seed mixture in lessened proportion. A course of sulphate of soda given in drinking water two or three times weekly will also have a beneficial effect.

Victor Wynn.—Pneumonia, primary and unassociated with infection, was responsible for your loss. This is a common cause of death during delayed moult.

S. Pike.—You do not afford me any history of the case. Both lungs were affected with pneumonia, which caused its death. In addition the spleen, better known as the milt, was considerably enlarged, as is usually a complement or part of a contagious disease. Not knowing whether you have experienced prior losses, symptoms, or other details, I am not able to advise you as to routine treatment.

Wild-Bird Life.

Autumn Notes.

As the summer passes, the flocks of wild birds frequenting the hedgerows and cornfields daily become larger, until in some cases they number many hundred. In their restless activity the birds are interesting to observe. As each straggler joins the community it sinks its individuality and appears at once to acquire nerves which it did not formerly possess; the slightest movement is sufficient to cause a "stampede" in the whole flock. While watching them one wonders what can be the cause of the sudden flight of Finches which were quietly feeding in the middle of a field. This restlessness must interfere largely with the feeding, especially when the winter advances and the supply is somewhat limited.

Birds vary much in the manner in which they collect in flocks to pass the winter months. In some species the flock may be of any size from a score to a thousand birds, while flocks of Titmice seldom number more than half-a-dozen. These tiny acrobats are the first to return to our gardens from the woods and hedgerows, where many of them have reared large families, the young ones in their fluffy nest feathers looking too frail and helpless to exist among their bigger rivals. The adult bird is no weakling, and can hold his own in most birdy company, his aggressiveness frequently causing a more powerful rival to give way, and his activity and quickness saving him from a dangerous foe. A couple of Marsh Tits have lately been seen with the blue birds in the writer's garden. Perhaps among all our wild birds there is none more inappropriately named than this Titmouse. From its name we should infer that he is an inhabitant of the marshes, reed beds, and swamps, but in reality he frequents much the same localities as the other Tits—the woods, hedges, and trees of the countryside. It is perhaps more a bird of the open than its congeners, and is seldom seen in the neighbourhood of houses excepting those bordering the open country. Like other Tits, it is constantly in motion, hunting for food over every little branch and twig and bud. It has a note quite unlike that of any other Tit, and by this alone may quickly be recognised.

REVIEW OF SCHEDULES.

Correspondence.

Judges at Scottish Shows.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Brydon, what I wrote are facts, only the fact that truth is sometimes a libel deters me from more openly expressing myself. Your correspondent seems to be quite content to let things go on as they are, to the detriment of the Fancy and of "the true fanciers."

TRUTH.

Are They Too Damp?

SIR,—I have about 20 Canaries, which have been kept in a room upstairs until August of this year without heat. I have removed them into a greenhouse eleven ft. long, ten ft. high, and four ft. wide. I should like to hear from other fanciers through the columns of your paper CAGE BIRDS whether it would be too damp for them here, and if heated, what temperature would be required? There are about 100 geranium cuttings on the shelves opposite birds.

W. GAMBLE.

The Frome Cage Bird Society's Annual Show.

SIR,—Kindly allow us to draw the attention of our friends and fanciers generally to the fact that the Society now running an advertisement in your columns in the name of Frome Cage Bird Association (otherwise known as the Frome Fanciers and Frome Poultry, Pigeons, Rabbits, and Dog Association) are not in any way connected with the Frome Cage Bird Society. We are the only Cage Bird Society in the district. Our annual show will be held on November 17th, and we have the support of the English and Welsh Border Fancy Canary and other Clubs.

J. TOTTLE and W. MINTY,
Joint Secs., Frome C.B.S.

The Late Entry Nuisance.

SIR,—I have read with interest the letter re the above, and should like to say a few words on this matter. I hope the time is not far distant when we shall have a rule enforced to the effect that no entries will be received after a given date, say, seven days before the show. I know it must be very disheartening to secs. when they get entries coming in four days before a show, and have to sit up all night "for the love of the Fancy." It is enough to make one wish he had never accepted the valuable office of hon. sec. I have known many cases where entries have come too late for the exhibitor's name or number to appear in the catalogue. That causes a lot of trouble when packing the birds away from the show, and often results in many birds going astray, because the stewards cannot find the owner's name or number. Now, I do hope that if any of these letters catch the eyes of those who are subject to this complaint they will try and oblige our secs. in the future, and make things run smoother than has been the case in the past.

G. GWILLIAM.

Non-fed Canary Classes at Shows: A Suggestion.

SIR,—Now that the show season is at hand, can nothing be done in the matter of the non-fed classes at the few shows now catering for them? I have often read in the columns of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, discussions on "Is colour-feeding cruel?" Well, I don't say it is cruel, but I do say it is unnatural to colour-feed. Most fanciers declare that it is a lot of extra, dirty, and messy work, and, in fact, an all-round nuisance, and if there were enough shows providing non-fed classes fanciers would not feed a bird at all. This complaint seems to be very true, for the first schedule I received this season does not contain a single non-fed class. This, I am very sorry to see. Not long ago nearly every schedule coming from North of the Tweed used to provide about half of the Plainhead classes for non-feds, and our show used to provide nothing else but non-fed classes. Again, in the West of Scotland, and especially at the City of Glasgow Show, it seems to be an easy thing to win in the non-fed classes, as the entries are always very low. Now, why should this be, when this Society guarantees and pays out full prize money? I have known them to pay 36s. in a class of five. The non-fed classes came in for a very heated discussion at this Society's last general meeting, and had it not been for a generous-hearted party guaranteeing four classes the classification would have been reduced to two. I would like to see these classes well supported, and would suggest that all those in favour of natural colour classes meet at some appointed place on the second day of the City Show to talk matters over, and find out if a specialist club could not be formed to support any show giving a certain number of classes for non-feds. We, the lovers of natural colour, might be better provided for in the future were such a Society formed.

D. JOHNSTON.

The Dulwich O.S. 1909 Prize Money.

SIR,—I note that another of your correspondents has written you with respect to the above. I was also a sufferer, but only in a small way, winning one 3rd prize and one special. Needless to say these have not yet come to hand. One would naturally have a certain amount of sympathy with a society which finds itself in difficulties, and hitherto I have refrained from troubling them. There are, however, certain features in connection with this society which should be noted. I much admired the high-class manner in which the schedule and catalogue were produced, and was also much struck with the extract which was printed at the head of the first page as follows:—"'Tis not in mortals to command success; we'll do more—deserve it." The list of show officials was indeed most imposing, and, as printed, one "should have no doubt as to the welfare of the exhibits." I wonder if the gentlemen whose names are given consider themselves responsible in any way for getting the society out of its difficulties? Who would think on examining these names that such a result was possible? Perhaps the supper so extensively advertised at 3s. 6d. per head was too cheap at the price, and caused additional expenditure to the committee. Did the presentation of the special prizes take place on that occasion? The subscriptions to the show fund were most generous; at least, so they appeared on paper, amounting to £10 9s. 6d. But, of course, I do not know the actual amount received. The list of special prizes was most attractive—"all guaranteed in addition to prize money." By the way, I wonder who were the guarantors, and where they are now? I certainly thought the committee very generous in stating (vide rule 20), "Prize money will be paid in full, and no classes amalgamated," though I noted their cautious addition "but where classes are insufficiently filled, the committee claim the right to cancel." I should have thought the last clause would have ensured success in itself. Perhaps they were anticipating the same success as last year, as on the last page of schedule exhibitors are told to "Remember we paid out in full in the open classes last year"; and the testimonials printed certainly bear out this statement. In looking through the catalogue I find that the show was splendidly supported in the Yorkshire classes, and if we in Yorkshire could always have such classes we should have no doubt about the result. A hundred and fifteen entries in seven classes speak for themselves. I feel sorry that the exhibitors who were successful (!) in taking the honours in such keen competition were unable to reap their reward, particularly after paying full entrance fees, and the heavy railway charges to and from London. Perhaps all the money had been paid out in the classes which had only one or two entries, which classes one would have thought would almost have come under the clause "insufficiently filled." Was full prize money paid out in these latter classes? If so, one can understand the poor Yorkshireman being left in the lurch. Was any money paid out? If not, where is it? If it was paid out, why was it not paid out "pro rata," so that all would have shared in the losses? Surely the exhibitors have a right to know these points; and one would think that the officials would be only too pleased to give this information by publishing a balance-sheet, if only to justify themselves. Are (or were) the Dulwich O.S. members of the London Federation of C.B.S.? If so, have the Federation taken any action? They are (or were) members of the Cage Bird Union, and I should have thought the latter body would have held an enquiry, if only for the protection of their own members. I do not write this letter with any personal object, but several friends have spoken to me, and we are of the opinion that full details should be given and the matter thoroughly cleared up, so as to restore the confidence of the exhibitors,

HORACE H. TOWERS.

SIR,—I am in the same position as Mr. Kaye. I won a 2nd at the last show of the Dulwich O.S., but have not received the money yet; but, still, I live in hopes of doing so. After writing letters and postcards to both the show managers and the secretary, the only reply I ever got was a postcard early in this year, saying that "owing to financial difficulties we crave your indulgence for a while." I think it nearly time something was done in the matter. The show was held under Cage Bird Union rules, and the Union has a lot of rules on this subject; but what use are the rules if the Union is powerless to enforce them? The show was also under the patronage of the Yorkshire Canary Club, the Southern Y.C.C., the Border Fancy C.C., and the English and Welsh Border Fancy C.C. One would have thought that in the interests of their members the clubs might have done something between them. This was my first show away from home, and it would have been the last if I were treated like this many times. But at the next outing (Plymouth) I got the prize money before the show was over; so that gave me a little encouragement. I was warned not to send any entries, as they paid out late in the year before, so I have only myself to blame for sending them. But would not anyone have thought, seeing so many well-known fanciers' names in the schedules as officials, that they would have seen things through alright? J. SMITH.

[We must draw our correspondents' attention to the fact that every individual member of a defaulting society is responsible for whatever deficit in the prize money there may be. If an action is commenced against anyone who was at the time of the show being held a member of such defaulting society, a claim can be sustained against them personally. It is not at all necessary for such a show to have its "guarantors" provided there are one or two responsible men connected with it who are worth suing.—EDITOR "C.B."]

White Canaries,

And Their Breeder, Mr. W. Kiesel.

A sensation was created at the 1909 Crystal Palace Show through the exhibition of a white Canary by Mr. W. Kiesel, of Pentonville Road, London, the bird attracting consideration attention. Mr. Kiesel informs us that he has to date bred 10 white Canaries in all. This is his fourth season as a breeder, and he now has upwards of 20 birds, all pink-eyed, of Yorkshire type. The father of the Palace bird has bred four white Canaries, but, unfortunately, only one has survived, and this is seen in the above photograph, accompanied by one of its brothers, which unfortunately died last Monday from some unknown cause. The Palace bird (which, by the way, is now looking better than ever) has fathered six youngsters, but only one has survived, and this has a slight mark on one wing—a greyish surface mark, such as fanciers term "grizzled" feathers. Mr. Kiesel states that the young white Canaries can be distinguished in the nest even when only a day old.

He hopes to exhibit his white Canaries (of which he has now three left) at the November show of the London and Provincial Ornithological Society, and probably at one or two other fixtures during the coming season.

A Wild-caught Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrid.

SIR,—I am glad to inform you of my success last Saturday in catching a Hybrid between a Greenfinch and Goldfinch. It was the first bird caught. This is the description. First of all it shows a lot of the Greenfinch, but has not quite so large a beak, and is not so bold in build. It just shows the blaze of a Goldfinch and the yellow in the wings. Some of the flights of the bird are dark and fawn-coloured, and the breast is tanned like a Goldie's, showing little tinges of yellow here and there. He looks a champion little bird, and is evidently a young bird.

Cure Wanted for Bald Bullfinch Hen.

SIR,—I have had the same trouble many times. I have tried everything for it, and at last I put the birds in my aviary outdoors; and they have got alright. I have not changed their food, and I think outdoors is best for moulting British birds. I have got a Bullie hen now, which is alright again.

W. BROADBENT.

SIR,—In answer to "Another Constant Reader," I beg to inform him that I had a Bullfinch troubled with the same complaint. But I effected a speedy cure by the aid of "Hunt's Cage Bird Healing and Cleaning Salve." This ointment was obtained from Hunt's Stores, Market Place, South Shields. The remedy is well known to the local Fancy.

W. THOMPSON.

The Cage Bird Union and the London Federation.

SIR,—Mr. R. L. Crisp, in reply to my humble letter of September 17th, seems to show his supreme cleverness to his own satisfaction; but I think it only fair to have the opinions of others. We have a lot of one-man societies, and Mr. Crisp, by his letters, seems to be the Federation of London. If this be so, is Mr. Crisp responsible for statements made in public by his Federation co-workers? I can show the Fancy that what has been said by Mr. Crisp (in September 10th issue of CAGE BIRDS), viz., that the Federation desired to work side by side with the C.B.U.," does not agree with statements made by others of the Federation. It would be much simpler to the readers of CAGE BIRDS, myself included, if Mr. Crisp would put in plain facts and not show his cleverness by using hard words. Why has Wimbledon been left out this last week? Is it because the trouble started there, for it can be finished there? I have nothing to do with other societies, and only mention L. and P.O.S. and L.C.B.A. in answer to Mr. Crisp. If Mr. Crisp will keep to the point, I can easily prove that his coworkers have worked hard against the C.B.U. Lastly, may I ask that what was said over the table, "not officially," at Leicester, be published without any additions, as I think you will then find that a big stir has been made over nothing.

G. J. WARLEY,
Delegate for Wimbledon.

[We are sorry, but we do not understand Mr. Warley's last sentence. Any unofficial remarks made by delegates our reporter made no note of.—EDITOR "C.B."]

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*Harmless Swallows.

I visited a neighbouring farm about a month ago and noticed that under the barns there were Swallows' nests. A number of the nests were easy to reach, so I asked the farmer why he left them all in the barns. He said that the Swallows did no harm and that you would have bad luck if you pulled their nests down. —Sent by John Grimshaw (age 14), 23, Westgate Hale, Cheshire.

Maggie and Kittie.

We once had a Magpie which was very tame, and when we called it, it would come to us, even if we were the other side of the yard. If mother was sewing in the yard, it would fly on to her shoulder and pick out her hairpins and drop them on the ground. The Magpie would run after our beautiful kitten and peck at her tail.—Nellie Mitchell, East Street, Long Buckley, near Rugby.

*Five Little Tits.

A little while ago, two Tomtits laid five eggs in a hole in a post by a stream. After a few days five little birds appeared, and then the mother bird used to sit in a willow tree overhead and sing. Every morning we used to feed them with crumbs, and they always appeared to be very hungry. But, oh! how we used to love to feed them! Sent by Florence Tanner, 3, Castle View, Datchet Road, Slough.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet F.A. usual quality singing at King's Head, Shannon Street, Sept. 24th. I, Sissons; 2, 3 Butler. Also Sept. 25th, when 25 birds sang: 1, Bland; 2, Stead; 3, Bland; 4, Farrow. Judges, Messrs. J. Naylor, J. Thompson, Wilson, Naylor.—WM. SISSONS, Hon. Sec.

DEPTFORD.

At Brewery Tap, Trundley Road. During the week there was a good show of Linnets. The "New Bird House" is open to make a home and home race (Linnets) for £1 or upwards. First free handicap takes place Oct. 2nd, when a great contest is expected. Chaffinch and Linnet handicaps for special, Oct. 9th (See CAGE BIRDS for particulars.)

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

The winter shows in connection with which the members' specials are competed for, promise to be most interesting. Three shows for young birds have already taken place, at which a good entry has resulted, and the utmost enthusiasm has prevailed. A magnificent array of prizes has been allotted to each section, including a silver cup, value £3, marble clock, value £2 2s., two prizes value 24s., a barometer value £1 1s., a miniature rose-bowl value £1 1s., and two prizes value 13s. 6d. This list is far in advance of anything hitherto approached by the society. The society's membership is greater now than at any period of its history. In order to keep the interest alive in the doings of the society, the management have arranged a splendid syllabus of lectures, competitions, and social evenings, for the coming winter, and this will commence on Tuesday, October 4th, with a visit from Mr. R. Halliday, one of the society's strongest supporters, who is down "impromptu" in order to give the members an opportunity of firing questions at him, on any phase of Canary breeding and management that may perplex the members in their hobby

Club Reports.

SIX BELLS AND DISTRICT F.S.

Meeting held Cwm Hotel, Abertillery, Sept. 21st, Mr. Bedford presiding. Decided to hold annual show on Dec. 7th. E. CHURCHILL, Hon. Sec.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

At the last meeting the young members' stock show (Oct. 20) schedule was confirmed, and several other classes added. The secretary was instructed to order show printing, etc. Several new members were elected. Messrs. J. Porter (West Ham), A. H. Huggins (Stratford), J. Mouncer (Forest Gate). The members are requested to be present at next meeting, Oct. 13, when schedules, show bills, etc., will be ready.—W. MAXEY, Hon. Sec.

GRIMSBY AND DISTRICT O.S.

Meeting held Sept. 15, Mr. W. Clews presiding. Annual show to be held Oct. 26th and 27th next. Members are requested to send in their list of special prizes within a fortnight to the secretaries, in order that same may be included in schedule. Decided, to give four Norwich as presents to holders of winning tickets at show. A vote of sympathy was passed to Mrs. Stubbs in her misfortune, and we hope Mr Stubbs may have a speedy recovery.—MOORE and HARDING, Secs.

Y.C.C. OF IRELAND.

Committee meeting, 26 Sept., 53, Fitzroy Avenue. Following attended: Messrs. O'Reilly (chairman), Bray (vice-president), Dowling, Sholedice, Neale, and Hyland (hon. secs.). Secretary was instructed to deal with some correspondence. Club's patronage granted to Dublin P. and C.B.A., and Larne C.B.A. Secretary was instructed to prepare annual report and balance-sheet and submit same for approval. Date for annual general meeting to be fixed at next meeting.—J. R. HYLAND, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Very successful meeting, held Sept. 19, to hear lecture on the preparing and staging of Yorkshires for exhibition, by Mr. W. A. Cowgill (Bradford). Good attendance. The lecturer gave us in homely language his experiences on the moulting, feeding, and preparing for exhibition. He was bombarded with questions, to all of which he had a ready answer; and he was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks. The novice patronage shows open with Chopwell, and speculation is rife as to who will shine best.—T. C. CRAWHALL, Sec.

SOUTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, Sept. 22, Mr. Fairhurst presiding over a good attendance. We were honoured with a visit from Mr. Lythgoe, secretary of the Cage Bird Union, and Mr. Atkinson, district secretary, to explain the objects of the Union. Mr. Lythgoe, in a most able address, put before the meeting the objects of the Union, and in a most satisfactory manner answered questions. Mr. Atkinson in a plain and practical manner thrashed out the whole question and gave us a good insight of the work of the Union. After a vote of thanks to Messrs. Lythgoe and Atkinson, the members unanimously decided to affiliate with the Union. This concluded one of our most successful meetings. —FRED WASHBOURNE, Hon. Sec.

DERBY C.B.S.

Meeting held Derwent Hotel, Sept. 24, the night for paying up for Y.B. show, on Dec. 10 next, Mr. J. H. Roe judge. Sixteen classes. There promises to be a good show. We have bought two good cups, one for best Nor. and one for best yellow Crest (which replaces the one Mr. G. Colledge won outright); these are to be won three times, not necessarily in succession, before being won outright. Points cup has been won twice by Mr. Pegg; once more, and it becomes his own. Mr. T. Sandiford has promised a gold centre silver medal. Old bird classes number 18. Entry, 7d. each. We have made a good number of new members this year. We shall be coming out again with an open show another year at the present rate.—W. STEVENS, Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Very important meeting, held at Glossop, Sept. 18. Decided, to give patronage to Rochdale "Good Intent" and Rochdale O.C. for Lancashires and Lizards. A heated and animated discussion took place regarding patronage to L.C.B.A.; ultimately decided, to give L.C.B.A. our patronage for Lancashires and Lizards. So shows having our patronage are: Rochdale O.C., Rochdale "Good Intent," Manchester and N.C.O.S., Nottingham, and L.C.B.A., for both Lancashires and Lizards, and Scottish National for Lizards only. Mr. Fitton was elected a member, and Mr. E. Ollerenshaw proposed. There are still a few of our members who have not paid subscriptions; I hope they will forward them as soon as possible. The novices seem likely to play a very prominent part in coming competitions. Next meeting at Duke of Edinburgh Hotel, Oldham, on Oct. 15. Still room for a few new members.—J. RUKIN, Hon. Sec.

BOLTON WOODS v. MANNINGHAM

On Sept. 17th, Bolton Woods played the return match at cricket with Manningham C.B.A. We had a very pleasant afternoon's sport, but had again to succumb to Manningham's magnificent bowling. Bolton Woods got 32 all out; Manningham six down for 15 runs, but managed to rub off the score without losing another wicket. I am very sorry our wicket-keeper, R. Penny, got one of W. Firth's express deliveries on the bridge of the nose, but at the same time I am pleased he is not seriously hurt. An excellent supper was provided by the proprietor of Victoria Hotel, who, by the way, is our worthy president, and great credit is due to his wife and her assistants for the way the repast was served up, and for the way they attended to the wants of the 34 who sat down and enjoyed it. Although we lost again at cricket, I think the honours lay with Bolton Woods with the knife and fork business. Afterwards we had a "jollification," and sang to our heart's content with an occasional interval to talk about the coming shows. The following contributed: Messrs. Ambler, Cooper, J. Hutton, T. Boocock, L. Dykes, Butterfield, J. Ackroyd, and Mr. Lund played on the piano. A hearty vote of thanks to the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. H. Shepherd, closed the meeting. — M. SKIRROW, Hon. Sec., Bolton Woods C.B.S.

(Other Club Reports will be found on page 197).

SOUTHALL AND DISTRICT F.S.

Meeting held Sept 21. Members turned up in grand style, and a record entry for the season resulted, no less than 87 exhibits being on view. Mr Jeffery judged cage birds.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost any thing, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

"OUR CANARIES"

The Practical Book !

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN, General Canary Expert to "Cage Birds," assisted by over 100 of our present-day Leading Breeders and Authorities.

PART 6 is out To-Day. Secure it at once.

It Contains two most captivating coloured plates by Mr. H. Norman, depicting

Clear Yellow Scotch Fancy.

Price 6d.

Also two splendid art plates, many helpful and original illustrations, and 24 pages of most practical and absorbing reading matter ever issued to lovers of the Canary.

The information given in Part 6 is of the utmost importance at this period of the year. It deals exhaustively with the various Canary ailments and diseases. How to diagnose them and the best and most approved methods of their cure.

Such a budget of medical knowledge about Canaries as this part comprises has never before been produced, and constitutes a standard for this and all time.

Price 6d. from your newsagent or direct from us carefully packed in stiff card 7d. post free.

WHAT AN AMERICAN BREEDER THINKS OF "OUR CANARIES."

I cannot speak too highly in praise of this work. It is the finest work on Canaries that I have ever seen. I am surprised that it can be got out so cheaply. It seems to me that it should be in the hands of every Canary fancier. I cannot find words to express my appreciation for your work. Yours very truly,—A. W BESSEY, Sunnyvale, California.

A NEW PART — OF —
'Our Canaries'
OUT TO-DAY.
Part 6, October.

TO SAVE MONEY.

This work will be completed in 16 monthly parts, of which Parts 1 to 6 are now ready and can be supplied together, packed flat for 3/4 post free, or for 9/- prepaid we will supply the complete work in parts as published.

"CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS"

Contains all that is known on the subject.

This most comprehensive and clever work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House) and is being published in 8 monthly parts, at 6d. each. Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, Mr. H. Norman.

PART 6 is now ready. This part contains two magnificent coloured plates depicting

Price 6d.

Two art plates of equal artistic merit, a large number of interesting illustrations, and reading matter which forms a positive encyclopædia of intensely practical information on the subject of hybrid breeding.

Are you seeking a hybrid that has not up to the present been produced? Mr. Houlton gives in this part a number of possible crosses with both hard and soft bills from which an enterprising breeder is likely to produce some astonishing hybrids. To exhibitors this part is of the utmost value, as in it are given the scales of points used by the judge in placing his awards at shows.

Price 6d. from your newsagent or direct from us packed flat in card 7d. post free.

SAMPLES OF LETTERS WE RECEIVE.

"I must state that I am mightily pleased with 'CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.' I think it a very good book. I have learnt from it a lot of valuable information which I never knew before."—A. GOODALL, Rotherithe.

"Your books 'CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS' and 'OUR CANARIES' are beautiful and interesting, and worth far more than is charged for them. The plates alone are worth the money."—THOS. H. TAYLOR, Saltcoats.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit. the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Sixteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6 according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

in the trade would make such an offer as I have made for years past, viz., have any of my appliances on approval, test them side by side with similar articles from elsewhere, and if mine or not better value at lower price, smash them up and I will refund the whole of your money. For several years this offer has been made, but never yet has one article been broken up, nor have I ever been told that anything of mine came out of the test second best. This fact alone should prove to you who is the man to supply you with tip-top value at rock-bottom price. Clap nets made from ¾-inch mesh, genuine thread netting specially knitted for bird netting, 3 yards long, 6½ feet deep, 4 feet fly, 4/- pair; ditto, 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. Please note, these clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, each net guaranteed full measurement as stated, and are fitted up with staves, poles, pegs, hemp lines, and everything complete ready for immediate use; sparrow nets, fitted complete on 15 feet bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto, on 17 feet poles, 6/-; ditto on 19 feet poles, 6/6; Lark nets, 15 yards by 10 feet, 12/-; 18 yards, 15/-; 20 yards, 17/-; 25 yards, 21/-; 30 yards, 24/-; lined and geared ready for use. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, free from snarl or stretch, and strong as boat lines, 68 yards long, 1/4 each, post free. Loose netting, same as used in above clap nets, ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard, post free. This netting must not be confused with the thick American cotton netting, which is often sold for bird netting; mine is made from 60s. 3-ply thread, is very fine but strong, and does not show on the ground. Lark netting, 1½-inch mesh, 10 feet deep, 4d. yard, post free. The original Japanese birdlime, guaranteed strongest lime made, will hold any Hawk or Rook that flies, does not run in sun, will hold even in the rain, and leaves the feathers clean in all cases, ¼-lb., 6d., ½-lb. 10d., 1 lb. 1/6, sample 3d., all post free. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 inches long, 16 inches wide, 1/-; ditto, 18 inches long, 9d. each. These net traps are by far the largest and most effective traps on the market. They can be baited for Hardbills and Softhills at same time, call bird can be used inside them if desired, and will catch and hold uninjured any bird from Wren to Rook. Cannot get out of order, and so simple that any child can set them. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages, guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Single trap cages, 6d. each; double ditto, 1/- each; treble ditto, 1/3 each; all with separate compartment for call bird. Round or square-topped call cages, all wire tops and wood bottoms, close wired, coloured green, and made by cage-makers, not navvies, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. Store cages and everything required by catchers always in stock. Send stamp for printed price list and hints on net making. All nets thoroughly tested before sent out, and sent on approval on the distinct understanding that you get all your money back if not perfectly satisfactory in every way. All goods are of same sterling quality as before, as I have not sacrificed quality for price. Remember that a useless pair of nets are dear at any price, but a good pair will catch their cost in an hour or so. See following letters and then judge for yourself:—"20, William-street, Witham Grean, Boston, September 6th.—Sir,—Please send pair nets as follows. Two year ago I had a pair from ———, which were supposed to be rot-proof, but now they are completely rotten.—Yours, H. French." "Press Wood, nr. Whitchurch, September 5th.—Sir,—Pleasa send following. I was very pleased with your netting; it has made a good pair nets.—Yours, S. Gibbons." "2, Luke-street, Burslem.—Sir,—I am highly satisfied with clap nets and drinkers, so now pleasa send following.—Yours, J. Dean." "53, Liverpool-road, South Birkdale.—Sir,—Please send lb. lime. That I had from you last year was best I ever had. I have some from ———, but it is no use; I have missed over 70 in four days with it.—Yours, R. Makinson." "Mount Pleasant, Newburgh, Fife.—Sir,—I am again sending for bird-lime from you. I have got it the last three years, and it is best I ever had; no bother taking the birds off the twigs.—Yours, J. Panton." "56a, Napierston-terrace, Jamestown.—Sir,—Please send following goods. I had three net traps some time ago from elsewhere, but they are useless. Yours, E. Bridginan." "Jessop-street, Codnor.—Sir,—Please send following. The last nets I had from you worked a treat, and coma over like a flash of lightning. Just the thing for sharp birds.—Yours, P. Watson." Send your orders to the man who knows what is required for successful catching, and you will not be disappointed. I supply the leading professional catchers throughout the world. These are men who get their living by catching, and must have best appliances; so surely if I can satisfy them I can satisfy you. Remember, all on approval, cash or "Cage Birds" deposit system. See British Bird column for further advertisement.
